SANTA CLAUS KNOWS HIS EUROPEAN ROUTE

Ship Packed to the Brim With Presents For Fatherless and Destitute Kiddies

The United States naval Auxiliary steamship Jason will sail for Europe to-day with Christmas presents for children who have lost their parents in the war. The Jason is, at the time of writing, at the Bush Terminal docks, in Brooklyn, where longshoremen have been busy night and day loading her with thousands of packages, every one filled with something that will go a long way toward making some little unfortunate happy next Christmas morning.

Lieut. Comman.der C. E. Courtney, U.S.N., is in command of the Jason. Major Frank H. Lawton of the Quartermaster Corps, U.S.A., is in charge of the loading of the Jason, assisted by fifty coast artillerymen from Fort Hamilton.

The scenes at the Bush Terminal lately have suggested a big department store on the day before Christmas. There is a stream of wagons, expressmen, messengers, coming and going all the time. The great majority of the gifts are useful, such as li tle sweaters and petticoats, shawl jackets, woollen bonnets and cap warm stockings, shoes, and mitten Of course, there is a doll here an there and sometimes a toy engine something of that sort.

GURNEY-OXFORD

BUYING a stove is different from buying almost anything else. It is supposed to last a long time: it is in use three times every day—in fact, all day.

So buying a stove is not something to be decided off-hand. Cheapness is not the consideration. But—Quality is. A cheap stove cannot last. In reality it is not cheap. A stove that is a trouble to look after, that gives poor results, is a baneful thing. When the fire goes out, when the oven will not heat, or heats only in one or two corners, then cooking is drudgery. If a stove is extravagant in fuel, it should not have a place in your house.

The Gurney-Oxford is a truly remarkable stove. It is heavily made and thoroughly well put together. It is practically indestructible.

The Gurney-Oxford Economizer, fitted to the stove pipe, gives you complete control of the fire always. One turn of the handle dampens the fire down to a spark that consumes practically no coal when the fire is not in use. Turn the handle the opposite way and in a short time the fire is burning brightly again.

The fire is supported on grates that present a large surface to the air. There is no smouldering of coal without heat. This perfect combustion means two things: a bright, hot fire with the minimum of coal, and no waste in the form of clinkers.

The heat from the Gurney-Oxford fire box goes through a series of divided flues over and around the oven, not up the chimney. There is no unevenness of heat.

Every housewife knows the absolute satisfaction and pleasure that comes from a stove that never fails.

Let us show you the construction of it—the arrangement of dampers—the fire box and flues that have made it peerless among stoves, and the most cherished possession of thousands of Canadian women.

GERMAN SUBMARINE SINKS BRITISH CRAFT

LONDON, Nov. 12. — The little British torpedo gunboat Niger, which was built twenty-two years ago and has been used as a tender, is the latest victim of a German submarine. She was torpedoed yesterday morning in the Downs north of the Straits of Dover, and foundered immediately. The officers and crew were saved.

The Admiralty, in announcing the loss of the ship, says:

"The Niger, Lieut.-Commander Arthur T. Muir, was torpedoed yesterday morning in the Downs. All the officers and twenty-seven of the crew were saved. Four men were injured. It is thought that there was no loss of life.

"The Niger has been employed in semi-combatant duties."

The Downs is the name of a roadstead in the English Channel off the southeast coast of Kent, between Ramsgate and Dover.

The Niger had 810 tons displacement and a speed of nineteen to twenty knots. Her armament consisted of two 4.7-inch quick-firers, five 3-pounders and several torpedo tubes. She was used only for purposes of patrol.

A great deal of comment is being made at Deal on the fact that a small cruiser flying the Dutch flag had been lying in close proximity to the Niger for the last two days, and only put to sea during the morning. In view of the disaster local mariners very much doubt whether this vessel was Dutch or was only flying the flag of that country. They think it quite probable that this vessel was covering the movements of the submarine. Neither Lloyds' agent nor anyone else locally had been able to ascertain the name of this mysterious warship.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

The Russian Army Messenger says 100,000 Austrians and Germans have been killed, wounded or captured in the fighting in West Poland.

Reports reaching Pekin from Harbin, Manchuria, set forth that Russia is transporting her European prisoners of war as far east as Vladivostok.

King's Victor's Birthday.

ROME, Italy, Nov. 12.—This being the anniversary of the birth of King Victor Emmanuel, his Majesty, as usual, observed the occasion by a review of the troops.

The ship Tellus, chartered by the American commission for relief in Belgium, landed 1,200 tons of food in Rotterdam yesterday. Three thousand tons of foodstuffs have been rushed inland.

Certain points in Friesland and Groningen provinces, in the Netherlands, along the Ems and the Frisian Islands, have been declared in a state of siege, in order to prevent illegal exportation.

The London members of the Catholic Benefit Society have decided to fight the recent rate increase in rates ordered by the executive of the order, and have engaged counsel to take the matter to the courts.

Another bomb outrage committed by Chinese revolutionaries occurred yesterday at Canton, outside the residence of Gen. Chi Kiang Lung, who is in charge of the Canton district. Thirteen persons lost their lives.

In addition to two British ships, Turkish officials have seized two Dutch vessels at Smyrna. The Dutch consul protested, but the Vali alleged that the ships carried merchandise belonging to enemies of Turkey.

TWO HUNDRED WERE LOST.

Only a Few of the Crew of the Emden Survived Defeat.

LONDON, Nov. 12. — Capt. von Muller of the German cruiser Emden, which was attacked by the Australian cruiser Sydney and driven ashore in the Cocos Island, where she burned, and Prince Franz Joseph of Hohenzollern, one of his officers, are both prisoners of war, and neither is wounded, according to an announcement by the Admiralty yesterday afternoon.

The Admiralty adds that the losses on the Emden are unofficially reported as 200 killed and 30 wounded. No further details have been received.

The Admiralty has given directions that all honors of war be accorded to the survivors of the Emden, and that the captain and his officers are not to be deprived of their swords.

One exponent of naval strategy remarks that the Emden's career shows our naval strength in the Pacific at the outbreak of the war was not what it ought to have been.

DEER KILLS HUNTER.

William Hughie, Jr., Is Attacked While In Canoe at Buck Lake.

LINDSAY, Nov. 12.—Wm. Hughie, Jr., of Wilberforce, lost his life on Tuesday while on a hunting expedition with a friend at Buck Lake, five miles south of that village. A deer which he had wounded attacked him in the lake, upsetting his canoe and pouncing upon him while in the water. Salem Cornell, who was in the woods near the lake, heard him shout for help, and hurrying to the lake made heroic efforts to save the life of his companion. Not having another boat, he swam out, and finally succeeded in getting Hughie to shore alive, but he died shortly afterwards from the wounds inflicted by the deer and from exposure in the ice-cold water.

Mounted Police Cannot Enlist.

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—Capt. Fortescue, controller of the Northwest Mounted Police, who has returned from a trip to Regina, reports an announcement made by himself some time ago that members of the force cannot be spared to go to the front. Only those who are army and naval reservists have been allowed to leave the force, which has been recruited up to full strength.

FEAT OF LONDON SCOTTISH.

Eyewitness Describes Heroism of Territorial Regiment.

LONDON, Nov. 12. — The official press bureau issues descriptive account, which has been communicated by an eye-witness present with General Headquarters.

"On Saturday, Oct. 31," says the writer, "being ordered to take up a section of the firing line to support some of our cavalry, and having advanced to its position under heavy fire from the field guns, howitzers and machine guns, the battalion reached a point where further movement forward was impossible. There it maintained itself until dusk, when it proceeded to entrench.

"From 9 o'clock that night until 2 a.m. Sunday the Germans made numerous attacks on the Scottish line, all of which were repulsed by rifle fire. At 2 a.m. they made their great effort and assaulted the front and left of the position in great force. A considerable number succeeded by a detour in getting around the flank of the regiment. A large proportion of these were engaged by the companies in support and reserve, while others penetrated between the first and second lines of trenches and assailed our firing line in the rear.

"While the fighting with rifle and bayonet was going on, both in front and immediately behind the firing line, a reserve company still farther behind made repeated bayonet charges against the enemy who had got around and so prevented the entire envelopment of the battalion. Behind the firing line the scene of combat was lit by a blazeing house, which the Germans had set alight.

"At dawn its was discovered that large numbers of the enemy had, according to custom, worked around both flanks with machine guns, and a retirement was carried out. This was effected under a cross-fire from machine guns and rifles.

"Naturally in an encounter of this nature the battalion suffered a heavy loss, but, though unable to maintain its position, it acquitted itself with gallantry and coolness in a situation of peculiar difficulty."

OFFICIAL BULLETINS.

French War Office Says Germans Cannot Advance From Dixmude.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The French War Office issued the following statement last night:

"The enemy has continued all day his effort of Tuesday, without accomplishing any new result. He has directed against Lombaertzyde a counter attack which has been repulsed, and has made vain attempts to debouch from Dixmude on the left bank of the Yser.

"There is nothing new to report from the rest of the front."

The afternoon bulletin said:

"On our left wing the battle was resumed yesterday from early dawn, with intensity particularly marked between Nieuport and the Lys. In a general way our front has been maintained in spite of the violence and strength of the German attacks directed against some of our points of support.

"To the north of Nieuport we have been able to reoccupy Lombaertzyde and to advance beyond that locality, but toward the end of the day the Germans succeeded in getting possession of Dixmude. However, we are still holding on to the outskirts of that village along the Nieuport Canal.

"At Ypres, which has been solidly occupied, the fight has been very hot. The British troops, who have been attacked at many points, have everywhere halted the enemy.

"Along the rest of the front the general situation continues unchanged, save for progress made by our forces north of Soissons and in the regions west of Vailly, on the right bank of the Aisne. With the exception of these two positions the state of the weather has permitted only local activity, which was everywhere in our favor. Especially at Coincourt (three kilometres north of the forest of Parroy), we have particularly scattered a detachment of the enemy's forces."

JAPS GUNS FOR RUSSIA.

Heavy Artillery For Use In Poland on Way Across Siberia.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—A Daily News correspondent who has just arrived in London from Port Arthur, cables:

I obtained corroboration from two persons of an account given me of the passage of a quantity of Japanese heavy artillery, in charge of Japanese officers, over the Trans-Siberian Railway to Poland. Considerable secrecy was observed, at least two, and possibly more, long trains of Japanese guns have gone to the front.

One passenger train, consisting of half a mile of cars, left daily for the west, being hauled at a snail's pace by an antiquated locomotive. All the good locomotives in Siberia have been requistioned for service in Russian Poland, and an extraordinary collection of Belgian, German, Russian and American locomotives is attempting to cope with the traffic.

"Every bridge from Vladivostok to Petrograd is picketed by troops and tunnels are lined with sentries.

Russia's Captures.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—A Havas Agency despatch from Petrograd says:

"It is estimated here that during the recent fighting in east Prussia the Germans lost 70 per cent. of their officers. From Oct. 23 to Nov. 5, the total Russian captures amounted to 323 officers, 21,750 soldiers, 4 mortars, 52 cannon, 52 quick-firers and a large amount of munitions of war, including a quantity of provisions."

Canopus Not Sunk.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 12.—A rumor has been circulated here to the effect that the British battleship Canopus has been sunk off Coronel. This report is officially denied by the Chilean Admiralty.

Constantinople Plot Fails.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Athens says:

"It is learned that a conspiracy has broken out at Constantinople against the Germans and young Turks. The chief conspirators were arrested and shot.

"The population of the Ottoman capital, becoming very excited as a result of the Turkish defeats on Sunday, visited resentment on a number of German non-commissioned officers, whom they attacked."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 11.—Trading on the wheat market was quiet and prices erratic and following the trend of American markets a good export trade is being transacted in the south, altho well on in the day little or nothing in that line had been pulled off here. Some sales, however, were made last night. Winnipeg wheat opened unchanged to ½c lower, and shortly after had advanced ⅜c to ½c on the three months, easing off again previous to noon opening figures. Oats opened ⅛c to ¼c higher, and held fairly steady. Flax was weak, May opening 2c lower, recovering a cent later. Peace rumors had the effect of breaking prices considerably in the last hour of business. From a little after noon there was a steady decline until nearing the close, when prices were erratic. Wheat closed ⅝c to 1c lower, oats ⅜c to ½c down and flax 1c lower.

The cash demand for wheat was good for all grades and offerings fair. Exporters were buying moderately.

Deliveries thru the clearing house were: Wheat, 52,000 bushels; oats, 38,000 bushels; barley, 3000 bushels, and flax, 52,000 bushels.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 11. — Demand from over the cable for Manitoba wheat was lacking but local exporters were in the market and sales of 100,000 bushels of No. 3 were made at $1.16, and 50,000 No. 2 Northern $1.20 per bushel c.i.f. bay ports. There continues to be a good enquiry for ocean grain room, which is scarce, and the undertone to the market is strong.

A tramp vessel was engaged to carry a cargo of grain from here at 5s 6d per quarter, which is the highest rate paid this season to date.

There was some improvement in the demand for butter today, but the market on the whole is quiet. Demand for cheese is good both from local buyers and for export account and sales of some round lots were made. The stock of cheese on spot is light and held in few hands.

The trade in eggs is active, there being a good demand for cold storage stock for export account.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 837 cattle, 1149 hogs, and 33 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice steers sold at from $7.50 to $8; good butchers sold at $7 to $7.40; medium, $6.50 to $6.75; common, $6 to $6.25; light butchers' heifers, $5.50 to $5.75; choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; good cows, $6 to $6.25; medium cows, $5.25 to $5.75; canners and cutters, $3.50 to $4.50; bulls, $4.50 to $6.50, and an odd bull of extra quality will sometimes bring $6.75 and $7.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice heavy feeders, 900 to 1050 lbs., sold at from $6.50 to $6.75; good feeders, 800 to 900 lbs., $6 to $6.25; medium quality steers, $5.25 to $5.50; stockers, $3.50 to $5, according to breeding and color.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply of milkers and springers sold at a range of $40 to $100 each. The bulk of sales would be from $70 to $85.

Veal Calves.

Choice calves, $9 to $10; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $6.50 to $7.50; common, $5 to $6, and inferior eastern grass calves at $3 to $4.50.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, No. 11.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings today were 1300 cattle, 1300 sheep and lambs, 1050 hogs and 600 calves. There was no actual change in the condition of the market today, except that the feeling in it for good to choice steers was firmer, owing to the very limited supply coming forward, in fact, many butchers who are in the habit of buying nothing but these grades of cattle stated that it was impossible to fill their wants and that they would have to buy dressed beef. A large percentage of the offering consisted of common stock, for which the demand was slow, as buyers generally had ample supplies of such on hand, and consequently trade on the whole was quiet. A few good steers sold at $7 to $7.25 and fair stock at $6 to $6.50; while common brought $4.75 to $5.25 per 100 lbs. The demand for good butcher cows was fair and sales were made at $6 to $6.25, and the lower grades from $5 to $5.75, and bulls at from $5 to $6.50 per 100 pounds. The tone of the market for lambs was firm, owing to the continued good demand and the falling off in the receipts.

SALE OF REJECTED ARMY HORSES, UNION STOCK YARDS, TORONTO

The sale of rejected Army Horses at the Union Stock Yards today was largely attended by representative buyers from country parts to secure horses for feeding this winter. Eighty-five horses were sold, the price ranging from $40 to $145. These horses are all good and were rejected on account of difference in height and age. Today there were a number of good mares sold at $80 a head.

The sales will continue tomorrow at 10 o'clock and will run daily until the horses are sold.

GREETED BY FRIENDS

The dropping into our city of Mr. John Haslett, and old Belleville boy, after a continuous absence of thirteen years, was a great pleasure to many local friends. Mr. Haslett is now a resident of Winnipeg, Manitoba, vigorous as ever, and his jolly anecdotes of days agone, are refreshing to all who hear them. He stepped into The Intelligencer office this morning to inform us that he was not "Mrs" John, as chronicled in yesterday's edition, by error, but the same old John of days gone by. We were heartly glad to feel the grip of his firm hand, as were his hosts of old acquaintances.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"TALLASSE, THE INDIAN PRINCESS"

Not a Dry Moment from the Opening of the First Scene to the Closing Of the Play

A striking feature of Mr. Charles A. Macfarlane's brilliant Comedy Drama, "Tallasse The Indian Princess" which will be presented in Griffin's Opera House, Tuesday evening, November 17th under the direction of Mr. Wm. L. Doyle, is the mammoth strike in the lumber plant of Millionaire Robert Grant. How his vivacious niece, Miss Ethel Grant, carries the strike to a finish in favor of the employees, by making him believe he is ill, keeping him at home and manipulating the affairs of the office, including a fabulous bank account, is a revelation in the art of business strategy, culminating in a clean-cut victory for the working staff with shorter hours, and a material increase in salary. The defeat of the hard-fisted financier, at his own game, by a plucky young young woman, is worth witnessing. This is but one of the extremely interesting incidents in the thoroughly enjoyable play. Keep November 17th open for Tallasse.

AT THE FRONT

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractic permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractor is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect. (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

We can prove Chriopractic is right and applicable to your case. Think it over. Consultation free.

Pleasing Play In Local Church

Under the auspices of the Parish Guild of Christ Church a comedy-drama entitled "Untangling Tony", was presented last night in the Parish Hall to a large and appreciative audience. The entire production took place in two acts, the time being a morning in June and occurring in the library of Mrs. Ray's country house on the Hudson. "Tony", Mrs. Ray's only son, who was constantly getting in trouble, had become infatuated with a young actress, Miss Carolyn Carroll, who proved herself to be a very clever personage, and far too wise for "Tony's" relatives who tried in every way to untangle him from his written engagement to the young "pony dancer." After many touching scenes and complications, however, Miss Carroll was finally induced to give back the promise for a very large sum of money, and "Tony" was once more restored to his mother and to the young lady whom she wished him to marry, and who were deeply in love with each other. The play was all that could have been desired, and those taking part performed their duties so well that nothing was amiss to make it one of the best entertainments that have been presented to a Belleville audience for some time. The Hinchey orchestra rendered very suitable music before and between the acts, delighting the audience with "It's A Long Way to Tipperary" and all joining in and singing the chorus. Too much cannot be said about the Parish Guild, who undertook to get the play up to assist in the paying of the new lights for the church. That they were successful in securing a large sum was apparent by the full attendance, all of whom had every reason to be pleased with the evening's production.

Friendly Gathering And Presnetation

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Phillips, West Huntingdon, was recently the scene of a very enjoyable occasion, when about sixty friends and neighbors assembled to pay their respects before the leaving of the couple for their new home in Stirling.

After introductory pleasantries, the following address was read:

To Mr. and Mrs. Phillips.—Having learned with regret that you are about to leave our midst in the near future, and thus sever the ties that have bound us together for so many years, we, a goodly number of your friends and neighbors, have assembled here this evening to bid you adieu, and to spend a social evening with you before your departure for your new home in Stirling.

We know that words at best, give but poor expression to our deepest feelings, but we assure you, that you will be greatly missed from our community. As friends and neighbors we have always found you kind and obliging, and ever ready to reach out a helping hand in time of need. We assure you that your kindness and uprightness have been appreciated by us, and we, as a community, feel that we shall miss you, both in social and religious life, where you have always exerted your influence for good.

And now, as a slight token of esteem, we would ask you to accept these dishes, and in presenting them to you we express the wish that it may convey our heartiest good wishes for your comfort through life, and may it often remind you of the days spent at West Huntingdon.

May God grant you long life, health, happiness and prosperity in your new home.

Signed in behalf of your friend,
MRS. J. S. WILSON.
MRS. E. SNIDER.

Mr. Phillips replied in a few well chosen words, after which the ladies served tea, coffee and cake.

21ST BATTALION NEWS

Twenty-four recruits came from Lindsay on Tuesday morning and seventeen more came from Ottawa on Tuesday afternoon to join the 21st battalion. The battalion is now within fifty of being full strength.

Classes for the officers of the batalion were held in the Armouries on Monday. Col. W. N. Ponton, of Belleville, and Col. A. B. Cunningham both gave interesting lectures on military law. Capt. Prideaux, from five to six o'clock, gave a lecture on barracks regulations. Major Bennett, from 8.30 to 9 p.m. gave a talk on "The Principles and System of Military Training." Similar lectures will be given until the course is complete.

Major H. J. Dawson, O. C., 14th Regiment, opens a series of lectures to officers, N.C.O.'s and civilians of the 14th on Monday evening.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

BIG FRASER RIVER BRIDGE OPERATED ON NEW PLAN

The counter balance lift section of the big Grand Trunk Pacific bridge at Prince George, B.C., was raised for the first time this week to premit of steamers passing up the Fraser River. Although operated on a new principle of bridge opening the moveable section of the new structure climed skyward with the ease and precision of a modern passenger elevator.

The lift span is 100 feet lond and instead of swinging like most bridges, it lifts straight in the air. This is accomplished by electrically run machinery, assisted by counter-balance weights of concrete. The arrangement is such that one man simply touches a button and automatically the machinery is placed in motion which opens the safety lock, closes the six protection gates on the bridge and lifts the 100 foot section to a height of about 30 feet above the level of the floor of the bridge. This bridge over the Fraser River is also one of the longest steel bridges in the Dominion, being 2651 feet from bank to bank of the river. There are twelve steel spans and the lift, and fourteen concrete piers were necessary to sustain the weight of this mass of iron and steel. The railway right-of-way section of the bridge is 19 feed wide, while on each side is a 12 roadway for vehicular traffic.

EDMONTON TO HAVE PLENTIFUL SUPPLY OF NATURAL GAS

A remarkable flow of natural gas has been struck near Viking, Alberta, on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The well has been bored for the City of Edmonton and the gas will be piped to Alberta's capital, eigthy-two miles distant.

The well is 2,340 feet in depth, and is making 9,350,000 cubic feet per day. This well is only exceeded in size of flow on the continent by the one at Bow Island. It is stated that two wells of this capacity would supply all the power, light and heat required in the City of Edmonton.

Both Asquith and Bonar Law Predict Earlier End of War.

At Opening of British Parliament the Prime Minister Says Further Vote For War Credit and Men Will Be Laid Before Commons—War Will End Swiftly, When Germany Realizes She Must Lose.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—In a speech delivered in the House of Commons yesterday after the opening of Parliament, Premier Asquith declared that he doubted whether the war would last as long as some people originally predicted, but that it would last long was certain.

"However, the longer it lasts," continued the Premier, "the more the great resources and strength which the Empire possess will be available to fill the gaps, to replace the losses and maintain our position. The Empire is on trial and the experiences of the last three months have inspired us with the confident hope that the longer the trial lasts the more clearly will we emerge from it as the champions of a just cause."

On Monday next, said Mr. Asquith, David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will lay before the House of Commons his financial proposals, including the question of a loan for which the Government is going to ask the authority of the House on Tuesday. There will be a vote of credit of considerable dimensions, and an additional vote for men.

Speaking in reply to the speech from the throne, A. Bonar Law promised the Government the unflinching support of the Opposition in prosecuting the war. The Opposition leader said:

"We stand in a better position now than at the outbreak of the war. The only chance for victory of Germany was that she should win before the resources of the allies were available. She has failed, and failed on both fronts."

Bonar Law emphasized the importance of the financial position and said that already the economic effects were being felt in Germany. This was shown by the rate of exchange, and this would become more evident as time progressed. As soon as Germany realized that she must be beaten, he declared, economic forces would work with a pressure of which there was no conception.

The recruiting situation may lead to some steps towards compulsory service.

JAPANESE WARSHIPS SAIL.

HONOLULU, Nov. 12.—The Japanese battleship Hizen and cruiser Asama, which entered this port Tuesday for coal and provisions, left here yesterday for an unknown destination.

Rumor has it in the Japanese colony that the warships will rendezvous with a Japanese fleet nearing the coast of Chile, where it is supposed to be seeking the German cruisers believed to be in that vicinity.

Two Japanese merchantmen now at Hilo are due to be in that vicinity, in view of the sinking of the Emden, and the known presence of the remainder of the German Pacific squadron off the coast of South America. It is not believed the Hizen and the Asama will be detailed to convoy them.

Royal Albert Lodge Celebrates Jubilee by Generous Contributions to Funds

MONTREAL, Nov 11.—Royal Albert Lodge celebrated the completion of a half century of existence Monday night by voting $1,150 to be divided in varying accounts among the Belgian Relief, the Red Cross, and Patriotic Funds and the fund for the support of the Field Hospital inaugurated by Canada Lodge in London. It is expected by the custodians of these funds that the handsome contribution made by this lodge, with its membership numerically small, will prove an incentive to the large number of lodges all over the city to help out in the important and absolutely essential work these organizations are doing.

The pride of place in the division of the $1,150 is given to the Belgian Relief fund, in recognition of the fact that on this people fell the heaviest shore of the fighting from the first, and that from their brave resistance came a delay to the German advance which proved of great benefit to the Allies. They are accorded the sum of $500, the Red Cross Society $200, the Patriotic Fund $200 and the Field Hospital $250.

A CONGRATULATORY WIRE TO AUSTRALIA

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—Canada has expressed to Australia its admiration for the work of the cruiser Sydney, owned and manned by Australians, in sinking the German commerce-destroyer Emden.

This morning the acting Premier, Sir George E. Foster, through the Governor-General and the Colonial office, cabled the Commonwealth Canada's congratulations.

It is hoped that the Australian navy will continue the good work of clearing the Pacific, and it is also hoped that the Commonwealth's speedy battleship, the Australia may have the good fortune to overtake the German cruisers Schamhorst and Gneisenau, which are threatening the Pacific coast of Canada.

As a precaution against a possible German raid, the Canadian Naval Service officials have closed Broughton Strait, off Vancouver Island, to traffic. Crafts resorting to it hereafter will run great hazard.

UNSCRUPULOUS GAMBLER CAUSES RIOT AT U. OF M.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 12.—Special.)—About five thousand turbulent students gathered in front of the billiard hall owned by Joseph Reinger. Prompt action by the student council averted a repetition of the Star Theatre riot in 1908, when that place was demolished.

The students' anger was due to publication in an afternoon paper of a letter said to have been written by Reinger to H. P. Bailey of Somerville, Mass., in which Reinger tried to arrange with Bailey to enter into a deal to bribe Maulbetsch and Hughitt, Michigan players, in the game with Cornell on Saturday.

Talks by members of the Council induced the angry students to refrain from breaking down the doors, but not until several stones had been thrown through the windows.

Reinger went to the county jail early in the evening and asked to be locked up for the night for protection. The letter said to have been written by Reinger fell in the hands of Athletic Director Barthelme when a friend of his communicated with him today.

The scheme was evidently on of those old-fashioned frame-ups to double-cross a "sucker."

BRITISH WORKERS DROPPED

METUCHEN, N.J., Nov. 11.—Thirty-two Englishmen and Scotchmen employed by the German-American Stoneware Company, owner of the Phoenix Ceramic Works here, found their jobs "vacant" this morning. Last week Leonard Albrecht of New York, general manager of the company, came here and stated that prices paid for piecework would have to be cut.

There are more than 100 Germans and Austrians employed as laborers, while the piece work is done by the thirty-two Scotch and English. The reduction affected them only, and they promptly went on strike. Saturday, after a conference of the owners, who are Germans, a notice was sent out that the Scotch and English were no longer in the empoly of the company.

German Navy Losses to Date

Losses to the German navy inflicted by the British since the war began amount to twenty-two vessels, exclusive of one unnamed destroyer and the converted cruisers Trafalgar, Spreewald and Princess Alice. This is also exclusive of about two hundred merchantmen, with a total tonnage of about 200,000, captured or sunk by the British. The list of German naval losses follows:—

Dutch Take Charge Contraband Matter

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(Special.)—The British Government has already expressed itself as satisfied with the assurance given by the Neverlands Government that it would not permit the exportation from Holland of articles of contraband contained in the British list. In view of the additional measures taken, it is not likely that British warships will interfere with steamships of the Holland-America Line carrying contraband articles from this country to Holland. Whether contraband and conditional contraband articles carried in merchant vessels of American register, and consigned to private parties in Holland, will be interfered with is a matter upon which the British and French Governments must pass. There is a broad hint contained in the Dutch Government's statement to the United States, however, that it might be well for American shippers to have their cargoes consigned to the Neverlands authorities.

Contract with Steamship Company.

Under a contract made between the Neverlands Government and the Holland-American Steamship Line, the vessels of that line will not accept for cargo any private consignments of contraband or conditional articles. Private consignments of foodstuffs intended for private firms in Holland will not be refused landing when carried in American bottoms, but it is apparent that the Neverlands Government would prefer that the practice of having shipments of contraband and conditional contraband goods consigned to the Government should be followed.

Alasatian Predicts A German Collapse

Deserting After Forcible Enlistment, He Says Kaiser's Soldiers Don't Know the Truth

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The Liberte publishes an interview with an Alsation who, with twenty-five comrades, has just reached Paris after deserting from the German Army in Flanders. They formed part of a force of 135 Alsatians who were forcibly incorporated in a German infantry regiment at the time of the mobilization. The twenty-six survivors reached the allied lines last week.

The man who was interviewed said:

"At the outset of the war I was in Berlin on business. I tried to reach the frontier, but was seized in Cologne and assigned to a regiment, where my unfortunate compatriots were already. The Germans received us roughly, calling us 'French dogs.'

"The officers beat us and swore that we would be put in front in battle. They gave us no proper food for nine days. On the tenth we received some meagre soup and were told we would soon be killed.

"This was true, for when the regiment attacked the Belgians at Huy only forty-seven Alsatians survived, of whom the Captain shot two, alleging that they gave a signal to the enemy. That evening the officer came to torture us saying: 'You will be in front in this war until only one is left, Him I shall be delighted to shoot myself.

"During the subsequent weeks we suffered terribly. The Germans talked gloating about the allied disasters and the capture of Paris. Finally, while near Brussels, we learned of the Allies' victory on the Marne, which gave new courage. Those remaining decided to dessert, and we managed to reach the French lines."

When asked about the German soldier the Alsatian replied:

"They are machines, perfectly organived, who obey blindly without seeking to understand. All accept what the officers tell them without any suspicion.

"Until last week none doubted that Germany was victorious and the Allies were crumbling, and the war nearing a close. But the Yser slaughter was impossible to conceal, and caused profound discouragement and many desertions. Soon the whole western army will learn the truth. I foretell an utter collapse of the German morale followed by fatal disorganization and disaster."

Mines Scare Away Lobsters

England May Have to Import from Us--Heavy Loss in Fishing Trade

LONDON, Nov. 12.—It may be necessary in the near future for fish merhants her to import lobsters from America, as the presence of mines in the North Sea, so a well-known merchant said to-day, had greatly curtailed the supply, while the frequent explosion of mines has so greatly agitated the lobsters that it is believed they have deserted some breeding places there. It was said lobsters were susceptible to sudden shocks.

Recently English fishermen have in certain localities run across numernumerous surface mines in the North Sea and since then many have abandoned work, while the Government prohibits fishing in other areas. In the Grimsby fishing trade more than a score of trawlers have been lost as a result of mine explosions and the greater proportion of the crews drowned. There are half a dozen trawlers overdue. It is estimated that in boats alone the Grimsby trade has suffered to the extent of $600,000, most of which is borne by local insurance.

HURL 150 SHELLS AT BARRELS

German Airman Thought He Had Discovered a French Mortar

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The Geneva correspondent of the Temps says that the Swiss were greatly perplexed over a furious German cannonade near the frontier where French troops were entirely absent. A local newspaper explained the mystery.

A German airman saw a huge barrel of liquid manure which a farmer had left upturned in a field, and supposed it to be a French mortar. Thereupon a bombardment was begun, but was singularly ineffective, the barrel being unhurt, though 150 shells were fired from noon till midnight.

GERMANS USED TRICK GOT AMERICAN'S PASS

Mr. Charles A. Inglis, of Chicago, Gives Public "Peep Behind Scenes"--Spy Shot in London Used His Name

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Charles A. Inglis, the Chicago man whose American passport was found on the person of Carl Hans Lody, executed in the tower of London as a German spy, today told how he lost the paper in Berlin. His story implicates the German Foreign office and is being investigated by the State Department at Washington.

Inglis, who returned to his home here a few days ago, after a prolonged sojourn in Europe, was caught in Berlin when the war broke out. He took his passport to the German Foreign Office to have it approved. He handed it to a clerk, expecting that in due course of routine it would be returned to the American Embassy.

It failed to reappear, however. At the Foreign Office he could obtain no trace of it and after considerable delay he got a second document, which went through without a hitch and by means of which he was able to leave Germany.

Mr. Inglis declined to comment on the matter. The paper contained a description of Inglis which it is said also covered the features of the spy.

Queen's Students Military Spirit

University Furnishing Quotas for Engineers, Artillery and Transport Section

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 12.—Up to the present 80 members of the Queen's Engineers have volunteered for overseas service with the next contingent. About 250 students of Queen's are taking the military course in instructions now being given at the university. The students drill four night a week, and on Saturday afternoon, Captain Campbell is the instructor.

The recruiting for the battery being formed here has been completed, as 111 men have already been passed, and a sufficiently large number of officers have volunteered to bring the ranks up to required strength.

Lieut. Sparks is rapidly organizing a transport section in connection with the 21st battalion. The N.C.O.S. of the tion have been appointed, and a request has been placed in the orders for the names of men who wish to join.

AVALANCHE OF PROSPERITY

Credit Men Would Make the Dollar The World's Standard of Exchange

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12—An avalanche of prosperity was predicted today at a gathering of credit men of this city. The optimism of the speakers was tempered with conservatism. It was their opinion that while golden opportunities awaited the commerce of the United States to the south and across seas, it would be a mistake to rush headlong after business that now is and will be seeking our markets.

"Make the United States dollar the world standard of exchange," suggested Calvin J. Smyth, President of the Young-Smyth-Field Company.

The financial crisis in South America and elimination of most European manufactures, Mr. Smyth said, would enable us to educate foreign trade to our way of doing business and terms of payment.

"While it is true that Europe has reaped a rich harvest in South America," he concluded, "it also has paid the price in the present enormous losses, so that while we have been deprived of the trade these for years, we also have been spared heavy financial losses in this crisis."

HON. DR. ROCHE IS NOT TO STEP DOWN

Is Convalescent and Expected at Ottawa in Few Days

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—There is no truth in the statement sent from Ottawa that Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, was about to retire. Dr. Roche is now at his home in Minnedosa, Man. He is convalescent, and is expected at Ottawa in a few weeks.

TWENTY MEN ARE AFTER EVERY JOB

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—In the November examinations for the Civil Service, for 65 vacancies there are no fewer than 1,300 candidates writing in various cities. Of these there are 300 writing at Ottawa. Many of them being now temporarily employed in the departments. The large number of candidates is due to the business disturbances in the country owing to the war, and the desire to obtain permanent position under the government.

BEARS RESEMBLANCE TO KARL HANS LODY

Native of New York Object of Supervision in Brussels and London

LONDON, Nov. 12.—John William Southack, of New York City, complained today to the American Embassy of an alleged systematic espionage by the British secret service, of which he said he had been the subject since his arrival in London from Brussels on Saturday.

Southack bears a striking physical resemblance to Karl Hans Lody, who was yesterday executed as a German spy. He lives at the hotel where the German stopped, and believes that this was responsible for his trouble.

Southack says that when he was in Brussels he was threatened with arrest by the Germans, who examined him very closely, but his innocence was established through the intervention of the American passport with which the New Yorker is provided, he has papers written in German by American Consul in Germany, and he thinks that the possession of these documents strengthened British suspicion of him.

Southack said that he was born in New York, and was the grandson of an English Bishop.

CHINA ASKS THAT JAPANESE LEAVE

Now That Tsing-Tau Has Fallen Military Railroad Is Not Needed

PEKING, Nov 12.—A Japanese military report received in Peking sets forth that the casualities to the Japanese army before Tsing-tau was something over 1,500. But according to reports from Tsing-tau itself, received in Peking before the German wireless ceased operating, this number does not represent the correct total. The British lost twelve men killed and sixty-one wounded.

The Japanese recital indicates that the German losses were small for the reason that the German garrison surrendered as soon as the Japanese stormed the trenches.

The Foreign Office has notified the Japanese legation that it now expects the removal of the Japanese military railroad and the telephone and telegraph lines in Shantung Province in the vicinity of Kiao-Chow.

200,000 MEN FROM CANADA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—The cable announcement that Great Britain is to raise an army of 2,000,000 men is taken to mean that Canada's contribution will also be very heavily increased and that from 150,000 to 200,000 men from this country may be sent abroad by the end of 1915, if the war should last that long. All supply contracts are being awarded on the basis of that number of recruits. It is also understood that the men will be sent forward in smaller quotas as expeditiously as possible instead of as contingents.

LADY OTTER HAS PASSED AWAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—Lady Otter, wife of General Sir Wm. D. Otter, died at St. George Apartment this morning.

Newspapers are experiencing as much trouble in naming the present war as a young couple finds in naming the baby.

War Stimulates Canada's Trade

Mineral Products Hitherto Received from Germany May be Found Here

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—The war may indirectly give a stimulus to certain lines of mineral production in Canada. There are certain mineral products used by Canadian manufacturers which were obtained from the Germans, who had a monopoly of them. This trade being now entirely cut off the Mines Department received many inquiries regarding the possible extent of resources of these minerals.

The department at once set to work to find out these things and its investigations will be embodied in a report to be issued at an early date. It is probable that many miners and mineral products will be produced in this manner and what was before considered an unprofitable industry through a European monopoly will be turned into a paying business.

COLLEGE GIRL HAZED

Initiation Into Marietta Sorority Puts Her on Sick List

MARIETTA, Ohio, Nov. 12—A rigid investigation of a sorority of Marietta College is likely as a result of indignities which are alleged to have been heaped upon Miss Ethel Sweeney, daughter of an oil operator here, during her intiation into the organization a few nights ago. Miss Sweeney says she was told to go to a temperance meeting, march up in front of the speaker, and shout "Booze" in his face. When she refused to do this, she received severe treatment at the hands of the young women.

During the next session Miss Sweeney says she was taken into the attic of a Marietta home, and she was stripped of part of her clothing and severely beaten. As a result her back was rendered black and blue and in places the flesh was cut. To finish the work iodine was applied to her face in sufficient quantities to remove the skin, and then a second and third coating followed. Miss Sweeney is now under a physician's care.

BRAZILIAN SHOWS GOOD INCREASE

Gains in Both Gross and Net Earnings For September are Reported

TORONTO Nov. 12.—Brazilian Traction earnings for September (given in Milreis) are—gross 6,096,940; increase 68,862; operating expenses 2,552,380; decrease 401,988; net earnings 3,544,560; increase 170,850.

From January 1 gross 55,170,088; increase 1,346,273; net 31,674,128; increase 2,704,071.

The company states that the earnings are given in Brazilian currency in consequence of fluctuations in exchange rates. The rate varied greatly during September, but the company's remittances were made at about 14 pence.

Richly Dressed Shot in Heart

Buffalo Police Have Mystery Killing on Hand--New Clues

BUFFALO, Nov. 12.—A well dressed woman of about 24 years, was found dead on Swan street, near the New York Central Terrace Station, early to-day with a bullet in her heart. A revolver was picked up within twenty feet of the body, but the police are not convinced that it was a case of suicide.

The woman wore a green dress and a black fur coat. In a hand bag which she still clutched in her hand, were a gold watch, some money and a few sheets of tinted note paper.

The body was still warm when it was found by the station watchman. No one in the vicinity had heard a shot fired. A train had passed about fifteen minutes before the discovery of the body, and it is believed that the murder or suicide occurred then.

MAD DOG LICKED HANDS OF OWNERS

TORONTO Nov. 12.—The Provincial health authorities are treating two suspected cases of rabies. A man and his wife who came in from Weston yesterday stated that their dog had been acting strangely and had licked their hands. Neither had been bitten, but there were abrasions on the hands of the man and woman and the skin was becoming sore. A veterinary pronounced the dog as rabid and the couple are being treated.

WIRELESS MAN'S STORY OF THE EMDEN'S END

The Latter Marine's Narrow Escape From Being Left Upon Cocos Island--Whole Staff Under Guard -Sydney Gets Down to Business

KEELING, Cocos Island, Nov. 13.—(Special.)—At 6 o'clock on Monday morning a four-funneled cruiser arrived at full speed at the entrance to the lagoon of Direction Island, where it located the cable station of the Eastern Telegraph & Cable Company. Our suspicions were aroused, for she was flying no flag and her fourth funnel was obviously a dummy one, made of canvas. It was the German cruiser Emden. The cruiser at once lowered away an armored launch and two boats which came ashore and landed on Coral Beach three officers and forty men, all fully armed and having four Maxim guns. The Germans at once rushed up to the cable station and, entering the office, turned out the operators, smashed the instruments, and set armed guards over all the buildings. All the knives and firearms found in possession of the cable staff were at once confiscated.

A general call was sent out just before the wireless apparatus was blown up. The whole of the staff was placed under an armed guard while the instruments were being destroyed, but it is only fair to say that the Germans, working in well-disciplined fashion under their officers, were most civil. While the cable station was being put out of action the crew of the launch grappled for the cables and endeavored to cut them, but fortunately without success. The electrical stores were then blown up.

At 9 a.m. we heard the sound of a siren from the Emden, and this was evidently the signal to the landing party to return to the ship, for they at once dashed for the boats, but the Emden got under way at once and the boats were left behind.

Looking to the eastward, a warship, which we afterwards learned was the Australian cruiser Sydney, was coming up at full speed in pursuit. The Emden did not wait to discuss matters, but firing her first shot at a range of about 3,700 yards, steamed north as hard as she could go.

At first the firing of the Emden seemed excellent, while that of Sydney was somewhat erratic. This, as I afterwards learned, was due to the fact that the Australian cruiser's range-finder was put out of action by one of the only two shots the Germans got home. However, the British gunners soon overcame any difficulties this may have caused and settled down to their work, so that before long two of the Emden's funnels had been shot away. She also lost one of her masts quite early in the fight. Both blazing away with their big guns, the two cruisers disappeared below the horizon the Emden being on fire.

Only two German shots proved effective. One of them failed to explode, but smashed the main range-finder and killed one man. The other killed three men and wounded fourteen.

Each of the cruisers attempted to torpedo the other, but both were unsuccessful, and the duel proved a contest in hard pounding at long range, with the Sydney the winner.

FROM THE WAR ZONE

(Canadian Press Special)

STEAMER AFIRE BOUND FOR AFRICA

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A Central News despatch from Rome says the steamer Citta di Savona has sent out wireless S.O.S. calls saying she is on fire 150 miles off Cattania. She has 500 soldiers on board, bound from Massowa, Africa, for Italy. Two steamers have gone to the assistance of the distressed vessel.

ANOTHER MILLION TROOPS FOR THE BRITISH

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The supplementary estimates provide for another million men required by the British Government during the year ending March 31st, introduced in the Commons today. This brings the total army, not including Territorials, to 2,186,400 officers and men.

ESTIMATE OF BRITISH CASUALTIES

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The British casualties up to October 31st, were approximately 57,000 men of all ranks. This estimate was given by Premier Asquith in the Commons today in reply to a question by Edward T. John, the member for East Denbighshire.

KAISER'S WARSHIPS TAKING SUPPLIES

VALPARAISO, Nov. 13.—The German cruisers Leipsig and Dresden steamed into Valparaiso harbor this morning and at once started taking on supplies.

GERMAN WARSHIPS ENTER VALPARAISO

VALPARAISO, Nov. 13.—Two warships of German nationality just steamed in Valparaiso harbor. The names are not yet ascertained.

CRUIRER KARLSRUHE HAS BEEN CORNERED

LONDON, Nov. 13.—It is rumored in shipping circles that the German cruiser Karlsruhe has been cornered.

DIXMUDE WAS TAKEN AT A TERRIBLE COST

A Bavarian Regiment in Three Repeated Charges Was Annihilated--Allies' Casualties Were Also Very Heavy

PARIS, Nov. 13.—(Special.)—The Germans won Dixmude at a frightful cost, according to a wounded officer brought to Paris today.

"The German attack began Saturday morning," he said. "Monday evening, when I was wounded, the enemy were still fighting fiercely for the possession of the town. The attack was fearfully violent and our losses were heavy, but the Germans again suffered wholesale slaughter. My brigade exterminated 3,000 in an hour.

Advanced Three Times

"Here is one incident I witnessed: A Bavarian regiment advanced upon our trenches with standard displayed. When 300 yards distant we blazed a terrible fire into them. They retired, reformed and advanced again. We allowed them to come within 100 yards this time before raking them, again driving them back.

"A third time the regiment advanced having lost two-thirds of its effectives. I shouted the order, 'Let them come; cease fire.' Then, when they were 200 yards away, I gave the order to fire. Ten minutes later not a man was left standing of the entire regiment."

ENEMY SUFFERS SEVERE DEFEAT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PARIS, Nov. 13.—A Petrograd despatch says the Germans suffered severe defeat beyond Kalicz, losing twelve heavy guns and many killed.

SHANNONVILLE YOUNG MAN IS SHAMEFULLY TREATED

A report comes to The Intelligencer to the effect that John Lewis, a young man residing at or near Shannonville was, a few evenings ago, shamefully assaulted by a band of miscreants, receiving injuries that may prove permanent. If the information is true the nature of Mr. Lewis' persecution is nothing short of atrocious. The affair has caused intense excitement in that locality.

Immigration From Europe Stopped

General Slackness of Trade Caused Many to Become Public Charge

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—Immigration from Europe to Canada has stopped entirely. The European war is the chief, but another reason is the fact that immigration to Canada at the present time has been discouraged by the Government.

There is some immigration from the United States, and some emigration to that country also, but for the most part this is simply the coming and going of mechanics and labor men, who move back and forth according to the demand for labor.

Deportations to Great Britain are unusually heavy. The general slackness of trade has caused many immigrants to become a public charge. Deportations to the enemy countries of Europe are obviously impossible at the present time, although many of these nationalties have become a charge on the public.

There is some immigration from Europe to the United States, but it has fallen off to less than half the usual amount.

ALLIES MAINTAIN POSITIONS

PARIS, Nov. 13.—An official announcement this afternoon says:

"From the sea coast as far as the River Lys the fighting has been of a less violent character than on previous days. Several efforts of the Germans to cross the Yser Canala at the western outlet from Dixmude and other points were checked. Generally speaking, our positions have been maintained without change.

"To the East and South of Ypres the attacks of the enemy were repulsed at the close of the day, at different points on our line and that of the British army.

"In the course of the last few days of foggy weather our troops have not ceased to make progress little by little."

FAILED TO REPAIR THE LIEGE FORTS

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A despatch from Maastricht, Holland, says the Germans have failed in their efforts to repair the forts at Liege, captured by them early in the war. Liege as a military point has become useless.

UNUSUAL ACTIVITY IN KIEL CANAL

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A Times despatch from Copenhagen says military men there attach great importance to present unusual activity in the Kiel Canal.

FRENCH TORPEDO BOAT SINKS GERMAN SUBMARINE

PARIS, Nov. 13.—A despatch from Dunkirk says a French torpedo boat has sunk a German submarine off the Belgian coast.

WOULD CRUSH THE RUSSIAN INVASION

A Copenhagen despatch says reports from Berlin state that the Kaiser has visited Breslau and promised the inhabitants to crush the Russian invasion. The German main armies are concentrating at Breslau.

SURROUND PRZEMYSL IN FINAL ASSAULT

A Petrograd despatch says by the defeat of the Austrians and Germans in Galicia, a large Russian army which has been released, has surrounded Przemysl in a final assault.

EXPLOSION IN A MATCH FACTORY

Canadian Press Despatch)

DRUMMONDVILLE, Que., Nov. 13.—An explosion in the match factory here early this morning killed Pierre Doucet, probably fatally injured Oscar Boisvert and seriously injured several other employees. The factory was burned to the ground.

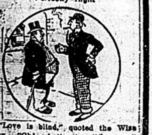
About the Cross

Although the cross is the symbol of Christianity, and it was used as a religious emblem long before the Christian era, it was not always an object of veneration, nor the insignia of religion. The ancients used the cross as an instrument of capital punishment and centuries before Calvary death on the cross was considered so ignominious that only the lowest malefactors were crucified. The Egyptian obelisks bear impressions of the cross, and the Babylonians and the Assyrians used the cross. The coins of the early Phoenicians were stamped with the cross.

Gas Used in Soap Making

In several European countries the hydrogen gas which is a by-product of the manufacture of oxygen is utilized for hardening oils in the soap industry.

Perfectly Right



"Love is blind," quoted the Wise Guy. "Oh! what's the difference" exclaimed the Simple Mug. "Most courtships are promulgated in the dark, anyway."

The Knowledge-seeker

Little Patrick's paternal parent was busy suspending pictures on the plaster walls of the best parlor. Pat watched his father with silent admiration as nail after nail was successfully hammered into position.

Then the inevitable happened. Patrick's father's thumb made a dent in the plaster, and was, for a brief second, hidden entirely from view by the head of the hefty hammer. The flow of eloquence that poured from the father's mouth was a revelation to the watchful lad. With a gentle sigh he stole softly from the room and went out for a stroll.

He had not gone far when he happened on the minister diligently hammering nails into his fence.

Patrick immediately became absorbed in the good man's labors.

"You seem interested, my little man. Are you fond of carpentering?" asked the clergyman.

"No," answered Patrick shortly.

"Then why do you stand there watching me at work?"

"Cause I want to see what a preacher says when he swipes his thumb!" answered Patrick.

Women Knit Between Acts

Work for Relief Taken up by Mrs. Walsh's Guests in Washington Theatre

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Prominent Washington women set a new fashion when they brought forth knitted material during the intermission in the performance at the Columbia Theatre. Those who participated in the knitting bee were in the box of Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, widow of the Colorado millionaire. Mrs. Walsh and her guests, who were Mrs. Lindley M. Garison, wife of the Secretary of War, and two other ladies, knitted away unconcernedly. Secretary Garrison and another man were in the box.

The things that Mrs. Walsh and her guests knitted are to be contributed to the supplies to be sent to Belgium for the relief of suffering people.

VITAL FORCE

Disease germs are on every hand. They are in the very air we breathe. A system "run down" is a prey for them. One must have vital force to withstand them. Vital force depends on digestion—on whether or not food nourishes—on the quality of blood coursing through the body.

DR. PIERCE'S
Golden Medical Discovery

Strengthens the weak stomach. Gives good digestion. Enlivens the sluggish liver. Feeds the starved nerves. Again full health and strength return. A general upbuilding enables the heart to pump like an engine running in oil. The vital force is once more established to full power.

Year in and year out for over forty years this great health-restoring remedy has been spreading throughout the entire world—because of its ability to make the sick well and the weak strong. Don't despair of "being your old self again." Give this vegetable remedy a trial—Today—Now. You will soon feel "like new again." Sold in liquid or tablet form by Druggists or trial box for 50c by mail. Write Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

GERMAN OFFICER GOT $50,000 TO BLOW UP SHIP IN SUEZ CANAL

LONDON, Nov. 12—The Chronicle to-day describes the feature of the offense of Lieut. Mors, a German officer, who was recently imprisoned for life for espionage at Alexandria, Egypt.

Mors was despatched to Egypt five years ago and succeeded in being appointed a lieutenant in the Egyptian general army. His real mission, according to The Chronicle, was to foment a local rebellion among the various Nationalist Princes and to get them to agree to assist him. When war broke out he was recalled to Germany and was sent back to Egypt in a fortnight as medically unfit for military service, but actually to blow up a steamship in the Suez Canal so as to block the passage of reinforcements from India and Australia.

Major-General Sir John Maxwell, commander of the British forces in Egypt, heard of the plot and had Mors arrested. In his possession were splendid maps of the Suez Canal and instructions how to sink vessels there. Two dynamite bombs were found in his lodgings.

At his trial, according to The Chronicle, Mors confessed that he received $50,000 for the work entrusted to him. He gave a list of his associates and they have been arrested.

MANITOBA COLLEGE STAFF IS FULLY EXONERATED

WINNIPEG Nov. 12—The storm has pretty well blown over in connection with charges launched at the Manitoba Synod that Manitoba College was turning ministers that were left to flounder in doctrinal uncertainty. The allegation was made by Rev. A. D. Reid of Port Arthur, who based them on statements made to him by Manitoba graduates. Mr. Reid also charged that the Presbyterian Church in Canada was honeycombed with Unitarianism.

The Synod appointed a committee to deal with the charges and today it reported back completely exonerating the college staff from the insinuations. Dr. C. W. Gordon was Chairman of the committee, which took the matter up with the college staff. It was found that the doctrinal teaching of the college was safe and sound.

MAKE BIG RADIUM FIND

Streak of Pitchblende Discovered in Colorado Mine.

IDAHO SPRINGS, Col., Nov. 12.—A streak of radium ore valued at many millions of dollars has been discovered in the Jo Reynolds mine near here. This is the district in which are the mines of A. I. du Pont.

The payrock is pitchblende, the highest grade ore from which radium is extracted, and differs altogether from the carnotite deposits of western Colorado and Utah. Pitchblende is found in considerable quantities only in Austria, in Gilpin County, and near Idaho Springs.

The Jo Reynolds vein is about 18 inches wide, and samples brought assay very high in radium values.

LATTIMER'S CUT-RATE DRUG STORE

Mystery Surrounds Wounding.

KINGSTON, Nov. 13. — William Foster, of this city, was found lying unconscious upon the floor of his apartment with a gash on the side of the head which had produced concussion of the brain. He was removed to the hospital for an operation, and his condition is critical. No one appears to know how Foster came to be injured, but some ugly rumors are afloat, which cannot be cleared up until he regains consciousness and makes a statement to the police. One story goes that the man got into an altercation with a German sympathizer over the war and was felled with a bar of iron.

CRISIS NOW AT HAND

A Few Days Should Show Decisive Result in Flanders.

Repeated Terrific Assaults of German Picked Forces Fail to Dislodge the Handful of Allied Defenders of Canal From Nieuport to Ypres—Germans Are Destroying Bridges on Frontier—Allies May Attack.

LONDON, Nov. 13. — A critical stage in the battle in West Flanders has now been reached, and the next few days, if not hours, should produce something more decisive than has yet occurred.

The Germans have continued to attack with large forces at their command the British and French, who hold the line between Dixmude and Ypres, but with the exception of the capture of Dixmude, which occurred Tuesday, and some little progress around Ypres, they have not been able to make any material advance.

In fact, the French official report issued yesterday afternoon says that all the attacks have been repulsed. The Germans are no longer utilizing green troops in this region, but have brought up the pick of their army, including some Prussian Guards, who attempted an offensive movement against the British, but were defeated decisively.

Both sides express satisfaction with the progress of the battle, Berlin says that the attacks of the allies have been repulsed and that their own attack is making headway, while in London and in Paris it is felt that so long as the allies can hold the line of the canal from Nieuport to Ypres their position is a strong one.

In France, from the northwest to the southeast, there have been engagements of lesser importance in which, according to the French report, Gen. Joffre's armies have succeeded in gaining ground and strengthening their positions. The Germans continue to destroy bridges and railways in Belgium, but with what object remains a secret.

All bridges leading to Belgium have already been destroyed and barricades of tree trunks have been thrown up across the roads of the east Belgian frontier, to prevent the escape in Holland of deserters as well as to compel the Belgian peasants to remain in their country.

The correspondent of The Daily Express in Flanders is authority for the statement that there have been numerous instances of the Germans killing their prisoners.

The British troops at Ypres are ably supported by the Indian troops. A report is current that the Kaiser has ordered that all the Indians and other Moslem troops serving with the allies, when captured, shall be sent to Constantinople and made to serve in the Turkish army.

To relieve the enormous pressure on the allies along the Belgian frontier, the French, it is expected, may attempt an offensive movement against Lorraine or Alsace, their armies having been greatly strengthened. The German attack is expected to reach its maximum when they have brought up from Liege all their heavy siege guns, the transportation of which has been delayed by rains.

Considerable uneasiness is noticeable at the German headquarters at Ghent. It is reported that 100,000 troops have passed through the town. It is declared that they are on their way to Ypres, where the fighting is heaviest, but as they come from Bruges and Ostend it is considered more likely that they are bound for Brussels.

The Governor of Ghent was suspended Wednesday by Col. Montenfel. It is learned from a reliable source that the municipality of Ghent has been given notice that it had until noon yesterday to pay the Germans $50,000 as pay for the officers and men of the German forces stationed in that vicinity.

The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche states that the Germans have arrested five of the leading citizens of Lokeren, including the burgomaster, as the result of the alleged discovery of rifles belonging to the civic guard in the town hall.

The Belgian Minister of War has received information from Belgium that last week twenty-six trains filled with German cavalry passed through Brussels, coming from Ghent and going towards Germany.

When a man hasn't got much sense he thinks a quarrel is an argument.

VOLUNTEER FOR SERVICE TODAY

You're longing to fight in the battle,
Yet waiting for something to do;
You fancy the future is holding
Some wonderful fortune for you;
But while you are waiting, the moments
Are rapidly passing away;
Oh, comrade, awake from your dreaming
Volunteer for service today.

Go march side by side that dear comrade
You know who his left behind
A mother, a wife and children
That father so loving and kind;
To uphold the flag of freedom,
Against Prussia's Military sway
And by his action is calling
Volunteers for service today.

Oh, never dear comrades standing waiting,
Be willing to do what you can;
The noblest service is needed
To fill out the Empire's great plain;
Be willing, Be strong, Be daring,
And go forward into the fray,
Then return to dear old Belleville
Glad that you volunteered today.

Joseph Elsmore Belleville.

PATRIOTISM CONTINUES

Caring for Consumptives in Peace and in War. Xmas Seal Compaign for Muskoka Free Hospital Atrady Commenced.

"Think of the power of the One Cent Seal." "Every Seal a bullet in the fight against Consumption."—Buy them, use them, help on the good work!

Another reminder of the approach of the Xmas Season—the Xmas Seal Campaign has begun. Over $50,000 has been raised by the Campaigns of of previous years—but the need is greater than ever this year. Every cent is required to keep the doors open to care for some 200 sufferers. Such work cannot stop—these are the wounded in our midst. Whatever we do for those from home, it is the essence of quiet dutiful patriotism to look after those at home. May the little Xmas Seal come through with flying colors.

DOOMED MAN DIES OF FRIGHT

TRENTON, N.J., Nov. 12.—Angelo Cerciello of Newark was to have died in the electric chair for the murder of his wife, but the strain of thus awaiting death proved too much for him. Less than six hours before the time fixed for his execution he dropped dead in his cell.

Doctors said Cerciello was simply scared to death.

AT THE FRONT

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractic permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractor is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect. (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

In connection with the articles dealing with foot and mouth disease, the Canadian Veterinary Director-General for two years past makes no mention of foot and mouth disease, nor has it been reported that during the recent months any cases have been found in Canada. The case for Canada may be put even more strongly, according to information from the Department of Agriculture. Up to the present Canada is, and always has been, immune from foot and mouth disease; there is not a single case within the borders of the Dominion, and it has always been the claim of Canada in negotiating with the United States that no embargo should be placed on Canadian cattle for that reason—Gazette.

PIMPLES FOR THREE YEARS

MARVELOUS ZAM-BUK CURE

Mr. Willard F. Allen, of 258 Pleasant St., Halifax, N.S., writes: "Up to a year ago my face was a mass of pimples, which, besides being extremely embarrassing, caused me a great deal of pain. I used all kinds of tonics and salves, also remedies prescribed by my physician. These were of very little benefit to me. My face would clear somewhat at times, and I would think that I was on the road to a permanent cure, and then the trouble would return and the pimples and sores be worse than ever. This condition of affairs continued for about three years.

"One day I happened to see an account of a remarkable cure of eczema by Zam-Buk; so I thought I would try Zam-Buk also. I sent for a box, and the results were so very pleasing that I procured a larger supply. I persevered with Zam-Buk for three months, and at the end of that period my face was cleared of all unsightly pimples.

"I attribute my recovery solely to the use of Zam-Buk, as I did not use any other remedy during the time I was using it. As my case was of long standing and very obstinate, I consider my cure a wonderful triumph for Zam-Buk, and would heartily recommend it to anyone afflicted as I was."

If you are suffering embarrassment and pain from pimples, boils, eczema, ulcers, running sores, or any skin trouble, you too should apply Zam-Buk.

At all druggists and stores, 50c. box 3 boxes 1.25, or postpaid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price. Refuse substitutes. Send this advertisement, name of paper, and 1c stamp for free trial box.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Tallasse The Indian Princess

On the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 17th at Griffin's opera house, Belleville is to have one more evidence of the versatility of its citizens, when Mr. Chas. A. Macfarlane, of Belleville, presents his own three act comedy drama, "Tallasse, The Indian Princess," by all Belleville talent, under the proper professional direction of Mr. Wm. L. Doyle, of Belleville. Surely this is a line-up of which the people of Belleville might well be proud. But there are two other more important reasons why Griffin's opera house should be filled to overfloking on next Tuesday. The first and most important reason is because of the good cause for which the production is being staged, namely for the benefit of our brave boys who have gone forth to fight the Empire's battles and to secure for us at home everlasting peace and security.

Lastly, Tallasse, is a play which, as an entertainment, is worth far more than the prices asked, and is two solid hours of sobs, laughs and surprises. It is a wholesome clean drama of the home and of the prairie, chuck full of excitement and comedy, and played by a cast of Belleville's best talent, drilled to professional finesse.

As the tickets are going very rapidly, those who desire to see the play, should secure sittings at once.

MILK IN THE COCOANUT BETTER GET AFTER IT

Great Opportunity For "Made-in-Canada" Products—European Products Are Now Shut Out

While the nations of Europe are at war, the people of Canada have a duty to their own land as well as to the Mother Country. While regretting the issue forced on the Mother Country and giving contingents to England's aid, let us also give all the help we can to ourselves. Canada's own big problem is that of a country which has imported much—and suddenly finds those importations cut off.

List No. 1

Some of the things we have been importing from Germany, Austria, etc., to the value of $38,000,000 per annum:

Analine dyes, baskets, books, boots, buttons, brooms, brushes, canned goods, chemicals, chinaware, clocks, clothing, collars and cuffs, cotton goods, combs, curtains, colors and dye stuffs, cutlery, dolls, drugs, earthenware, embroideries, electric apparatus, feathers, furs, fringe and tassels, gloves and mitts, glass and glassware, guns, hats, hosiery, hops, jewelry, knitted goods, leather goods, lace, labels, locomotive tires, machinery, millinery, mineral waters, musical instruments, optical instruments, paints and colors, papers, pencils, perfumes, pianos, pharmaceutical preparations, piano parts, piano key ivories, pipes, purses, ribbons, rubber goods, seeds, shoes, laces, silk knitted and other goods, silverware, soaps, spirits, stockings and socks, time recorders, tobacco, toilet articles, tools, toys, underwear, woodenware, woollen goods, watches.

List No. 2

Some of the things mentioned in List No. 1 that we now make in Canada in competition with the manufacturers of Continental Europe:

Baskets, boots, books, buttons, brooms, brushes, canned goods, carpets, chemicals, collars and cuffs, cotton goods, clothing, combs, colors and dye stuffs, cutlery, dolls, drugs, earthenware, electric apparatus, feathers, furs, glass and glassware, gloves and mitts, guns, hats, hosiery, jewelry, knitted goods, lamps leather goods, labels, machinery, millinery, mineral waters, musical instruments, optical instruments, paints and colors, paper, perfumes, pipes, pharmaceutical preparations, pianos, piano parts, purses, ribbons, rubber goods, seeds, silverware, silk knitted goods, soaps, spirits, stockings and socks, time recorders, toilet articles, tools, underwear, woodenware, woollen goods.

A Great Advantage

The Canadian manufacturers of the articles in List No. 2 have now an advantage greater than any tariff wall. The competition of Continental Europe has been withdrawn and will remain withdrawn until the war is over at least. Let the Canadian manufacturers make the most of the situation. And let the people of Canada rally round our manufacturers and help them make the most of it, for we need them and the things they make as never before.

The immediate result of the European war, in Canada, was a check to business.

The second result will be to stimulate business—if we keep our heads, and go after business.

We believe every Canadian will follow this timely advice.

RAYS OF SUNSHINE THROUGH THE CLOUDS

Some Improvement Already Noticeable in Canadian Industries—Better Times Ahead

The sudden breaking out of war caused many to "run to cover." Like the chicken on whom the rose leaf fell, some of us became a prey to fear and were ready to declare "the sky is falling."

Now the vision is clearing, our alarm has fled, we have recovered our poise and our courage. We are seeing, also, our opportunity. Swiftly and almost overwhelmingly has come to us the perception of the fact that the competition of Continental Europe has been taken away. We are faced with a condition and an opportunity both tending to our advantage as a country of industry, agriculture and trade. Good times are ahead, if Canada and Canadians see and prize the present opportunity for enlarging their industries and trading. We must be careful. We must have courage.

There are men who never admit failure, though they do sometimes acknowledge they make a wrong guess as to their ability.

A NEW YORK JOURNAL ON GERMANY'S THREAT

A proclamation issued by the Germans at Brussels specifically threatens, according to a despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Amsterdam, to stop the distribution of food by the American relief committee among the unemployed until the Belgians go to work. In response to this sweeping intimation the New York Herald says editorially: "If it is true, as cabled from Amsterdam, that Germany has threatened to prevent the American relief committee from distributing food and other supplies to suffering Belgians, the defenders of "Kultur" in this country will have more defending to do.

"Germany's attitude toward and action in Belgium is a crime against civilization. Having conquered and overrun a country with which they had neither quarrel nor excuse for a quarrel, the Germans have stripped the country of not only its valuables, but of its food supplies, and at the time neutral nations are compelled in the interest of humanity to undertake the task of saving the Belgian people from starvation Germans continue their pillage.

"Now to their vandalism they add threat of preventing the distribution of supplies to the needy. The spectacle is one that not even the greatest admirer of German prowess can view with any feeling save disgust."

INDECENT EXPOSURE

Is it not about time that the police awoke to the fact that there is running at large in our city, a public nuisance in the form of a human being, who is making himself obnoxious to respectable residents? Time and again, we are informed, complaint has been made that an individual, in various sections of the city, has been manoeuvring in a most indecent manner, but up to the present has been allowed to roam at his free will. From what The Intelligencer has ascertained, it behoves our citizens, and the police in particular, to be on the alert for the miscreant, and see that he is properly housed. Will the Chief of Police kindly give this matter his undivided attention, or if the executive head of the police department will call at this office the whole matter will be laid bare before him.

CURRENT COMMENT

It is apparently settled that no general law to suspend mortgage payments will be enacted in Ontario, says the Toronto News.

One thing that will impress all concerned is the statement that something like a hundred and forty members of the English House of Commons, more than a fifth of the whole, are absent on military duty, some in France or Belgium, some on service at home.

Toronto News asks: "Who were the miserable scoundrels that hinted at a general election while the patriotic Liberal politicians were eschewing all political controversy and standing by the Empire with aching feet and backs almost broken with the burden of patriotism?" Has our contemporary lived all these years next door to The Globe without ascertaining the inside facts?

Because a woman of Butler County, Kentucky, whipped her daughter-in-law, night riders paid a visit to her home with the avowed intention of beating her and all her folks. In the fight two of the riders were killed and another badly wounded by the intended victims. If all the lawless ones in old Kentucky are so opposed when they go on their periodical rampages, the sport of night riding is likely to become most unpopular.

In the November examinations for the Civil Service for 65 vacancies, there are now no fewer than 1,300 candidates writing in various cities. Of these there are 350 writing at Ottawa, many of them being now employed in the departments. The large number of candidates is due to the business disturbance in the country owing to the war and the desire to obtain permanent positions under the Government.

An effort to start an agitation for a six-hour work-day in all organized trades was made at the first business session of the American Federation of Labor's convention in Philadelphia,

A SERIOUS INDICTMENT

The Law Department of Ontario has been taken by the Toronto Globe under its especial care and direction. For months past it has devoted no little attention to what it alleges to be a lack of duty in the administration of the law of the Province, until it declares it has become so flagrant that "One prominent delinquent after another knows when to take warning and "ride away in costly styles, making the law ridiculous by ostentatious defiance." Adding that "The public will be afraid to invest money or to take part in any "extensive enterprise if there are valid and obvious grounds for "the fear that the law will afford no protection against the wrecker or "swindler." Not satisfied with bringing this serious indictment against the law officials of the Ontario Government, it strengthens its charges by declaring that "We see the wealthy and influential defying the law with an "impertinent confidence that could not be equaled abroad in the worst "periods of laxity during recent years."

If such a state of affairs exist, readers in different parts of the world where the Globe is read, and believe its utterances, must come to the conclusion that Canada has become a lawless country, unworthy the position she holds as a part of the British Empire, which is noted for the administration of justice, knowing neither rich nor poor when the law is violated.

The mere assertion without proof that such a state of affairs exists in Ontario, though made by the Globe, is no evidence of its truth.

We venture the assertion that there is no foundation for the charges made. If there has been such failures to enforce the law when violated, why are not the cases cited, so as to enable the public to form an opinion of them and judge of the justice of the condemnation of those who are charged with having failed to do their duty? Political vengeance of the character leveled at the Attorney General's Department, of Ontario, will, unless evidence is forthcoming, fail in its object, and recoil upon the heads of those who make them.

Come, Mr. Globe, tell your readers who these "prominent delinquents" are who "ride away in costly style making the law ridiculous by ostentatious defiance"; and who the "wealthy and influential" are that "you see defying the law with impertinent confidence" that "could not be equalled abroad in the worst periods of laxity during recent years." Let's have the cases to which you refer where the Attorney General's Department has proved recreant in its duty, or stand convicted of recklessly, for political purposes, charging public officials of criminal neglect of duty.

The Globe's suggestions and instructions to Premier Hearst as to what he should do in the premises will no doubt receive that consideration which it deserves. It is not difficult to divine what that will be.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters wants the convention to exert its weight to establish the six-hour day in all trades, upon the ground that the eight-hour day is enervating and excessive. All will be surprised at the modesty of this demand. An increase of wages should have been added to the demand for a reduction in the hours of labor.

A bomb was exploded alongside the Bronx County Court House, New York, late Wednesday night. The bomb, apparently, was a powerful one, as it did considerable damage to the building, within and without, and the shock of the explosion was felt blocks away. The bomb, in the belief of the police, was intended for County Judge Louis D. Gibbs, who has presided recently in the cases of a number of foreigners convicted on "White Slave" charges. Judge Gibbs, who, at the time of the explosion, was preparing to leave his chambers in the building, escaped injury.

The News extends to The Globe its distinguished consideration and begs to say that it was glad to have Mr. Bourassa's assistance in defeating the Trade Agreement with Washington, just as it would cheerfully accept his support for civil service reform, for judicious protection of Canadian industries, for a system of rural credit and more liberal appropriations for scientific agriculture or for any other measure of public policy which this journal advocates. And so were tens of thousands of others, who were tired of the corrupt crew then governing the country.

Lend to one who won't repay, and you will provoke his dislike.

We hope that the affair in Europe will not go into extra innings.

Stand up for your rights if you expect others to take a back seat.

WAR NOTES

Boston Transcript: "Lord Fisher, who succeeds Prince Louis of Battenburg in the British Admiralty, is a naval idol in Great Britain. He is different from Lord Charles Beresford, another idol, in that he inspires confidence rather than enthusiasm. It has been said that the British soldiers followed Wellington with confidence and the French soldiers followed Napoleon with enthusiasm. The comparison extends to Fisher and Beresford.

Canadian volunteers will be particularly interested in the news that General Cronje, who surrendered at Paardeburg, at which fight they took a leading part, is in command of the loyal South African forces against General De Wet.

A despatch from Brussels to the London Times says: "There are hardly any German soldiers left in Brussels. All except the necessary garrison have been sent to the front. Refugees from the coast say the artillery work of the British warships is terribly accurate. A wounded German officer declares that only eighty-four men of his regiment of 1,000 are alive after the fighting on the coast."

According to Lord Kitchener, Great Britain has 300,000 troops at the front, 1,250,000 in training and must have a still larger force in order to earn victory. In proportion to population Canada has almost the correct number on Salisbury Plains ready for the front, but we should have at least 200,000 men drilling throughout the Dominion. The recruits themselves are available, but it takes time to get the rifles, the ammunition and the equipment.

Catholic Register: "You are too British," writes a subscriber to us. We are just as British as we have always been, and as we will, please God, always be. We cannot well understand how anyone can be too British now

WOMAN NERVOUS, WEAK AND DIZZY

Could Not Do Housework for Family of Three. Vinol in a Short Time Made Her a Strong Well Woman.

Fort Edward, N. Y.—"I was in a run-down condition, nervous, weak and dizzy, so that in doing the housework for my little family of three, I would be all exhausted. I tried cod liver oil emulsions and three or four other medicines without benefit. Finally a friend told me about Vinol and I tried it. I soon felt better and now it has built up my strength, I have no more nervous or dizzy spells, and can do all my housework without getting all tired out."—Mrs. ELMER GLIDDEN, Fort Edward, N. Y.

Women are so active nowadays, and so much is expected of them, that they constantly overdo and suffer from headaches, backache, nervousness and kindred ills. Vinol is a most efficient strength creator for such women.

It is the medicinal elements of the cod's liver, aided by the blood making and strengthening properties of tonic iron which makes it so far superior to all other tonics.

If you are in this condition try Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails.

Department Store Bulb Bargains

(Fred W. Adams, Toronto, Ont.)

At this season of the year spring flowering bulbs are in keen demand, but it is doubtful if the demand will be as good as in former years. With economy being practised by the public at large to an extent little thought of in the past, the one aim uppermost in the minds of a majority of the people is to make their dollars go the limit in purchasing power. One of our large stores here, the T. Eaton Company, have been quick to recognize this condition of affairs, and if one was to believe everything in their advertising, the problem of economic spending would be solved.

As most florists are aware, department stores sell bulbs at cheap prices, but it must be borne in mind that they are cheap bulbs, so cheap, in fact, that if a grower had to derive his living from the forcing of such stock he would soon come to the conclusion that he was engaged in a profitless pursuit.

A few days ago I had a customer of many years in my store in reference to her annual purchase of bulbs. She was determined to economize as much as possible. One of the varieties wanted was that grand early tulip Preserpine. The price quoted was $2.75 a 100, which is as low as this particular variety in the best quality can be sold for. This quotation was met with the assertion that the Eaton Company advertised them at $1.95 a 100. In order to avoid any suspicion that our price was unreasonable the offer was made to meet any outside price on this variety provided it was true Proserpine and not a substitute which was quoted at the lower rate.

In order to satisfy myself as to the genuineness of the Eaton Co.'s price, I went down and purchased two dozen of their Proserpine at twenty-five cents (which I am sending to the editor of of The Canadian Florist, together with samples from Steele Briggs, Carter's, Rennie's, Keith's, and Jennings & Co.'s, which are all true to the name). On examination I was satisfied that the bulbs I bought were not Proserpine, and I hunted up the manager, Mr. Wolfe, and drew his attention to the fact that they were advertising stock which they could not deliver, and ventured the assertion that they could not sell best quality Proserpine at that price. He questioned my ability to distinguish between the varieties by a mere examination of the bulb, and I pointed out to him that this variety has a longer neck and lighter skin than the ordinary tulip bulb, and that it did not require a professional to note the difference.

Mr. Wolfe still maintained that the stock was as represented, and I left him, but not before I had scrutinized very carefully the general assortment of bulbs for sale. As far as these were concerned I have never seen a more miserable or undersized lot. Coreuses at five cents a dozen were as hard as bullets, and only here and there among the lot was there any sign of a healthy crown. Hyacinths labelled as First Size would be considered a poor sample of bedding size. Those marked Romans were miniature Dutch. Tulips at nine cents a dozen were positively dear, all of it with one or two exceptions was second size stock about the size of a twenty-cent piece.

What amazed me more than this collection of rubbish, I would call it, was the number of people who were anxious to buy them. There is no denying the fact that they reach a large number of people who have no idea what they are buying, and I consider it is the duty of every florist and seedsman to let their customers know that there is a vast difference in bulbs, and that the better kind are always the cheapest in the long run.

WAR

I was conceived in passion, hatred, envy, and greed, born in the morning of antiquity and have a genealogy whose every page drips with the red blood of murdered innocence. I respect neither the feebleness of gray hairs, the helplessness of infancy, nor the sacredness of virtue, and walk ironshod, ruthlessly and impartially over the form of the weakling or the form of the giant.

I paint the midnight skies a lurid glow from the burning homes I have ravaged, and I turn peaceful scenes of auroral beauty, where God's own creatures dwell together in amity, into a raging hell. I set neighbor against neighbor in daily battle, and I incite the brother to slay his brother. I make puppets of kings, princes of paupers, courtiers of courtesans, and thieves of respected subjects, and empires melt before my breath as does mist before the morning sunlight.

I make of religion, fanaticism; the heathen I make a fiend incarnate, and of all men I make playthings devoid of reason and justice. Through intrigue I make the intelligent powerful, the unscrupulous wax fat on the spoils of blood-won victories gained by others, and the less learned suffer for their own ignorance. Famine, want, and misery follow in my path; I lay waste green fields and still the hand of industry; I pillage the land of its resources but contribute nothing of benefit to mankind, leaving pestilence to stalk ghostlike in my wake and complete the work of destruction.

I lay a heavy tribute upon my most loyal subjects for the maintenance of my establishment; I squander the vitality and lives of those who serve me faithfully; yet return to the world nothing but ruin and ashes. The baubles of fame I confer on some are the empty shells of false standards wherein the license to commit murder and rapine is held to be the insignia of glory by a mistaken civilization. I can offer no excuse for my having come into existence, nor can I give one plausible reason why I should cease to be, other than that so long as men wielding influence are permitted to gratify their selfish desires and ambitions at the expense of the many who carry the burdens and endure the suffering, that long will I continue to exact my toll of sorrow, devastation and death. For I am pitiless—devoid of all feeling; I fear neither God or man; I am amenable to no law, and I am in myself the law, and the last resort. I AM WAR!

REPUBLICS WARNED.

Britain and France Will Not Tolerate Infractions of Neutrality.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Ecuador and Colombia have been warned by Great Britain and France in emphatic terms that the allies will not countenance further violations of neutrality by these South American states.

After making strong representations through the British and French Ministers at Quito and Begota, the British and French Governments considered the matter serious enough to communicate to the United States Government in view of possible complications that might arise.

The notes to the American Government cited no specific violations, but expressed the hope that Ecuador and Colombia would be impressed with the value of maintaining strict neutrality, in which the United States had given so signal an example.

Kaiser's Son-In-Law at Front.

PARIS, Nov. 13. — A despatch to The Temps from Bordeaux says that Ernest August, Duke of Brunswick, son-in-law of Emperor William, who was reported to have been wounded in action, left Brunswick on Nov. 5 and returned to the front.

"These pies look very fat this morning," said the proprietor of the lunch counter.

"Yes, sir," replied the boy attendant. "I was swattin' flies on 'em this mornin', sir."—Yonkers Statesman.

At gold mines William Green could mock;
At get rich schemes he joked.
He put his coin in watered stock,
And that's how he got soaked.

Educational Value Of Good Books

Few there are who realize the extensive knowledge that can be gained through an occasional reference to what might be termed commonplace books. There is probably not a family in Belleville that does not possess at least one such volume that is seldom referred to, or that is possibly concealed in some hiding place where it is not even seen, except at such times as there is a general housecleaning. Run over in your mind the titles of some of these books in your own home. Doubtless you have a copy of the Bible. Do you ever refer to it as a historical work or as a work of reference? You know Abraham Lincoln said: "No library is complete without two certain books—the Bible and Shakespeare; hardly a quotation used in literature that is not taken from one of these works,' and Lincoln was a self-educated man—a man of practical learning, whose words of wisdom will be handed down to posterity.

The Bible thus becomes a work of more than ordinary educational value to the everyday citizen; to men and women, boys and girls; old and young alike. The Intelligencer is now offering the New Illustrated Bible a volume that is unique in that it completely illustrates the subjects which each picture accompanies. The illustrations alone cost $50,000. It is possible to embellish a book without actually illustrating it. This Bible is not merely embellished; it is truly and accurately illustrated. Other Bibles there are containing pictures; none other in which the individual texts are actually illuminated, as though by the touch of inspiration. Comparison is impossible, for this new Bible stands alone—there is no other of its kind. Therefore, praise of this superb new book means no disparagement of the many excellent editions published heretofore. Nor is this superiority surprising; for more than 100 of the world's greatest artists working under the advice of archaeologists and historians of wide renown have contributed the choicest products of their skill and genius to produce this grand triumph of artistic beauty and perfection in historical detail. These pictures are not mere reproductions of mediaeval frescoes and more or less familiar modern photographs, inserted at random; they have been specially made, in the light of exact knowledge, to illustrate selected texts in accordance with the matured beliefs of the greatest living scientists. It must be remembered that this new Bible also contains every essential special feature that gives peculiar value to the best of ordinary Bibles, such as marginal references, descriptive helps, and beautifully colored maps.

Get this Bible by clipping certificates from The Intelligencer. Today's certificate is printed on another page, and the plan is fully explained there.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE BLIND

Many of the friends of the blind, and many of the blind themselves, do not know that, in the city of Toronto, is located the largest circulating library of embossed books in Canada. Already several thousand volumes in all systems of raised print now in current use among the blind and comprising works on every important subject and in several languages, are loaned absolutely free of charge to any reputable blind person anywhere in the Dominion. If a person is not now familiar with any system of raised print, he can be taught to read with his fingers by the help of the nails, provided he has has the previous knowledge of reading.

The Canadian Free Libraby For th Blind enjoys the confidence of the Ontario Government, of the Toronto Social Service Commission and of the Ontario Libraries Association. It is therefore a thoroughly reliable institution and any blind person may become a borrower of its books, while his sighted friend may gave his verbal and financial support to it in the full assurance that he is becoming identified with one of the most useful necessary activities of the social life of Canada.

Though thousands of our brave boys have gone to war, never forget that thousands of patiently brave Canadians sit in darkness and call for light. Every book in raised print is a lamp help; to light it by sending a contribution to the Canadian Free Library for The Blind. Treasurer's address: 37 Balmute St., Toronto, Ont.

Grand Trunk News

PROVIDE MANY SCHOOLS FOR SETTLERS CHILDREN ALONG G.T.P. IN WEST.

The educational department of the Government of British Columbia is taking active measures to cope with the rapid development in the territory recently opened up by the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Mr. G. H. Gower, Educational Inspector, has been actively engaged during the past month in inaugurating schools between Prince George and Prince Rupert.

Since leaving Prince Rupert, Mr. Gower has established schools at Hayesport and Copper River on the Skeena one at Endako and one at Stellaco, five miles east of Endako; one at Vanderhoof, and one at Mapes, about eighteen miles south and east of Vanderhoof. He has also recommended the opening of a school at McAllister, about twelve miles north of Soda Creek.

"My trip," said Inspector Gower, "has been a revelation to me. I have travelled along the line of the G.T.P. stopping at all points where schools are located and visiting others where requisitions have been made to establish schools, and everywhere I was impressed with the splendid valleys of agricultural land, the development of which is going on apace. The Nechako valley particularly appealed to me, and there is bound to be a tremendous trade developed."

LITERARY NOTES.

BACK TO THE LAND

This excellent sixteen page pamphlet issued by the Board of Trade of the City of Port Arthur, contains much profitable information tabular statements of farm productions, the manner of land development, the surety of high prices, and the comparative independence of those who till the earth. The little book also advances many schemes which may be carried out with financial assistants, and a suggestion or two as to forming of co-operative societies. On the whole, Back to The Land, is worthy a place in the home of every agriculturalist. Secure a copy by applying to the Board of Trade, Port Arthur, Ont.

like all other young people, is crazy about dancing --and that is where the Victor-Victrola comes in just fine.

"I used to have lovely times at little informal dances at our friends' who have Victrolas, but when it came to inviting them to our house—well I was a little bit ashamed to do it.

"You see, our music couldn't even be compared with theirs, and besides, some one always had to miss dancing in order to play for us, so when father finally got the Victrola, we were all delighted.

"Now we have the latest dance music, played by the very same orchestras that are so popular with society. We know it is always just right for dancing, because Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, who are the last word on the dance question, personally superintend the making of every Victor Dance Record.

The LAPSE of ENOCH WENTWORTH

By ISABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Wolvertons"

ILLUSTRATIONS by ELLSWORTH YOUNG

COPYRIGHT, 1914 BY F. G. BROWNE & CO.

Enoch stared at the rest of the play through moody eyes. When the curtain fell on the second act Zilla Paget appeared on the stage alone to meet uproarious applause mingled with jeers and hissing. Wentworth gripped the arm of his chair as he watched her sweep the house with a triumphant gaze. A brand of hate which has the red of murder in it tore at his heart. He rose, tossed his coat across his arm, groped beneath the chair for his hat, then he slammed down the seat and went out. On the stair he met an usher.

"Mr. Wentworth," cried the boy. "I've been looking everywhere for you. Mr. Oswald wants to see you in his office about some bookings."

Enoch descended without answering him. He paused once to push his arms into his coat, but he did not enter the office; instead, he turned and walked down Broadway. The rain had ceased, the sky was clear, and the stars were shining. He tramped on heedlessly. He realized suddenly that he was far down town in the business heart of the city. Overhead hung the sign of an old-fashioned hotel. He opened the swinging doors and walked to the desk.

"I want a room," he said peremptorily.

"What price?" asked the clerk.

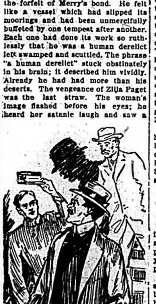
"I don't give a damn about price. I want a room where it is quiet, where there is a good bed, and where I can sleep as if—as if I were dead."

CHAPTER XXII.

Facing the Situation.

Enoch had never been a drinking man. The sight of drunkenness had frequently aroused in him a species of stomachic revolt; therefore mere physical repulsion had done much to keep him from one form of debauchery. During the days of utter desolation that followed his sister's departure he turned to whiskey as the sufferer from insomnia seeks relief in an opiate. It did not bring ease, however, either of body or mind. He went about in a dull, half-sickened stupor, hating himself and the world. One night, in a lonely room of the hotel where he had taken refuge, he sat in the darkness for hours thinking; then like a flash he saw himself. It seemed to him that for a second a shutter—somewhere, perhaps in some remote lobe of his brain—had flashed open and he saw not only his present condition, but his future. It was not a pleasant phantom.

A half-empty bottle of whiskey stood at his elbow. He stared at it for a minute with a scowl, as if it were an actual enemy. A feeling of nausea crept over him. He lifted it, carried it to the wash-bowl, and poured the liquor down the drain-pipe. Then he laid the empty bottle on a tray and set it outside the door. He filled his pipe with tobacco, pulled a chair to the window, sat down, and stared at the lights of the city. He fell into one of his introspective moods. He began to trace backward every step he had taken since the day he exacted the forfeit of Merry's bond. He felt like a vessel which had slipped its moorings and had been unmercifully buffeted by one tempest after another. Each one had done its work so ruthlessly that he was a human derelict left swamped and scuttled. The phrase "a human derelict" stuck obstinately in his brain; it described him vividly. Already he had had more than his deserts. The vengeance of Zilla Paget was the last straw. The woman's image flashed before his eyes; he heard her satanic laugh and saw a fleeting vision of his picturesque golden-haired loveliness as he had slammed the door and left his home.



"I've Been Looking Everywhere for You."

Wentworth gritted his teeth savagely, then he looked at his watch. It was close to midnight. He went downstairs, paid his bill, ordered a carriage, and drove to the Waverly Place house. As he stood fitting the key noiselessly into the lock his heart beat tumultuously for a second or two. He opened the door stealthily and passed through the vestibule. The house was still and a lamp burned dimly in the hall, as Jason always left it until his master returned. He hung his hat on the rack, stole upstairs to his own room, switched on the electricity, and glanced about. He locked the door and undressed swiftly. Ten minutes later he was sleeping the death-like sleep which follows complete exhaustion of brain and body.

He did not wake till noon. Jason answered his ring. The old negro entered with hesitating steps.

"Good morning," said his master. "Jason, do you know how a guest lives in a hotel when he wants to be alone, absolutely alone? He eats in his own room, his mail is brought to him, he goes and comes without a word being spoken to him by anyone in the house. You understand?"

"Yassir."

"I wish to have that sort of service in my home until—your mistress returns. If it is necessary, engage another servant to look after your duties. I want you to wait on me exactly as I have explained. You can do it, Jason?"

"I'll be mighty glad to do it, Marse Enoch."

Wentworth returned to the theater and took up his duties as if nothing had happened. His associates greeted him with their usual courtesy; still he felt as if a drop curtain had fallen between him and the world where his daily labor lay. Women and a few men shrank away from him even while they seemed trying to be polite, sometimes kind.

Zilla Paget made no secret of her change of residence. She flaunted the news of it abroad and Wentworth's lapse from the conventionalities of life made a nine-days gossip in theatrical circles. It even agitated moralities which had been esteemed lenient. The reason back of the intensity of feeling was not, in every case, shocked virtue, but Dorcas was loved, while the Englishwoman was held in universal contempt and hatred.

Curiosity threw out its dragnet among the people in the company, who watched Wentworth go and come among them day after day, treating Miss Paget with an aversion which was colder than anything doled out to her by the players at the Gotham.

"I tell you, it's a pose with Wentworth," said John Breen, the man who played the janitor.

"Pose nothing," answered his wife scornfully. "Wentworth hates Paget worse than any of us do, and that is going some. I've watched them together. She knows he hates her, even if she is living alone with him under the same roof. He's afraid of her. I've seen it in his eyes when he didn't know anybody was watching. If I don't miss my guess there's blackmail or something like that back of it. She's fit for it. Wentworth's a goat in some way that we're not on to."

It was several days after his return to business before Enoch met his sister. He heard in a casual way that she had rented an apartment and had taken Alice Volk with the two children to live with her. Their first encounter was an ordeal to each one. They came face to face in the foyer. Enoch said "Good morning" and held out his hand. The girl held it for a second, looking up into his face with eager wistfulness. The ghost of a smile broke over Enoch's haggard face, then he glanced backward as the glass door behind him slammed, and Zilla Paget came rustling in.

He turned brusquely and entered his office. The jaded look in his eyes had changed to shuddering hate. Dorcas passed out to join the throng on Broadway. She felt chilled and lonely. She did not realize that the sun was shining.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Parting of the Ways.

"All I have left to say, Wentworth, is this—we have come to a crossroad and you must choose between two paths: either cut that woman out of your life or don't expect to take your place among decent citizens."

There was a look of discomfort and anxiety in Grant Oswald's pale, high-bred face while he spoke, although his voice was emphatic. Enoch did not answer. He moved restlessly in his chair once or twice, lifted a program that lay on his desk, and ran his eyes through its pages. Oswald paused as if waiting for a reply.

"I can't understand your infatuation, Wentworth," he went on; "the woman degenerates every day of her life. God knows," a bitter tone crept into his voice, "I feel culpable for even bringing her across the ocean. Then I ought to have let her go when I spoke of it a month or two ago. She was bound to do mischief, only I never dreamed that you would fall into her clutches. I warned you."

Enoch sat in sullen stillness, with his eyes fixed on a calendar which hung above the desk.

GERMAN LOSSES HUGE REACH SIX FIGURES

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Times today has the following specials from its correspondent in the French and Belgian fighting zones:

North France.—According to German officers who have fallen into the hands of the allies, roughly 500,000 Germans were fighting against the allies at the beginning of the great battle on the Yser river. The enemy's casualties among officers themselves are put at 30,000, from which it may be assumed that actually their losses run well into six figures. In one case a regiment of infantry (marines), 1,200 strong, had only 80 men left when the great movement on Ypres was made. The losses among officers is extraordinary heavy. Five generals were killed.

I am informed by a British artillery officer, who has taken part in the fighting at Ypres, that he has seen a large number of German shells with the date of October, 1914, on the fuses. Only four out of five of these explode. Not only is there a scarcity in German heavy ammunition, but in small arms ammunition. Circulars recently found on dead German infantrymen at Ypres call upon the soldiers to husband ammunition.

Between the Marne and the Aisne, the Battle of the Aisne, to give it its old name, has broken out again with something like its old ferocity. The three main areas of this eternal battle are, roughly: (1) the destrict between the Oise and Craonne; (2) the immediate neighborhood of Rheims; (3) the actual forest of the Argonne.

TURKISH FORCE ROUTED.

Attack on Russians Is Repulsed at Koprukeui.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 13.—The following communication from the General Staff of the Russian army, dated Tiflis, was made public last night:

"The attacks of the Turks on our positions at Koprukeui on Nov. 11 were repulsed with great losses to the Turks. A Turkish column which attempted to turn our left wing was subjected to the cross-fire of our artillery, and was impetuously attacked by our infantry. The Turks fled into the mountains in complete disorder, pursued by our cavalry.

"Under the protection of the fortified positions of Devebommu, the Turks continue to concentrate troops at Erzerum. They apparently are receiving reinforcements by way of Trebizond.

"On Nov. 9 the Turks were attacked and defeated in Khanessour Pass, on the road from Aberbaijan to Van. They retreated rapidly in disorder, leaving behind them their dead and wounded."

Turks in Revolt.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A despatch to The Chronicle last night from its Milan says: A military revolution has broken out in Adrianople in consequence of the subjection of the Turkish forces to German commanders.

OFFICIAL BULLETINS.

Germans Only Hold One Point This Side of the Yser.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The French War Office issued the following bulletin last night:

"To the north we have held on all our positions. The enemy has sought to debouch from Dixmude by a night attack, but has been repulsed.

"We have resumed the offensive against the enemy, who had crossed the River Yser, and have driven him back at all points except at one place, where he still occupies from 200 to 300 metres on the left bank.

"In the centre we have gained some ground in the region of Tracy-le-Val, to the northeast of the forest of L'Aigue.

"In the Argonne region the German attacks have been very serious, but have amounted to nothing."

The afternoon statement says:

"On our left wing the fighting still continues with violence and has been conducted with alternate advances and retirements without importance. Speaking broadly, the battle front has not varied greatly since Nov. 10. Last evening it was extended along the line between Lombarizyde and Nieuport, the Nieuport Canal to Ypres, the approaches of Ypres, in the region of Zonneke, and to the east of Armientieres.

"There has been on change in the position held by the British army, which repulsed the attacks of the enemy, and particularly an offensive movement undertaken by detachments of the Prussian Guard.

"From the canal of La Bassee as far as and up to the River Oise there have been minor engagements.

"In the region of the River Aisne, in the neighborhood of Vailly, we retained our positions in the territory previously conquered by us.

"In the region of Craonne and on the Heurtebis farm, our artillery succeeded in reducing to silence the cannon of the enemy. Several of their pieces were even destroyed. We also made some progress in the vicinity of Berry-au-Bac.

"In the Argonne, in the Woevre district, in Lorraine and Vosges, the respective positions show no change."

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Sir Walter Gilbey, known in equine circles throughout the world, died yesterday in London, Eng. He was born in 1831.

Wm. Laurie, Government steamboat inspector, died suddenly yesterday morning at his home, 20 Springfield avenue, Montreal, aged 69.

B. E. Aylesworth, aged 76, was found dead in the cellar of his home at Bath, where he had lived for many years. He had a paralytic stroke.

Impelled by anti-British feeling in Oklahoma, where he was working, the Rev. Edward H. Beal has come to Montreal to enlist for service in the second Canadian contingent.

On the Grand Trunk, between Guelph and Hespeler, three horses were killed and two others so badly hurt that they may have to be shot. They got out of a pasture field on the track yesterday.

Lt.-Col. W. S. Hughes, of Ottawa, inspector of penitentiaries, who will command the 21st battalion for oversea service, was presented with a gold wrist watch by the staff of the penitentiary, where for many years he acted as accountant.

The current issue of the Manitoba Gazette contains notices of ten additional local option contests to be held at the December municipal elections. Two of the number, Neepawa and Deloraine, are towns. The balance are rural municipalities.

The provincial bye-election in Dundas County will take place on Dec. 7, with the nomination convention being held as usual one week earlier. This contest will provide a new member to take the seat in the House vacated through the death of Sir James Whitney.

BOTHA DEFEATS DE WET.

Two Hundred and Fifty Rebels Captured In Battle.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—An official despatch received by Reuter's Telegram Co. says that Gen. Louis Botha came into contact with the rebel General De Wet's commando 24 miles east of Winberg, Orange River Colony, after a forced night march. The rebel was severely defeated, 250 being taken prisoners.

The Governor-General of South Africa officially reports that on Nov. 8 loyal commandos of Boers drove the rebels from Weltvreden in the direction of Riefontein and took a portion of the laager at Zendfontein, killing or wounded 120 rebels and capturing 25 others. Veldcorget Hofman, although wounded, led his men throughout the engagement. He was subsequently captured.

Sharp fighting took place outside Kroonstadt on Nov. 6, resulting in one rebel being killed, seven wounded and 17 taken prisoners, including Hendrike Serfontein, a member of the Assembly.

"Our officers and men who were killed," the report says, "with some exceptions, were shot with dumdum bullets and suffered frightful wounds."

Ten More British Officers Killed.

LONDON, Nov 13. — A casualty list dated Nov. 3 was issued here last night. It gives the names of ten officers killed and 28 wounded.

Among the killed are Lt.-Col. C. B. Moreland of the Welsh Regiment and Lt.-Col. Arthur Jex-Blake Percival of the Northumberland Fusiliers. In the list of wounded appear the names of Lt.-Col. R. H. H. Boys of the Royal Engineers, and Major B. T. Pell of the Queen's Royal West Surrey Regiment.

Roberts Goes To France.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Field Marshal Lord Roberts of Kandahar is going to France. The official announcement making this fact public says the famous general is going into the war zone to "see the Indian troops." Lord Roberts was born in Cawnpore, India, 82 years ago.

Austrian General's Appeal.

VIENNA, Nov. 13.—(Via Paris.)—Gen. Potiorek, commander of the Austrian army operating against the Servians, has issued a general order to the 50th and 60th armies, fighting in Servia, to do their utmost to break the last resistance of their opponents and end the campaign before winter sets in with all the terrible sufferings which would follow.

AT GATES OF CRACOW

Russian Vanguard Reaches City and Battle is Imminent.

Advance In East Poland Results In Capture of Johannisburg, Which Gives Russians Control of Important Railway Lines — Siege of Przemysl Is Resumed—Main Austrian Army In Galicia Enveloped.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Russian army, under Gen. Rennenkampff, is fighting its way into East Prussia and has taken Johannisburg, which is on the railway from Lyck to Soldau, both of which towns are already in Russian hands. This gives to Russia the control of an important railway line which skirts the frontier in German territory and has several branches running into the interior.

The central army, which drove the Germans back from the Vistula, has had only unimportant engagements, but it is known to be pushing forward to the borders of Posen and Silesia, which the Germans are crossing.

The Russian left wing has followed the Kielce railway to the Austrian frontier, and is within a few miles of Cracow, the siege of which is imminent.

The southern army, under Gen. Ruzsky, is at Rzeszow, between Przemysl and Cracow, and its crossing of the San river is being opposed by the Austrians. Another detachment continues the siege of Przemysl, while still another is operating against the Austrians who are holding the passage of the Carpathians.

Cossacks patrols are reported to be making raids even to the gates of Cracow, and news of the beginning of a battle at Cracow, Galicia, is momentarily expected.

The Germans have been digging trenches and erecting barbed wire entanglements along the whole of the Russian-German frontier with the object of impeding the progress of the Russian forces. It is understood, however, that their main plan is to retire on the fortresses of Koenigsberg, Loetzen, Grandenz, Bromberg, Posen, Glogau, Breslau and Neisze.

The official report issued last night at Petrograd says:

In East Prussia on Nov. 11 an action developed in front of Stalluponen, Krouglianken and the region of Soldau. Our troops occupied Johannisburg (a small town of East Prussia, 70 miles to the southwest of Gumbinnen).

Beyond the Vistula battles of a secondary importance occurred in the region of Kalisz (Russian Poland) and Neschava, where advance guards of the enemy sought to progress.

In the Carpathians, Austrian rear guards maintained at the crossings on the Upper San, in the region of Sanok, were attacked by our troops.

The siege of Przemysl, which was suspended during the period in which the Austro-German armies were on the offensive, has been re-established.

Austria's main army in Galicia in its retreat before the Russians has been surrounded and its escape across the Carpathian Mountains cut off, according to advices received by the Russian embassy at Rome. It is stated that the Austrians must accept the challenge of the Czar's forces for a decisive battle or surrender.

A message from Bucharest, according to an Exchange Telegraph Co. despatch from Rome, says that two Austrian divisions have been annihilated along the River Pruth. While a small Russian force made a frontal attack, the main force invaded Bukowina from the south, cut off the Austrian retreat and delivered an attack from the rear.

From Petrograd comes a report that the Germans are preparing positions for a stand on a line running through Klobutzko, Czestochowa and Mstow. The troops are said to be in bad condition as to clothing and equipment, to withstand the rigors of a Russian winter, some of them not even having shoes, much less overcoats.

Petrograd despatches detailing the German retreat from the River Vistula say that the failure of the Crown Prince to hold the centre caused a falling back along the entire line. Despatches from German sources show that the Crown Prince's unpopularity is increasing since his failures in the west and the east. Although the Crown Prince has been placed in command of the eastern army, the actual work is being done by Gen. von Hindenberg.

A despatch to The London Daily News says that Gen. Dankl, with the remainder of the Austrian army, is moving south, across Galicia, and that he has refused further co-operation with Gen. von Hindenberg. This statement, however, is to be taken with reserve.

Powers Confer About Mongolia.

PEKIN, China, Nov. 13.—There is now in session at Kiakhta, Siberia, a conference concerning the present situation of Mongolia, at which the three interested powers are represented, each by a delegate. The Chinese delegate is said to be maintaining an uncompromising attitude.

There have been rumors in Pekin, emanating from German sources, that Chinese troops in Mongolia were moving toward the Russian border, and an effort has been made to connect this activity with the deadlock of the confrees. Enquiries, however, have brought denials from the Chinese authorities of this military activity, and the reports are elsewhere discredited.

Prisoners In France Fare Well.

PARIS, Nov. 13. — American Ambassador Herrick has returned from a visit to southern France, where he visited the concentration camps where German prisoners and the localities where Austrian and German subjects are interned. He found conditions satisfactory and is making a detailed report.

A man must forget his failures before he can hope to succeed.

HOUR OF TRIAL NEAR

Kaiser Issues a Remarkable Message to His Soldiers.

While Belgium Has Been Conquered and While the "Primitive Expedition" Into Russia Has Been a "Brilliant Success," According to Emperor William, Germans Must Now Defend Their Hearths.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A characteristic order issued by Emperor William to his troops has been found upon a German soldier wounded in East Prussia. It is as follows:

"Dear faithful soldiers,—You have not forgotten the day when crafty, barbarous Russia, having secretly prepared to attack our fair and peaceful Fatherland, mobilized her troops and moved toward our frontier. That same day I, in fulfilment of my duty and prompted by the best interests of the country, decided, in conjunction with my Government, to defend our land to the last drop of our blood.

"With this defensive purpose I was compelled to move my valorous troops into France, which, as an ally of Russia, was preparing to strike a blow at us on our western frontier.

"Thanks to the valor of my heroes, France has been severely punished, and Belgium, which interfered with our attack, has been added to the glorious provinces of Germany. From the course of military events you know that the punitive expedition into Russia has also been a brilliant success.

"But, although we obtained due requital for the affronted patriotism of Germany, we must now turn to the new task of protecting our hearths, which moribund France and barbarous Russia are making ready to attack. Henceforward military operations will take another form, which will soon be intelligible to you, my dear, valiant soldiers.

"My heroes, that hour of trial has now come for you and for the whole of Germany. It is necessary to concentrate all our energies on the repulse of our enemies, for otherwise Germany will be transformed from a magnificent free country into an enslaved, degraded province of Russia and France.

"If Germany is dear to you, if your families are dear to you, if your culture, your faith, your nation, your Emperor are dear to you, you will offer the enemy worthy resistance.

"Not one step backward into our country; remember, behind us destruction is threatening, and it is only before us that our happiness lies.

"For your country, for glory, forward, my dear, my faithful friends."

MONMOUTH IS LOST.

British Admiralty Has Given Up All Hope of Safety of Cruiser.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Admiralty published the names of 52 officers and warrant officers who were aboard the British cruiser Good Hope, when it was sunk with the cruiser Monmouth by the German squadron off the coast of Chile. The names include that of Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, commander of the British ships.

The Monmouth had aboard 12 officers. The captain of the Good Hope was Philip Franklin. The captain of the Monmouth was Frank Brandt.

Earlier in the day the Admiralty announced that hope of the safety of the two cruisers had been abandoned.

The two hospital ships sent out by the Chilean Government to search the vicinity of the recent naval engagement between British and German cruisers have arrived in Coronel and report that they found no trace of any of the vessels which took part in the battle.

The British Admiralty, in its list of officers who perished in the sinking of the Good Hope, includes Midshipman Hathaway, Fredericton, N.B., and Midshipman Silver, Halifax, N. S.—two Canadians.

Strange Disease Strikes Children.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Nov. 13.—Fear that the foot and mouth disease had spread to human beings were expressed by Federal and state authorities to-day. Four children of a Providence man who owned infected cattle were found to have sore mouths. A boy of 14, who had taken care of the cows, had the most pronounced symptoms.

CALL FOR DRUNK

The police last night answered a call to Church street, with the result that a drunk was taken in charge.

HOME GUARDS MEET

A large number of the home guards met at the Armouries last night and indulged in drill for some time.

FIFTEENTH TO PARADE

The Fifteenth Regiment will parade at the Armouries to-night, and may possibly have a march out. It is confidently expected that there will be a large attendance of members.

VISITING THEIR HOMES

Privates A. L. Johnson, Ernest Geen and Herbert B. Meller, all Belleville boys of the second overseas contingent quartered at Kingston, are here on leave of absence from their regiment, and will return Sunday noon.

HALLOWE'EN PRANKS

Before Magistrate Masson this morning some boys appeared, charged with having committed some depredations on Hallowe'en night. The parties reside in the Township of Thurlow. An amicable settlement of the affair was arranged.

Volunteers of 49th Leave For Kingston

Previous to leaving the Armouries to entrain, the boys were briefly addressed by Col. Ketcheson, the commanding officer of the regiment. The colonel said that they were going away some 3,000 miles, for the purpose of fighting the battle of the British Empire. He was proud of the men and especially was he proud of the 15 from the Village of Marmora. He hoped all would return home safe and sound. They were the right stamp of men and their determination to do their duty was marked upon their face. "God bless you all, and protect you", were the final words given the men.

The volunteers were escorted to the G.T.R. station by the St. Michael's church bugle band, who unhesitatingly tendered their services.

The 49th Regiment has certainly done its share in providing volunteers. In the first contingent 2 officers and 52 men were sent, and in the second contingent 4 officers and 66 men have enlisted. This is a record which Col. Ketcheson and all members of the regiment have reason to be proud of.

Belleville Civilian Rifle Association

A special general meeting was held last night in the Police Court rooms and considerable discussion took place re the Association being attached to one of the local regiments. There was quite a large number in attendance and the following gentlemen took part in the dscussion:

H. Sneyd, (President), Major Barragar, Captain Allen, Captain Cook, Col. Ponton, Colonel Marsh, Colonel Lazier, Mr. A. D. Harper, J. Douch, M. McMullen, D. J. Corrigan, A. J. Stewart, A. Harman, M. Wright, W. Smith.

The following resolutions were finally carried:

1st—A resolution that each member of the Belleville Rifle Association pledge himself to do his utmost to get the members of the Association, who are eligible to form a special company of the 15th Regiment.

2nd—A resolution that those members of the Belleville Rifle Association who do not wish to, or cannot join the 15th Regiment promise to drill with that company in plain clothes, their officers will be selected from amongst our own members

Lieut.-Col Marsh is having the members of the 15th Regiment, who now belong to the Belleville Rifle Association transferred to this special company now being formed immediately.

It has been arranged for all members to attend a meeting and preliminary drill of the new Belleville Rifle Association company on Tuesday evening next at 8 p.m. sharp in the Armories. All members please make an effort to attend.

Volunteers are Remembered

On Friday quite a crowd assembled at the C. N. R. Station, at Bancroft, to bid farewell to four young men who left to join the second contingent overseas force at Divisional Headquarters, Kingston, where they undergo training with others in the Dominion before leaving for Europe. The men were Tom Winters, Robt. Mills, Sandy Brown and Steve Yourgest, and through the efforts of a few ladies in town each was man was presented with two suits of underwear and $12 in cash. The members of the basket ball team presented them with handkerchiefs. They were given a hearty send-off by their friends and well-wishers.

THE PATHOS OF WAR

Life-work of a British Scientist Sunk By the Emden.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(Special.)—On one vessel sunk by the Emden, the Clan Grant, was a unique collection of material dealing with civic history, made by Prof. Patrick Geddes. The collection represented the work of a life, and it is beyond hope that Prof. Geddes will ever be able to replace the models, charts, ancient maps and diagrams he gathered to illustrate the evolution of civic life. The Architects' War Committee, a body formed to watch the interests of members of the profession affected by the war has contributed £50 to enable Geddes to replace some of his material, but the loss of time and labor can never be compensated.

CANADAS WATER POWERS

Canada possesses a larger amount of potential water power than any country, twice that of United States. In its industrial future Canada will rank as one of the greatest manufacturing countries of the world.

Canada's estimated 16,600,000 horse-power is equal to annual production of 367,000,000 tons of coal.

Canada has developed 1,016,521 horse-power from water power (per commission of conservation estimate).

Two proposed power schemes, on St. Lawrence River, between Cornwall and Montreal, would develop 1,500,000 horse-power.

Barbers' Rash

A journeyman tailor, who alleged that he had suffered from "barbers' rash" through a cut he sustained whilst being shaved, sued the barber at the Salford Hundred Court of Record. Evidence was called to show that antiseptics used by the defendant, and the method of shaving made for a high standard of cleanliness, and it was contended that the plaintiff did not sustain cut as alleged, so the jury gave a verdict for the defendant.

FOR THE BLUEJACKETS

Duchess of Connaught Appeals for Oilskins and Rubber Boots.

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.(Special.)—Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught is appealing for subscriptions for a fund to purchase oilskins and rubber boots for the bluejackets serving the Atlantic squadron under Rear Admiral Hornby. There are some 5,000 bluejackets in the squadron, including the men on the Niobe, and now that winter is coming on they are in need of a supply of these articles. Subscriptions should be forwarded to the Lady-in-Waiting to H. R. H. the Duchess of Connaught, Government House, Ottawa.

YOU CAN'T EARN MONEY WHEN YOU'RE LAID UP

There are a lot of people in this town who cannot afford to be sick. Perhaps none of you feel that you can, but certainly some of you can't, for as soon as you are sick, your wages stop and worry and debts begin to pile up. The sensible thing for you to do, as soon as you feel run-down and worn out, no matter what the cause, is to take something just as quick as you can to build up strength and health. Make yourself more comfortable and provide against serious sickness.

We don't believe there is any other medicine made that will do as much towards saving your health and thus helping you save your money as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is a medicine that gets right at the trouble and relieves it by toning the nerves, enriching the blood, and giving new strength and health to the whole body. It doesn't do this by means of alcohol or habit-forming drugs, because it contains none. Is strength and health-giving power is due to pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites, long endorsed by successful physicians, the one for its food value, the other for its tonic value. Here for the first time they are combined, and the result is a real nerve, blood and body-building medicine—a real strengthener that we are proud to tell you about. You don't need to hesitate in using it, because if it doesn't do all we say it will and satisfy you in every way, it will cost you nothing. If it doesn't make you strong and well again, come back and get your money. It will be given to you without word or question. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us $1.00—The Rexall Store—J. S. McKeown.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN FOR OUR OWN GOODS

Galt Editor Urges Country-wide Organization to Promote Sale of "Made-in-Canada" Products

The Galt "Reporter," a few days ago, had the following timely and interesting editorial under the heading "Buy Canadian-made Goods" on the economic situation in Canada arising out of the war:

"While one of the immediate effects of the European war was the disorganization of trade in Canada, a secondary result should be of a stimulating character. Owing to the fact that the continent of Europe is the centre of hostilities, a considerable amount of manufactured goods formerly imported from Germany, France, Austria, Belgium and other countries will now have to be produced here. Reports show that every year millions of dollars worth of manufactured goods from these countries are sold in Canada. Our own mechanics and artisans can produce such articles as well as the foreign workers and if the manufacturers take advantage of the opportunity provided, the war should result in more work, instead of less, for their employes.

"But the whole responsibility of making the best of the present situation does not lie with the manufacturers. If the people will demand Canadian made goods they will be not only supplying their personal needs but creating work for their fellow-citizens. When the Empire is involved in such a tremendous crisis as the present there is something for all to do. We cannot all go to the front but those who stay at home can do a great deal towards creating conditions that will make the suffering here as light as possible.

"The patriotic citizen, when he goes to the store to fill his wants will demand in every case possible goods "Made in Canada." There should be a well-defined campaign carried on throughout the country urging Canadians to purchase goods of home manufacture. If an accelerated demand for Canadian goods is created during the war, it will doubtless be maintained after normal conditions return in Europe.

"In this way we stand to benefit permanently by insisting that what we buy must be Canadian-made."

ORILLIA AND "MADE-IN-CANADA"

Orillia Paper Advocates Keeping Money Circulating Near Home

"The Orillia Furniture Company is promoting the buy-at-home idea by making use of a pay envelope which calls attention to the fact that "last year Canadians bought $618,000,000 worth of foreign goods, half of which could have been made in Canada"—or in other words $1,000,000 a day which went out of the country might have been spent at home to keep Canadian factories busy. Why should not the same principle be extended a step further to "Made-in-Orillia" articles? Our merchants and people generally grumble more or less loudly if the factories are not running full blast. But do the grumblers do what is in their power to keep our home factories busy? Take the matter of furniture for instance. We have in Orillia a factory whose goods are commanding a ready sale in all parts of the country—to such an extent that it has worked more steadily during the last eighteen months than any other furniture factory in Ontario. Yet the Furniture Company might have spent much more money in wages if all the furniture of the class sold in Orillia had been of their manufacture. How often have those who clamor for industries, or talk about making Orillia grow, enquired for, or given a preference to Orillia furniture. Similarly, why should those who want a motor car of the class manufactured by the Fisher Motor Company go out of town to buy it, when they can obtain the best value for their money by purchasing the "Made-in-Orillia" article, and factory service at their door—to say nothing of doing their share to make the motor works permanent and prosperous. On the same principle the farmer from any of the surrounding townships who buys Tudhope carriages, or Tudhope-Anderson wagons, implements or stoves is helping to build up the home market for his own produce, and to add to the value of his own farm. The buy-at-home principle should not be confined to dry goods and groceries."

While machine guns are melting their bearings in Europe, there is talk of reviving archery in this country.

ORIGINAL GUM CHEWERS

The Aztecs of Mexico are said to have been the first gum chewers known. The followers of Cortez reported that the Indians chewed a gum to quench thirst and relieve exhaustion. They obtained it from the sapote tree by tapping, and to-day the manner of gathering the sap is in close analogy to the process of gathering maple sap. The wood is of a reddish mahogany color, is quite hard, heavy, compact in texture, and fine grained. Door-sills and frames of this remarkable wood have been unearthed in the prehistoric ruins of Uxmal and found to be in an excellent state of preservation. The wood is in demand to-day by cabinet-makers, who employ it in the manufacture of high-grade furniture and household fittings. The fruit, the sapodilla pear, was once very popular in Latin-American markets, but the constant demand for the gum and the consequent tapping so reduced the size and quantity of the fruit that it has become almost a negligible product. The sap looks like milk at first, but soon turns to a yellowish color and thickens to the consistency of treacle. It is collected and boiled in a rather primitive manner in large kettles, and when it has reached the proper consistency it is kneaded and the surplus moisture expressed. It is then moulded into large loaves and is ready for shipment.

PRISONERS PLANT TREES

What Australian Province is Doing Towards Reforestration

According to a report of the Forestry Department of New South Wales, good conduct convicts at the state prison, instead of breaking stone, are engaged in the more useful and healthful work of replanting with trees the waste lands of the state. At one prison alone 25,000 trees, mostly American ash and pines were planted in one year.

Perhaps the only city forest in Canada is that at Guelph, Ont., where a small area has been planted surrounding the springs which furnish the city's water supply. In many of the counties of eastern Canada, however, are large areas of waste land, originally forested, and capable only of producing forests. Ontario has a Counties reforestation Act making possible the acquisition of such waste land for reforestation purposes by municipal councils, but up to the present time only one county has availed itself of this opportunity. Quebec and the Dominion government have also passed legislation to encourage tree planting, and the Dominion Forestry Branch in the last fiscal year distributed nearly 4,000,000 trees from the nurseries at Indian Head for woodlot planting in western Canada.

The growing of forest trees on waste land can in most cases be made a profitable undertaking, besides providing labor to a considerable number of men, yet no extensive reforestation has as yet been done in eastern Canada.

BIG PACIFIC DRY DOCK

Biggest Vessels to be Handled at Prince Rupert When Work Done

Good progress is being made with the construction of the big Grand Trunk Pacific Dry Dock at Prince Rupert. This dock, costing $3,000,000, will have an important national value, as it will be able to handle the largest vessels, either naval or mercantile, afloat on the Pacific Ocean.

The dock will have in all twelve pontoons and the first of these to be put in position is 130 feet long and exclusive of other fittings has 300,000 feet of timber in its construction. The capacity displacement of the series of pontoons will be 2,000,000 tons and each pontoon will have two powerful centrifugal pumps, so that, when the ship is in place, the water can be rapidly pumped out and repair work begun. The dock is so arranged that it can be used in three separate units or in any combination that is desired.

Logical Dyspepsia Treatments

IMPORTANCE OF ELIMINATING ACIDITY AND FOOD FERMENTATION.

During the past two or three years reports have frequently appeared in the Press concerning the remarkable value of bisurated magnesia as an antacid; and its ability to promote normal, healthy digestion by preventing food fermentation and neutralizing dangerous stomach acid has often been demonstrated. Until recently druggists could supply bisurated magnesia in powder form only, from one to two teaspoonfuls of which, taken in a little water after meals, almost instantly stops all fermentation and neutralizes acid, but sufferers from stomach trouble will be glad to learn that, after a long series of experiments, a leading firm of manufacturing druggists has now succeeded in producing a 5 grain tablet which combines all the valuable antacid properties of the ordinary bisurated magnesia in a very convenient from. This new tablet of bisurated magnesia can now be obtained of druggists everywhere and many physicians are already prescribing them instead of the powder form.

CALLS KAISER A MAHDI FOR WHOM MEN DIE

Correspondent Pictures a Terrible Combat, Where Human Beings are Mere Targets

IN NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 11.—Ypres is now the storm centre, and after a ten days' battle of guns, which was beyond doubt the most ferocious and bloodiest episode in this war, the Germans are endeavoring to repair their shattered strength by bringing up every avaiable man and gun for another bout of slaughter.

When the history of the past ten days comes to be written in detail, if ever the truth is told, it will be recognized as the most awful conflict in which humanity has ever been tried.

Heroism shines through it here and there. The resistance and nerve strength of the British troops has been almost superhuman, and the French have fought with a gallantry beyond all praise. But, mainly on both sides, it has has been simply a slaughter in which all human qualities have been annihilated, or at least stuperfied, by the destructive power of the artillery.

"We just wait for death," said a Belgiann officer last night, "and wonder if it doesn't reach us out of all this storm of shells. It is war without soul or adventure. In the early days, when I scoured the country with a party of motor scouts there was some sport in it. Any audacity we had or any cunning could get some kind of payment. The individual counted. But now, in the business around Ypres, what can men do, infantry, cavalry, or scouts! It is the gun that does all the business, heaving out shells and delivering death in a merciless way. It is gun against gun, with men as the targets, as helpless as the leaves torn from these Autumn trees around us by the storm of hail. Our men are falling like the leaves, and the ground is heaped with them, and there is no decisive victory on either side. One week of death is followed by another week of death. The position changes a little, that is all, and the business goes on again. It is appalling."

This same phrase was used to me last night by a surgeon who had just come from the station where the latest batch of wounded, thousands of them, were lying on straw.

"It is appalling", he said. "The destruction of this shell fire is making shambles of human bodies. How can we cope with it. What can we do with such a butchery?"

The German losses must be enormous How great it is impossible to say. I sometimes fear that we have a tendency to overestimate the proportion of casualties among an enemy superior to us in sheer weight of guns. Be that as it may, there is no doubt that during these last ten days they have sacrificed themselves with the kind of valor such as heaped the fields of Omdurman with Sudanese. The Kaiser is the new Mahdi for whom men die in masses, going with fatalistic resignation to inevitable death.

After a lull for burning and burial and for refilling the great gaps in the regiments and divisions, the Germans are moving against the Allies with new masses and again inevitable death awaits them. In spite of all their guns the Allies will hold them again. I believe that, but I know that once more there will come back another tide of blood and agony, which will make the doctors says in their quiet, unemotional way; "It is appalling."

SHORTAGE OF SHELLS MAY STOP THE WAR

Figures Showing Consumption of Ammunition and its Cost in Dollars and Cents Simply Appalling

Ammunition is one of the few things that cannot be hoarded. It soon gets out of date. Ordnance supplies made even five years ago have been superceded by more up-to-date supplies. The consumption of ammunition during the present war has been beyond the comprehension of most people, and out of all proportion to the manufacturing facilities of the nations involved. One of the main incentives for the taking of Liege by the Germans was the existence in that city of one of the largest ordnance factories in Europe.

What are the needs of ordnance ammunition of the huge armies in the field? To answer this question with accuracy would be almost impossible, but a very fair and conservative calculation can be made that will bear comparison with official data.

The number placed in the field by the warring nations is, at the very lowest estimate, 4,000,000 men, infantry, cavalry and artillery. We will consider only the ammunition which is under the control of the artillery. Small arms ammunition is beyond computation.

Twelve Thousand Cannon

Modern military science has established the principle that for each thousand men in an army there should be three guns. For armies aggregating 4,000,000 men this would mean 12,000 pieces of ordnance of various calibres, ranging from 3 to 12 inches, from field guns to field howitzers, throwing projectiles varying from 15 to 1,000 pounds. The smaller calibre ordnance pieces are semi-automatic, and must, under the manufacturers' test fire twenty shots a minute. The pieces of larger ordnance fire from three to ten projectiles in the same small fraction of time. One of the nations in this war, it is said, has 156 cannon with each corps.

Of course, these 12,000 guns will never be in action all together. A computation of their consumption of ammunition in such a hypothetical case would be staggering but of no practical importance. But we will look at the real possibilities and the figures they yield.

Staggering Figures

Assuming that the war lasts eighteen months or 547 days, in view of the incessant fighting that has been going on since it started it is only conservative to assume that 200 of these 547 days will be fighting days of twenty-four hours each, and that 200 hours of fighting will fall to every piece of ordnance in this army. This would be somewhat less than 1½ per cent. of the time consumed in action.

So much for the time element in our calculation. It is, without doubt, conservative. Now for the percentage of gun capacity expended. As already noted, semi-automatic guns have a test capacity of 20 shots a minute, or 1,200 an hour. Will a demand be made for two per cent. of this capacity? Will such a gun fire at least 20 shells an hour? It certainly seems a minimum at which artillerists will smile.

Assuming that the 12,000 guns of all calibres accompanying the armies in the field fire an average of 20 shells a minute for 200 fighting hours, we get the sensational total requirement of 2,880,000,000 shells, varying from 15 to 1,000 pounds. The lowest cost of a shell (that of the three-inch gun) is $6, which gives the staggering minimum figure of $17,280,000,000 for ordnance ammunition alone.

At Six Dollars a Shell

How many shells would be required in a two hours' engagement to supply 4,000 guns—one-third of the total—firing at the rate of only five shells a minute? Answer: Five shells a minute for 120 minutes is 600 shells a gun. Four thousand guns times 600 shells gives a result of 2,400,000 shells for two hours' fighting. At the minimum cost of $6 a shell this means $14,400,000.

The semi-automatic three-inch cannon, using the high explosive shrapnel, is without question the piece of ordnance that will be in most continuous service during this war, although we read of 392 shells from the heavy ordnance falling upon the roof of a single one of the besieged forts of Namur.

Now as to the time and labor required to manufacture these shells, with some words regarding the plants and their machine tools, in order to prove that lack of ammunition is very likely to bring about an early close of this war. It takes six hours of one skilled workingman's time to make a shell for a three-inch gun.

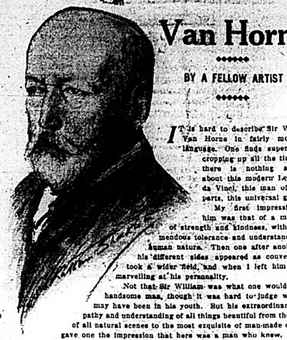
Demand Greater Than Supply

The ordnance ammunition for these 12,000 guns, assuming that the war will last eighteen months, and that during that time all the ordnance will be in action on an average of 1½ per cent. of the time, and at not less than two per cent. of its maximum capacity, would require for its manufacture 125,000 man years, the man working eight hours a day, 300 days in the year and 40,000 machine tool years with the machine tool running at full speed 24 hours each day.

In other words it would take 125,000 skilled mecnanics and 40,000 machine tools to provide in one year ordnance ammunition enough to keep up with the demand. And this is nearly double the actual equipment of the belligerent nations.

Here is the Cold Truth

This is not an ordinary international war. The crimes committed are not against Great Britain, or France, or Belgium, but against humanity. It is not glory that the allies are fighting for, but decency and the home, the safety of women and children, and the sanctities of domestic life. The wrongs of Belgium are the wrongs of humanity, and must be so investigated and so punished. The armies of the allies are the police of humanity, engaged in hunting down as foul a gang of criminals as ever terrorized a city or a countryside.—Toronto Star.



Van Horne

BY A FELLOW ARTIST

It is hard to describe Sir William Van Horne in fairly moderate language. One finds superlatives cropping up all the time, for there is nothing average about this modern Leonardo da Vinci, this man of many parts, this universal genius.

My first impression of him was that of a man full of strength and kindness, with a tremendous tolerance and understanding of human nature. Then one after another of his different sides appeared as conversation took a wider field, and when I left him I was marvelling at his personality.

Not that Sir William was what one would call a handsome man, though it was hard to judge what he may have been in his youth. But his extraordinary sympathy and understanding of all things beautiful from the effect of all natural scenes to the most exquisite of man-made objects, gave one the impression that here was a man who knew.

The highly trained scholar and overcrammed college youth is not really an interesting person, his knowledge does not seem to make any others better, but the wide knowledge of a man of Sir William's experience given out through his magnetic personality must have had a tremendous effect on all with whom he came in contact.

I went first to see him in order to get his permission to make a sketch of him in black and white. I will admit I was just a little bit afraid that my errand would be fruitless for I was told Sir William was an "Empire Builder," and the man more or less responsible for the great Canadian Pacific Railway. I felt for a moment that I was going to meet the man who laid the rails from the Pacific to the Atlantic—who operated the trans-Pacific ships from Vancouver to the Orient, and the trans-Atlantic from the Maritime coast to the British Isles. It was a great joy when he came slowly into the big drawing-room with a genial smile and an apology on his lips for keeping me waiting—then I knew my request would be granted. His first words were, "Now what can I do for you?" And on my stating my request, he immediately replied in the affirmative with none of the "shilly-shallying" of lesser men who might wish to pretend that they are much too important to give up any time to such an unimportant person as an ambitious artist. He at once fixed a day and hour and it was with great delight that I started on the sketch in his own studio, a wonderful room full of curios and "objets d'art," from all countries and of all ages. The inevitable cigar was in his mouth most of the time, but every now and again he would take it out and say, "You will tell me when I am to stop smoking, won't you? May I have another puff?" Being an artist he could understand how one felt and his chief idea was to make it as easy as possible for a fellow artist.

Without touching on personal experiences I may say that I have met some of the greatest men of the age, politicians, artists, explorers, musicians and writers; but among them all he stood out in strong relief. He was so essentially human and never was there the slightest hint of trying to show off his power and knowledge, a failing one sees often amongst the world's favourites. His love for his little grandson was one very noticeable trait in his character, and amongst his own paintings is one of a group of "Teddy Bears" on a good sized canvas, painted—so says the inscription, at the wish of "Little William."

His work, his different interest and talents are widely known and perhaps he is best described as "cosmic" for he seems to be made of all this earth's elements and spiritually in touch with all that makes for progress.

WHEAT AND BREAD AS SEEN BY SCIENCE

Temperature and Rainfall Affect Quality of the Loaf—Western Canadian Wheat Strong

To the majority of people the only differences in the quality of wheat are those apparent to the eye. Concerning the relationship of the physical appearances of the wheat to the baking quality of the resultant flour very little is known. Yet the most important qualities are those revealed by analysis and actual test, according to Mr. L. D. Jackson in an article in the The Farmers' Advocate.

The most important constituents of the wheat kernel are gluten and starch. No doubt the housewife has seen the elastic substance that remains when a lump of dough has been washed by running water for a few minutes. If the dough is squeezed in the hand under the tap for a short period of time an elastic rubber-like substance remains. This is gluten and the constituent of flour that gives shape and texture to the loaf of bread. Chemically it belongs to the same class of compounds as the white of egg and fiber of meat, the muscle-building constituent of food. Starch belongs to the group of compounds known as carbo-hydrates, which in the digestive process are the heat producers of the body.

Flour from Western Canadian wheat is famous the world over for its strength. Various interpretations are placed upon this word strength but generally speaking, strength means ability to stand strong fermentation, to stand the abuse of the machines in the modern bakeshop and to give spring and volume to the loaves. The source of this strength is the large amount of good quality gluten in the wheat.

Difference in Wheats

But all Western wheats are not alike. Some have high gluten content and some low. In some the gluten is of poor quality, regardless of the quantity. Occasionally the color is dark and yellow. Besides the variations in the quality and quantity of gluten there are other features entering into the problem. The physical condition of the wheat, too early cutting, damage by rain, tough wheat, and other conditions which make the wheat unsuitable for milling purposes.

The reader may ask what are the causes of these variations in the wheat. A few explanations will suffice.

The soil is of some importance, but this affects more the yield of the wheat than the quality. One exception to this is that scrub land wheat produces light, starchy kernels low in gluten, very white flour but often weak. The effect of soil is on the whole not as important as is often thought. Experiments have recently been made by transferring soil from different regions, the results of which tend to show that the effect of variations in soil is not very marked.

Climate Affects Quality

Perhaps the most important conditions affecting the quality of the wheat are climatic, for example, the rainfall, temperature, hot or cold winds, and also the geographic position of the crop whether high land or low. Climatic conditions vitally affect the wheat during the ripening stage. Any condition which tends to prolong the ripening period will produce weaker wheats. This allows too much starch to be stored in the seed. On the other hand, if the wheat ripens too quickly it is usually high in gluten but of immature and poor quality. Generally speaking, the strongest wheats are those of average-sized kernels of deep-red color which, on opening with a sharp knife show a colorless transparent interior.

To a large extent these qualities are not apparent to the eye and it is not safe for the miller to trust to appearances. Analysis is necessary to determine the quality and since "the proof of the pudding is in the eating," the modern method is to mill and bake the samples.

AN OAT BAROMETER

A straw may show which way the wind blows, but it is given to oats to tell what the weather is going to be. People may say that "they don't care an oat," but they would probably care a great deal about the oats sold in some big provincial towns of England. This particular oat is of a very swarthy complexion, and comes from the great cereal fields of Central Russia.

One solitary oat only is taken from the bunch, and it is fastened in the centre of a small decorated card by a band of ribbon round its waist. The card has fancy pictures as to the state of the weather left, right, and centre. The oat has two long "feelers," like those of a lobster, and if the weather is likely to be on the "change" these stick bolt upright in the centre, but if it is going to "rain" they very approapriately move over towards the left side.

But if, on the other hand, the weather is going to be dry or "set fair," and means to keep fine and sunny, then, being double-jointed, they move directly over to the right-hand side."

LION LOOSE AS SHIP TOSSES IN A STORM

A Number of Sailors Volunteer to Drive Him Back Into Cage, But Others Climb Rigging

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—Thrilling stories of a battle with a lion which broke from its cage during a raging gale in midatlantic were told today by the crew of the steamship West Point which landed its cargo of more seventy-five wild beasts, destined for Prospect Park, Brooklyn.

From the time the steamship left London until it docked at Pier 25 north of Callowhill Street today, life aboard the ship was one horror after another. Bedlam reigned and sleep was impossible. Some of the crew, ancient mariners, used to sleeping when the fiercest gales are blowing, said that it was impossible for them to get any rest on the westward voyage of the West Point. Roaring of lions, chattering of monkeys, shrieking of jackals and the whining of coyotes kept them in a constant state of uneasiness.

The continual pitching and rolling of the ship made the animals seasick and at times roused their anger. The constant lunging of the vessel also weakened the cages holding these denizens of the jungle. On Thursday last, before the vessel reached the Delaware Breakwater, a large lion burst through his cage, and his escape was not discovered for a short time. Because of the delay caused by bad weather the vessel was two or three days late and food for the animals had run short. The lion was hungry, and his first throught was for food. He made for a cage containing a white mule, and was trying to tear the bars apart when H. B. Goodkin, an employe of Bostock's, who was in charge of the animals saw him, and shouted for assistance.

When the word spread among the sailors that a lion was loose and help was needed to get him back in his cage, two or three of them volunteered to go, but most of them fled to the upper decks, and some to the rigging of the vessel. After an hour's work, however, Goodkin and his volunteer helpers by dint of skillful manoeuvring and prodding with sharp pronged pitchforks, managed to shepherd the lion back into his cage.

When the vessel arrived here another exciting incident occurred. While a cage containing a large black bear, weighing 400 pounds, was being lowered into a car, the animal battered the entrance of the cage loose. It took five attendants amost half an hour to beat bruin back into his cage and repair the door. While this was going on longshoremen, who were unloading the ship, had sought safety on top of box cars and in the rafters of the pier.

HUNS IN TRAINING

In China and Africa the Germans Rehearsed For Belgian Campaign

Dr. Louis Livingston Seaman of New York, it will be remembered, cabled to New York from Antwerp an indignant protest against the bombardment of that city by Zeppelins. Dr. Seaman is a well known figure in New York: he figured conspicuously, for instance, in the work of the American Committee for the celebration of the Century of Peace. An English journalist had an interview with Dr. Seaman, part of which may be quoted:

The doctor said the interview, has a hobby for rushing out to wars—officially when his country is engaged, unofficially otherwise. With means enough to pursue his hobby and with a surgical skill which makes him welcome in any hospital, he has seen every war of his generation "from the inside." He came to Antwerp instinctively, and the next day was tending the Zeppelin wounded and working to rouse the United States to a sense of the atrocities of German war methods.

"It is not exactly news to me," he said, "that these Germans are war-mad barbarians. I have seen a good deal of them before this. In Potsdam I saw proudly displayed the astronomical instruments which the Germans, under Von Waldersee, stole from Peking. That was a vandal trick against which General Chaffee in China protested at the time. The German general sent his letter back to him without any reply.

"In that Boxer campaign (I was there) the Germans practised on the Chinese the game they are playing now on the Belgians. Their army came when all the real fighting was over. By August 13 there was no more fight left in the Chinese than in so many jack rabbits. The Germans arrived November 20, and for want of any fighting began a policy of systematic murder. They'd send punitive expeditions all round the country, levying on each village they encountered a war tax. If the tax were not paid the village was fired, and the inhabitants fired upon. From accounts which came in to us the native population was in some cases almost exterminated. That was to give the German soldier his taste of blood, to fit him for the work he is doing now in Belgium, and might be doing in England if the luck had gone that way.

"I saw more of the Germans in their colony in East Africa in 1904. I was out there investigating sleeping sickness. The Germans had imposed a most oppressive hut tax on the natives, a tax which could only be paid by six months' forced labor each year; and the natives were stirred up by their priests to revolt. German atrocity in reprisal was something incredible. One day, before my very eyes, the Germans collected 208 of the chief men of a village, assembled all the rest of the inhabitants, including women and children, strung the men up to trees and then fired volleys into their hanging bodies. The firing went on until the bodies were riddled with holes."

NOT BY FAITH ALONE

It is right to exercise economy, but mistaken economy is out of place. The nation is made up of individuals. National business is made up of individual business and the national welfare of individual welfare. If five thousand people lack faith in the economic strength of Canada, that individual, who makes the problem of living more difficult for another, makes the problem still more difficult for a group. They in turn make it harder for the whole community. Sentiment plays a goodly part in business. If sentiment is poor, business will suffer. Waving a flag with one hand and closing the factory gate with the other does not help. Cutting the wages of the workman is just as disastrous to him as the withdrawal of a business man's bank credit at a critical moment.

Every employer should do his best to keep the labor situation as nearly normal as possible. An army of unemployed is a dangerous wound in the economic body. Unemployment creates extensive dissatisfaction and suffering. Further, it eats into the savings now placed in the post office, government and chartered banks in hundreds of millions of dollars. That money, where it is, helps to carry on business. If the individual does his part and makes even the so-called sacrifice, the entire community is doing its part automatically.—Monetary Times.

The Bell Horse

A necessary part of every army mule train is the bell horse. He carries no burden save a great responsibility, and a clean sounding bell, and all mules destined to serve his Majesty are trained to follow him. A white animal is nearly always selected, as for some reason or other mules follow this color most faithfully.

Pack mules become much attached to the bell horse of their train, and refuse to move either forwards or backwards if he is not leading. For this reason the death of the bell horse is a great calamity.

A POWERFUL LIGHT

Giant Eye on Heligoland Lighthouse Observed Forty Miles Away

The new light recently installed in the famous lighthouse on the island of Heligoland, in the North Sea, can claim the distinction of being the most powerful flashlight in European waters, if not in the world. It is equal to 40,000,000 candle power, and in normal weather is clearly visible a distance of thirty miles out to sea. The flashes themselves, which last but a tenth of a second, have been observed by people standing on the Mole at Busum, over forty miles away. The cost of maintenance for the giant eye amounts to about $8,000 a year.

Bluejacket's Tragic Death

A bluejacket named Alfred Edward Dalton, attached to the naval wing of the Royal Flying Corps, died in St. Bartholomew's Hospital, Rochester, from serious injuries sustained whilst bicycling to Chatham from the Isle of Grain. He had almost reached his destination when he came into collision with a heavy motor truck. The heavy vehicle passed over the body of the cyclist, inflicting terrible injuries. The machine was smashed.

Thistles Six Feet High

At a sitting of the Land Court at Baltasound, Shetland, to fix rents, a crofter named William Priest said when he came to his croft it had been lying idle for many years and thistles six feet high were growing on it. It had been as much trouble for him to clear the land of thistles as it would have been to have broken in a croft of equal size.

You have a bad cold!

Then listen! Cold attacks the lungs and the breathing passages. To cure it you need to get at these organs direct. Ordinary cough mixtures and syrups do not touch the lungs, but go direct to your stomach, which is not ailing. Peps, on the contrary, go direct to the very seat of the trouble.

Peps are tablets containing essences and medicinal ingredients so prepared that when placed upon the tongue they immediately turn into vapor, and are breathed down the inflamed air passages to the lungs, direct.

Peps medicine takes the form of healing vapor, and cures colds, coughs, bronchitis and lung troubles, just as living in Pine woods and breathing Pine-laden air prevents consumption and cures chest weakness. Tightness across the chest, pain between the shoulders, hacking cough, sore throat, asthma and bronchitis are the ailments which, in particular, Peps have been designed to cure. Peps will soon end your bad cold.

Testimonials for Peps have been given by members of the Canadian Parliament, doctors, lawyers, eminent Canadian musicians; all going to prove that Peps have been found a cure for throat and chest trouble, often when other remedies had entirely failed.

FREE TRIAL.—Cut out this article, and mail it with 1c stamp (for return postage) to Peps Co., Dupont St., Toronto, and we will send you a free trial package of Peps. All druggists and stores sell Peps, 50c box or 3 for $1.25. See the name Peps (four letters only) before buying.

SUPERSTITIOUS PLAYERS

Why Should Loose Hay Bring Good Luck and Baled Hay the Opposite?

The idea that meeting a hay wagon loaded with loose hay brings luck is general in baseball. Players frequently grab straws from such a load to wear in their caps. Baled hay, on the other hand, is unlucky.

Clark Griffith, who scoffs at all superstitions and jokes about them, has his pets. If Grif dreams that a pitcher is getting hit hard, that pitcher is kept out of the game. He says he isn't superstitious, but that it doesn't pay to take chances.

There is a major league manager who a few seasons ago was leader of a team that seemed the strongest in the circuit. It looked as if it would win as certainly as anything in baseball can be figured. One reporter picked the team to win. That evening the manager was gloomy.

"I thought we'd win sure," he said. "I never had a doubt until this morning."

"Why, that fellow picks us to win," he wailed. "He never was right about anything. He's jinxed us. If he'd have picked us for fourth we'd have won sure."

And his team didn't win.

GREAT WHITE THRONE AND ITS BLESSINGS

Messiah's Dominion for a Thousand Years.

HEAVEN AND EARTH TO FLEE

Scriptures Filled With Symbolisms—Due Time to Appreciate Many of These Symbols—Earth's History Thus Revealed—Deeply Ingrained Selfishness of Humanity a Blight—Mankind Cannot Remove This Condition—Small and Great to Be Judged—The Books to Be Opened—The Book of Life.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 8.—Pastor Russell preached to-day to a deeply interested audience. His text was, "I saw a great White Throne, and Him that sat upon it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was no place found for them." (Revelation 20:11.) He said in part:

Sin made moral cowards of our race. From early infancy fear and apprehension, especially in respect to things future, have been impressed upon us. We realize our imperfection, and know that our God is perfect, that perfection is the only standard which He could approve, and that some kind of punishment for sin must be expected. The Adversary, taking advantage of our forefathers, misrepresented the Almighty, and has used our fears to alienate us from Him and to distort His Message to us in the Bible. St. Paul assures us that this is Satan's general procedure; that he puts light for darkness and darkness for light. Thus it comes that our text, which is really one of the most beautiful and comforting in the Bible when understood, has to many become a lash in the hands of their fears.

It is needless to say that our text is one of the symbolisms of a Book filled with symbols. Guided by the Holy Spirit, God's people will in due time understand these symbols. For many of them the due time is already here.

The Throne is Messiah's, and represents His Mediatorial Dominion of earth for a thousand years. Its whiteness symbolizes the purity, the justice, of His Kingdom of Righteousness under the whole heavens. The heavens and the earth which will flee away from the presence of the great Immanuel will not be the heavens of God's Throne, nor the earth which He has given to the children of men. The heavens and the earth which will flee away, and for which no place will be found, are the symbolic ones.

In Bible symbology the earth represents established civilization; the sea represents the restless, dissatisfied masses of humanity; the mountains represent human governments, kingdoms, which constitute the backbone of present social institutions; and the heavens, spiritual influences—Ecclesiasticism, Churchianity. Thus interpreted, our text declares that when Messiah shall assume control of the world, when He shall sit upon His Throne, when He shall exercise rulership amongst men, the result will be that the social system of to-day, as well as the present day ecclesiasticism, will "flee away," will pass out of existence—no place will be found for them.

Some man may be inclined to ask, Has not Christ been the great Ruler of the world for these past nineteen centuries? And whatever may be said of the four thousand years before the coming of Christ may it not be claimed that He has been reigning ever since His ascension to the right hand of the Father?

We answer that if this be true, if the Redeemer of men has been reigning as the King of earth for these nineteen centuries, there should be something in the Bible so to teach. But we find nothing. On the contrary, we hearken to the Master's own words telling us that Satan is the Prince of this Age. (John 14:30.) Again He says, "My Kingdom is not of this world"; "I will come again and receive you unto Myself." (John 18:36; 14:3.) Again He tells us that He "went into a far country" to receive the title to His Kingdom, thence to return to take possession of it (Matthew 21:33; 25:14); and that at His Second Coming He will be the great King of Glory. In Matthew 25:31, He declares the same thing—"When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His glory."

On the other hand, as we scan the pages of history during the past eighteen centuries we are convinced that Messiah has not been the King of the world. To think of Him as such, with the omnipotent power which we accredit to Him, would be to charge Him with responsibility for bloody and cruel persecutions, for wars, famines and pestilences. Surely no right-minded person, after mature consideration, can rationally accept the theory that the glorious Messiah's Reign of Righteousness for the blessing of the whole earth, the uplifting of the whole race, the enlightenment of every creature and the bringing of all possible into accord with God, is in the past. We must agree that it is in the future; and that, when established, its effect upon the institutions of the present—political, social, financial, religious—will be such that they will flee away. No place will evermore be found for them.

From this standpoint alone is there hope for humanity. To-day we are living at the very climax of civilization. Yet to-day we behold more clearly than ever before that the deeply-ingrained selfishness of humanity is a blight upon all the blessings of our day.

I do not need to do more than to remind you that selfishness is to be found in every one of us; and that a semblance of righteousness is insisted upon by us all and adhered to, violators of which are styled criminals. Nevertheless it seems impossible to legislate equity, justice. The keen intellecets of men find opportunities for circumventing the laws and for commiting theft, murder and sin in the face of the law without likelihood of being punished.

Let me illustrate this thought: We have heard of the famines in India and of the expenditure of millions of pounds sterling by the British Government for irrigation purposes to compensate for irregularities in the rainfall. Undoubtedly the famines are to some extent due to scarcity of water. Nevertheless one of the ablest of engineers informs the world that in fifty years there has not been such a scarcity as should have caused the famines.

The famines of India, which have cost the lives of millions, are to be accredited to greed — selfishness which has flourished under the shadow of the law. Wealthy milling concerns purchase rice from the natives and grind it into flour. By agreement amongst themselves they do not compete, but press the market price of rice lower and lower until the poor natives, unable to make a profit, decline to plant, care for and harvest the crop. As a result there is famine. The poor natives suffer; but the managers of the milling properties pay large dividends of from fifty to one hundred and fifty per cent. on invested capital.

As an illustration of the exorbitant profits I will relate a case: Two young men whose accumulated savings amounted to thirty thousand rupees—about two thousand pounds, or ten thousand dollars—invested the money in rice-milling. The first year their profits were eighty thousand rupees—about five thousand pounds, or twenty-five thousand dollars. They were not in the combine to depress the price of rice, but they profited by what the combine accomplished. Such inequities of our present social order are beyond the reach and correction of the comparatively few men of ability not directly or indirectly interested in them.

Neither Jehovah nor His great Representative, Messiah, can in any sense or degree be a party to injustice, or inequity. The fact that injustice has been permitted, and that inequity has been the rule for centuries, is to be accounted for by the other fact that during all this period the world has been under the reign of Sin and Death, and not under the reign of Righteousness and Life. It has been under the reign of Satan, "the Prince of this world" and of the darkness of selfishness and evil—all of which his name represents—and not under the dominion of Messiah, the Representative of Jehovah and His righteousness, not under the King of Glory, the antitypical David and Solomon, the antitypical Aaron and Melchizedek.

The New Dispensation which Messiah's Kingdom will usher in is picturerd in our text. It will be the dominion that will be world-wide—pure, holy, righteous, just; truthful, God-like—a great White Throne. No wonder we read that the symbolical heavens and earth, representing the old order of things—social and ecclesiastical—will all vanish away!

But let no one think for a moment that ecclesiastical princes, financial princes and political princes will voluntarily acknowledge that the hour has come for a full surrender to Messiah and to all the principles of His absolute righteousness. On the contrary, these privileged members of our race will more and more be drawn together for mutual protection—for the preservation of the special privileges which have come into their possession. Even now we see the prophecy of the Second Psalm in process of fulfilment.

We are in the very time when the Lord through the Prophet David calls the great ones of the earth to recognize the true situation of our wonderful day—that it means that the Day of Messiah has arrived, and that He should be acknowledged and His principles of righteousness obeyed. The call is, "Salute the Son, O ye kings of the earth, while ye are in the way with Him, before His anger be kindled and ye perish by the way." (Psalm 2:10-12.) But no! The prophecy declares that we are in the day when the people, the masses, will have foolish imaginations—when they will think that by their own strength they can inaugurate a reign of righteousness along the lines of Socialism or by anarchy. The people must learn that their help is in the Lord, and not in their own frail arm. They must see the force of the statement, "Blessed are all they that put their trust in Messiah." The Lord is about to establish the great White Throne of absolute justice in the world.

On the other hand, the money kings, the earthly rulers and the ecclesiastical princes are taking counsel together to-day for the preservation of the present inequities of the world, by which they are profiting. The Lord declares that in this they are banding themselves against Him and His newly-appointed King, Messiah. For over a century human liberty has been making progress, despite every endeavor to restrain it. The potentates of earth perceive the rising tide of human intelligence and of demands for equal rights. They perceive that unless something be done to counteract this general movement, the special privileges of the privilege class will disappear.

Even now they are taking counsel together how the restraints which the people are putting upon them may be broken and a reign of autocracy—political, financial and religious—be reinaugurated—a reign such as prevailed centuries ago, but now upon a higher plane, controlled by brighter wits, holding under restraint more intelligent masses.

Would that the cultured and influential princes of earth could take the proper view of the situation, and realize the fallacy of their counsels, the impossibility of averting the great changes which are upon us by reason of the time having come for Messiah to take unto Himself His great power and reign! Hearken to the Lord's words through the Prophet: "Be wise, now, therefore, O ye kings! Be instructed, ye judges of the earth! Serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling. Do homage to the Son."—Psalm 2:10-12.

Could the wise of earth realize the situation and fully submit themselves to the Divine requirements of absolute justice and truth, what a blessing it would be to the world! If these princes would turn their attention from the grasping of power and wealth to the enlightenment and uplifting of the people, they would become ministers, servants, of the New Dispensation, which would be ushered in with rejoicing. But the Lord informs us that this will not be the case; and that as a result Messiah's Kingdom will be inaugurated by "a Time of Trouble such as was not since there was a nation."—Daniel 12:1

The Psalmist tells us the same—God will have in derision the puny efforts of the worldly-wise and great to establish autocracy again. He will speak to them in His wrath the lesson which they refuse to hear by loving exhortation. The new King and His Kingdom will be established in the earth; and the declaration is that amidst such Divine displeasure He shall "break them in pieces like a potter's vessel."—Psalm 2:4-9; Revelation 2:27.

God is no respecter of persons. Hence, before His Judgment Throne punishments will be meted out to the little, as well as the great, when found to be violators of the principles of justice. Would that I could impress this thought upon many of the lower clases who are crying out against the injustices in high places while practicing similar injustices themselves. Let it be remembered that the great White Throne speaks blessings, Divine favor and uplifting to all who love righteousness and hate iniquity—the small and the great.

If in the past a certain retributive justice has seemed to proceed along national lines, blessing the nations which take the more righteous course, and frowning upon those which take the more evil course, this will no longer be the case in the not distant future. The testing imposed by Messiah's Kingdom will be along individual lines. He who eats the sour grape of sin will find his teeth on edge, and his alone. Justice will then be laid to the line and righteousness to the plummet. All the "refuges of lies" by which mankind in high places have sought to deceive themselves and others will be swept away. The hidden things of darkness will be brought to light, and the glorious things of light will everywhere be recognized. Ultimately "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess," to the enthroned Messiah.

The Master said, "My Word shall judge you in the Last Day." Happy has it been for comparatively few who have heard the Master's Word in this present life, who have judged themselves thereby and have submitted themselves to His righteous precepts! These blessed ones will share with Messiah the glories of His Spiritual Empire, invisible to men. But during the Thousand-Year Judgment Day of the world (2 Peter 3:7, 8) the same words—"wonderful words of life" to those who will obey, but words of death to those who will refuse to obey—will be the standards of justice for all.

The books to be opened to all will include not only the words of the Master and of the Apostles in the New Testament, but also the Divine Message through the Prophets of Israel. According to those standards whoever would have life everlasting must conform his living and his thinking. At the end of Messiah's Reign the approval will be delivered over to the Father as perfect human beings, but the disapproved will be destroyed in the Second Death.—2 Peter 2:12; Jude 12; Acts 3:23.

Another book of life will be opened—another besides that which is now opened, which is styled "the Lamb's Book of Life," and in which are written the names of the faithful followers of Jesus in the present time. The new book of life will be for those who will be on trial during Messiah's Reign. By the close of the Millennium it will include the names of all of Adam's race found worthy of everlasting life.

The judgment of the Church in the present time is not according to works, the perfection of which would be impossible under present condition. Hence the Church's judgment is according to faith and the obedience of faith. But the world's judgment will be according to works; for knowledge will then be so great that faith will no longer be at a premium. The great Mediator will accept imperfect works according to the ability of the people; but as they rise out of degradation more will be expected until they reach perfection. Then perfect works will be required.

Advice to Diners.

In one of the French restaurants in Soho, where there had been a fight a few nights before, the following was at once posted in large type: "The war will be settled abroad. Please do not start anything here."

An enterprising man has printed these placards in large quantities, and is selling them to the restaurants frequented by persons of various nationalities now at war abroad.

Montreal News: "Mr. Bourassa, in a letter to the Winnipeg Tribune, declares he is not in favor of Pan-Slavism. Is there any other angle left from which this gentleman can favor Germany in his characteristic oblique fashion, after objecting besides to Canada's participation in behalf of the allies, accusing Sir Edward Grey of treachery to France, and representing our soldiers who went to Europe as a drunken lot?"

Reach the World by the Bell System

A BUSINESS MAN told us the other day of how he is meeting the slackening up in trade. He was about to send a salesman to see a customer two hundred and fifty miles away, but he had little confidence in the outcome of the trip. He had not time to go himself, although he did want very much to have a personal talk with this customer.

This is the way this business man explained it to us:—

"All at once I thought of the telephone—why not call him up and talk with him myself? When I first spoke to him, he was a little nervous about buying anything, but by a little reassuring talk I was able to get a first class order from him. I am now covering our entire territory by long distance telephone, and I tell you the results are great. My one regret is that I didn't adopt the telephone method sooner."

The saving the long distance telephone effects in time and labor, two great factors in business costs, makes it the great ally of the up-to-date business man who is trying to keep things up to normal.

Get the habit of reaching your world by telephone—it will pay you.

The Canadian Minister of Justice has been at work on several reforms he hopes to accomplish in regard to the more humane and helpful treatment of penitentiary prisoners. One reform already instituted is to stop the visits of ordinary visitors to penitentiaries who have no other object than merely to look at the prisoners. The needless indignity of being gazed at by touring strangers is no longer thrust upon the men behind the bars.

Love of money is never platonic.

An English newspaper writes of the "pronounced Canadian accent" of some of the men now on Salisbury Plain. An exchange asks: "What is the Canadian accent, anyway?"

Our Gift to you of this $5 Bible

No difference how many Bibles you now have, this one MAKES PLAIN the subjects by pictures printed with the type; so of all others, this is the USEFUL Bible for all. PRESENTED by the

to its readers who will ever be grateful for the opportunity offered by this grand educational distribution.

In addition to the 600 beautiful text illustrations are full page plates of the famous Tissot pictures in handsome colors. As Edward W. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, says: "This Bible is not a meaningless picture book. The illustrations serve a distinct purpose. They enrich the text, but they do more—they intelligently EXPLAIN it, so that many a hitherto obscure passage assumes to thousands a new meaning through these eye-teaching pictures."

You will enjoy this Bible, whether you belong to church or not, for its "eye-teaching" pictures make it of rare educational value to all.

This is what Abraham Lincoln said: "No library is complete without two certain books—the Bible and Shakespeare; hardly a quotation is used in literature that is not taken from one of these books."

RICH NEW DISTRICT

English Visitor Finds Northern British Columbia a Land of Promise

Mr. W. J. Spears, of London, England, whose knowledge of Western Canada dates back to 1880, made a tour over the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway between Winnipeg and Prince Rupert with a view of obtaining for those interested in England the latest data on the natural resources of the territory opened up by the new transcontinental railway in British Columbia.

"In their scenic beauty alone," said Mr. Spears, "these regions have a wonderful asset. The valleys are wide, allowing the full majesty of the peaks to be realized. In these valleys are areas of gently sloping land of a soil admirably suited for agriculture. In their richness they reminded me of the Valley of the Nile. Dairying and mixed farming have a bright future there.

"Berries of all kinds grow wild in the greatest profusion and the flowers are similar in their beauty to those found in Switzerland. There is ample timber to assure the success of the saw mills which are rapidly making their appearance at various points. Mineral wealth is also being developed, while the rivers teem with fish. The trout in Northern British Columbia is of a quality, texture, size and fighting nature that makes him a king among fish. While fishing on the Nechako River I came upon a party of Indians. They had just landed four giant sturgeon. The largest of these was nine feet long and weighed 900 pounds. Canada has no reason to go to Russia for its caviar when such sturgeon as these can be caught."

CANADA AND THE EMPIRE

Canada was the first colony to federate its scattered provinces into a dominion, in 1867, an example since followed in part by Australia, New Zealand and South Wales.

Canada made possible the all-British Pacific cable by contributing 5-17 of its cost.

Canada has one-third of the entire area of the British empire.

THE FIRST CUP OF TEA

Chinese Legend Accounts For Discovery of the Beverage

The Chinese claim to be the first users of tea as a drink, and how it originated is told in a pretty little legend that dates from 2,000 years before the coming of Christ.

A daughter of a then reigning sovereign fell in love with a young nobleman whose humble birth excluded him from marrying her. They managed to exchange glances, and he occasionally gathered a few blossoms and had them conveyed to her.

One day in the palace garden the lovers met, and the young man endeavored to give her a few flowers; but so keen was the watchfulness of her attendants that all she could grasp was a little twig with green leaves.

On reaching her room she put the twig in water, and toward evening she drank the water in which the twig had been kept. So agreeable was the taste that she even ate the leaves and stalks. Every day afterward she had bunches of the tea tree brought to her, which she treated in the same way.

Imitation being the sincerest form of flattery, the ladies of the court tried the experiment, and with such pleasing results that the custom spread throughout the kingdom—and the great Chinese tea industry became one of the greatest businesses in the world.

Curtain Hanging

Mounting curtains on brass poles will be much easier if a thin piece of cloth is put over the end of the pole. The pole will go through without catching the material.

Anti-submarine Guns

The first British Dreadnought to carry 6-inch guns behind armor for repelling torpedo craft is the Iron Duke, the fleet flagship of Admiral Sir George Callaghan. These weapons throw a 100-pound projectile and are the largest man-handled guns in the navy.

"Drawing a Bead" Explained

If you look at an old crossbow you will see a bead in its centre, placed there for the purpose of enabling the bowman to take accurate aim, and so when people talk of "drawing a bead" on a man they are going back to mediæval days.

SHADOWING THE BALL

An Old Trick Which Fools Batters and Sometimes Wins Games

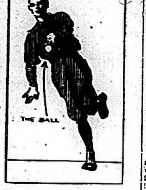
Can a pitcher be made to order? Joe Boehling's success raises the question.

Boehling is one of the strangest pitchers the game ever has seen. Every batter who walks to the plate returns in disgust, declaring that "he ain't got nothing."

Boehling was pitching for a team down in Virginia. Clark Griffith saw possibilities in him, because he seemed to have the intelligence and cunning necessary to pitch winning ball and took him in hand. After Boehling had gone to the pitching school under Griffith and Altrock he was as much changed as if he had turned green.

Boehling worked a game against Chicago White Sox once that Griffith used in his best days. And not one of them saw it.

There was a trick used by many of the old-time pitchers known as "shadowing." It consisted of throwing the body to one side as the ball was pitched, so that the pitcher's body was on the line of flight of the ball and "shadowed" it, the body forming the only background. Boehling was doing this repeatedly, and the Sox were swinging late at the ball, although it was not speedy. Batters used to complain that Griffith had more speed than he seemed to have. The secret was that he "shadowed" the ball with his body and the batter did not see it clearly until it emerged from the shadow, and, therefore, thought it much faster than it was.



Ed. Reulbach worked the shadow trick once in another way and won a game by it. There was a new umpire working behind him. Early in the game Reulbach became very friendly with the umpire and, instead of kicking when strikes were called, he was polite and seemed to be anxious to assist. He suggested:

"Stand over a bit. Get on the line of the ball and you can see them better."

For five innings that umpire shadowed the ball, unconsciously helping the Chicago pitcher beat Brooklyn. Then some one kicked and the ruse was exposed.

"HEAVING THE LEAD"

Picturesque Process Which Has Not Been Wholly Displaced

"Heaving the lead" looks easy enough, and anybody who is accustomed to doing it will say that it is quite simple; but it takes a long time before a man becomes a proficient leadsman. A novice is apt to be frightened at the whirling fourteen-pound weight on the end of its line, and if he loses heart and omits to give it that peculiar little jerk which brings it flying round in a circle, it may fall perpendicularly in close proximity to his head. Heaving the lead may be all right enough in good weather, but in the winter, when it is blowing hard, raining, or snowing, it is anything but pleasant. The driving rain and snow searches out every portion of the leadsman's anatomy, even though he may be wearing oilskins, while his hands get numb with cold, until there is no feeling left in them.

The deep-sea leadline which was invariably used for deep-water work before the introduction of patent sounding machines, and would still be used if they broke down, consists of 100 fathoms of line and a 28-pound lead. It is marked up to 20 fathoms in the same way as the hand leadline, and then at 25, 35, 45, etc., fathoms with one knot, and at 30, 40, 50, etc., with three four, or five knots, and so on, to the greatest depth of the line. The ship is usually stopped when using the deep-sea line, for it takes a considerable time for the lead to reach the bottom.

The patent sounding machine consists of 300 fathoms of thin piano wire wound on a drum, and to the end of the wire is secured a 24-pound lead, with, just above it, a perforated brass sheath fitted with a cap. Before sounding takes place a glass tube, open at one end and coated on the inside with a red chemical compound, is placed in the brass sheath. The wire is then allowed to run out until the lead is on the bottom, and as it descends the pressure forces the water up the glass tube and turns the red chemical into a milky-white color for a certain distance up it. The lead is then hauled in by hand, or by a motor, and the depth is ascertained by comparing the line of demarcation between the two colors in the glass tube with a wooden scale marked in fathoms.

With these simple but extremely reliable machines soundings can be obtained at greater depths, and with the ship traveling at far greater speed, than with the hand lead and line, though, as already stated, the older method is always held in reserve.

German cartoonists represent the English at Antwerp as trained "sea-dogs" jumping through a hoop, while a Teuton ringmaster cracks the whip. Those who know the British tars' "nonjump" qualities will question the truth of the representation.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE QUOTES PRECEDENT

He Shows How the French Respected Their Treaty Obligations to Belgium Though It Meant Ruin

Mr. Lloyd George is a speech at the Queen's Hall, London, brought out one point in the case against Germany. He said:

"This was not the only country to defend Belgium and her integrity. Russia, France, Austria and Prussia—they are all there. Why did they not perform the obligation? It is suggested that when you quote this treaty, it is purely an excuse on our part. It is our low craft and cunning, just to cloak our jealousy of a superior civilization which we are attempting to destroy.

"Our answer is the action we took in 1870. What was that? Mr. Gladstone was then Prime Minister. Lord Grenville, I think was then Foreign Secretary. I have never heard it alleged to their charge that they were ever Jingo. What did they do in 1870? We called upon the belligerent powers to respect that treaty. We called upon France, we called upon Germany. At that time, bear in mind, the greatest danger to Belgium came from France and not from Germany. We intervened to protect Belgium against France exactly in the same way. We invited both the belligerent powers to state that they had no intention of violating Belgian territory. What was the answer given by Bismarck? He said it was superfluous to ask Prussia such a question in view of the treaties in force. France gave a similar answer.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE
Chancellor of the Exchequer

"We received the thanks at that time of the Belgian people for our intervention in a very remarkable document. This is in a document addressed by the municipality of Brussels to Queen Victoria after that intervention:

> "'The great and noble people over whose destinies you preside have just given a further proof of its benevolent sentiments towards this country. The voice of the English nation has been heard above the din of arms. It has asserted the principles of justice and right. Next to the unalterable attachment of the Belgian people to their independence the strongest sentiment which fills their hearts is that of an imperishable gratitude to the people of Great Britain.'

"That was in 1870. Mark what follows. Three or four days after that document of thanks the French army was wedged up against the Belgian frontier. Every means of escape shut up by a ring of flame from Prussian cannon. There was one way of escape. What was that? By violating the neutrality of Belgium. What did they do? The French on that occasion preferred ruin, humiliation to the breaking of their bond.

"The French Emperor, French marshals, 100,000 gallant Frenchmen in arms preferred to be carried captive to the strange land of their enemy rather than dishonor the name of their country. It was the last French army defeat. Had they violated Belgian neutrality the whole history of that war would have been changed. And yet it was the interest of France to break the treaty. She did not do it.

"It was the interest of Prussia to break the treaty, and she has done it. Well, why? She avowed it with cynical contempt for every principle of justice. She says treaties only bind you when it is to your interest to keep them. 'What is a treaty?' says the German Chancellor; 'a scrap of paper.'"

FRENCH RUNNER KILLED

Jean Bouin, Wonderful Distance Man, Fell in Battle

The news of the death of Jean Bouin, the great French distance runner, on the field of battle in France, cast a pall of deep and genuine sadness over all that had had the pleasure of meeting the dashing Frenchman who held the world's amateur record for running one hour. As an athlete Bouin was superb—every inch of him. He had everything—speed, strength, and a type of bulldog grit that is supposed to be found only in an Englishman. No person who saw the 1912 Olympics at Stockholm will ever forget the superb race that Bouin ran against Hannes Kohlemainen. The distance was three miles and nearly 100 yards (5,000 metres). At the crack of the gun Bouin bounded away like a sprinter, and ran in the lead until within fifty yards from the tape, where Kohlemainen jumped up beside the Frenchman and beat him to the tape by less than one foot.

Blacksmith Used His Hammer

A company of British dragoons, called unexpectedly into action, were accompanied by their farrier, who, armed only with a sledge hammer, gave a good account of himself.

INVENTOR OF REVOLVER

Birmingham Artisan Was First to Perfect Deadly Small Firearm

One of the most interesting figures in the industrial life of Birmingham passed away recently in the person of Mr. Henry Jones, who had attained the remarkable age of 102, and had almost all his life been connected with the gun trade. Indeed, he was described as "the father of the Birmingham gun trade," and for many years he was regarded among the most skilful craftsmen in the city.

When his school days were over Mr. Henry Jones was put to the gun trade, and for 85 years worked at the bench. He produced a number of epoch-making improvements in the construction of firearms and in 1835 invented the first self-acting revolver. His father conceived the happy idea of bringing the invention before the naval and military authorities of the day, and he arranged to give a lecture on "Some Recent Improvements in Gun Mechanism" at the Polytechnic, in London. That was in 1835. The room was filled with representative officers from both arms of the the service, and at the close of the lecture the revolver itself was handed round, and so great was the interest created that orders for $3,500 worth of pistols were booked in the room.

Formerly the nearest approach to this weapon was the "four-shot" pistol, made chiefly in West Bromwich—a crude contrivance in which the barrel containing the four shots had to be rotated by hand. In 1858 Mr. Jones laid the gun trade under a lasting obligation by his improvements in the mechanism of the breech-loader—improvements on the introduction of which the breech-loader became the simple, safe, and reliable type of weapon we now know it to be. That the inventor himself made little out of the idea is due to a rather singular mischance; he entered into an arrangement with a firm of gunmakers who undertook to patent the invention and share the profits. They applied for and obtained protection, but unfortunately omitted to complete the patent, with the result that after a few months the improvement became public property. Hence the inventor remained comparatively poor and lost almost in obscurity.

PIANO EVOLUTION

It Took Centuries to Produce the Instruments We Know To-day

A step forward in the evolution of the stringed instrument was made in the Middle Ages when strings were placed across a box, thus producing the idea of a sounding board. This invention, called the psaltery, was followed by the dulcimer, which was somewhat larger. The keyboard was invented in the eleventh century. The first stringed instrument to use the keyboard was the keyed cithara, a box with a cover, having catgut strings arranged in the form of a triangle. A quill plectrum attached in a crude way to the end of each key marked the progress the piano of to-day had made in the thirteenth century.

Next came the clavichord. In shape it much resembled a small square piano without frame or legs. The strings were of brass, struck by a wedge made of the same metal which was called a tangent. The virginal, spinet and harpsichord followed the clavichord in rapid succession. They had strings of brass with quill plectra attached to pieces of wood. The virginal and spinet were almost identical, but the harpsichord was larger and was, at times, built with two keyboards. There are several explanations as to why the virginal was so called, but the generally accepted one is that it was in honor of Elizabeth of England, the Virgin Queen.

In Shakespeare's time it was customary to have a virginal in all the barber shops for the entertainment of the customers. The spinet received its name from its Venetian inventor, Sebastian Spinetti. The harpsichord was very much like our present grand piano, only much smaller.

It seems almost incredible that the manufacturers of Queen Elizabeth's time did not discover the hammer action. This great invention was left to the Italian, Angelo Christofori, who, in 1709, brought out a piano which forever did away with the scratching sound of the quill, thorn, brass or ivory plectra.

The piano did not receive a hearty welcome at first. It was looked on as a novelty. A playbill of Covent Garden Theatre, London, as late as 1767 announced: "Miss Anna Anna Brickler will sing a song from 'Judith,' accompanied by Charles Dibdin on a new instrument called the pianoforte."

THE PRICE OF BEEF

The price of Canadian beef for home consumption is determined by the price obtainable for the beef that is exported. For all practical purposes the price of Canadian beef cattle is determined in the Chicago market, and the price of beef in Chicago is determined by competition in the markets of Europe. The United States, Canada, and Argentina produce, or can produce, far more than their own people are able to consume, and the surplus must find consumers on the other side of the Atlantic, especially in Great Britain.

If the price of beef falls low in Europe the farmers of America will curtail production until the prices goes up again; if it rises high the farmers will increase their output until it begins to fall. In other words, the amount of beef produced in Canada depends on the relation between demand and supply in Europe.—Toronto Globe.

New Battery For Kingston

Cyclist Squad of Thirty Men Recruited--Carpenters Preparing Fort Henry For Turkish Prisoners.

KINGSTON Nov. 13—Sergt. W. Hazlett has been appointed to a position in his signalling section of the 21st battalion. "Bill" is well known here, having been a member of the old Highland Cadet Corps, and was later in the 14th.

Three highly qualified signallers reported at the battalion headquarters on Wednesday, and have taken positions in Lieut. A. Stroud's section.

W. G. Lennox, barber, on Thursday, received permission from Lieut.-Col. W S. Hughes to instal a barber chair in the Cereal works for the soldiers.

Large marques have been erected at the rifle ranges in Barriefield and in the immediate future the members of battalion will be given rifle practice.

The cyclist squad of thirty men from this district has been recruited and will be sent to the mobilization centre that has yet to be chosen. There are to be 120 cyclists formed in this division, one-quarter of them to be taken from here. Lieut. McGee, who has been in charge of the cyclist squad, will be missed by the men and officers, as he was very popular. By taking over the command of the cyclist section, he is not now attached to the 21st battalion.

Carpenters are at work at Fort Henry remodelling the lower flat of the building surrounding the court yard. No Turks have yet arrived for the concentration camp, but a large number is expected from Brantford district on Saturday.

Extraordinary Positions

Cancel Their Dukedom And Shoot Them As Traitors

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The status of the two semi-British dukes who are now fighting in the German army against Britain, the Duke of Cumberland and the Duke of Albany, will be debated in the House of Commons tomorrow on a question to be put by Swift MacNeil, Nationalist who is anxious to know how Premier Asquith purposes to deal with them.

Mr. MacNeil will urge that they be deprived of their British peerages and titles and their seats in the House of Lords.

The Duke of Albany, who has also the title of Duke of Saxe-Cobourg and Gotha, is a first cousin of King George. He was born in 1884 and educated in Britain and in Germany. He has a commission in one British and in several German regiments. His wife is a daughter of the Duke of Schleswig-Holstein.

The Duke of Cumberland is a second cousin of the King. He was born in 1845, is a General in the British and a Colonel in the Austrian army. He married a daughter of King Christian IX of Denmark.

The matter of the more-favored-treatment accorded influential Germans in Britain will be raised by Harry K. Newton, Unionist, who purposes to question the Home Secretary, Mr. McKenna, why British naturalization was granted to Bruno Schroeder, a German banker since the outbreak of war.

Suspected Spy Brought To Trial

Barber In London Tried To Get Information From Bluejacket

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The spy peril which is agitating the country, and which was the subject of a debate in the House of Commons last night, and in the House of Lords the previous night, was exemplified to-day in the trial of Gustav Ernst, a hairdresser, at Old Bailey. The accused was alleged to have conspired with Master Spy Steinhauer in getting a man named Ireland, of the H.M.S. Foxhound, to communicate information prejudicial to the interests of the state.

Ernst is a British-born subject of German descent, and is married to a German woman. He was one of the first aliens arrested after the declaration of war, but obtained his release as a British subject. After the authorities had been watching his correspondence, he was arrested again on the charge of being a spy.

It was shown that he had been in daily communication with Steinhauer of Potsdam, receiving pay from him to forward letters to useful people. The case was adjourned.

COULD SEND 150,000 MORE MEN TO THE BATTLE FRONT

Major Hughes Declares This Could Be Easily Accomplished--Second Contingent May Not Go Until January Or February

KINGSTON, Nov. 13.—Maj.-Gen. Sam Hughes, who inspected the troops of the second contingent here at eight o'clock this morning on the Cricket Field, left on his private car a few hours later for Toronto where he will inspect the troops. From there he will go to Lindsay and then back to Ottawa. Despite his strenuous work and his early and late hours, the genial Minister of Milita looked as "fit as a fiddle" and was in fine spirits when interviewed.

Asked how he enjoyed himself abroad the Minister said briefly but forcibly "Fine'—and then added "But I didn't go abroad on a pleasure jaunt. I went on business to see how our men at Calisbury Plains fared and to assure myself that they were not lacking anything and that we in Canada should be proud of them, is best evidenced by the published statements which no doubt you have read from such men as Lord Roberts and other military experts who declared that they were a superb contingent and that their mobilization, etc., in so short a tame was really remarkable. It would do your heart good, indeed, to hear the praise bestowed upon our boys.

"As for the feeling in England I can only say that there is a dogged determnation on their part to win. It is not a question of what the result will be, but how long or how short a time it will be before victory is finally ours."

The General then spoke on various matters—more for the personal information of his interviewer than for purposes of publicity, and he has a great fund of information—after which he referred to several purely Canadian matters.

"Of course," said he in reply to a question, "it is not possible as yet to say when this second contingent will go—for various extigencies may arise—but it might not be until January or February. Nothing, however, on that point is definite, but you may rest assured that our men will be at the front when they are needed.

"As for the reports of supplies, &c. being burned and destroyed at Valcartier Camp I can only say to you that, as Mark Twain declared of the premature report of his death, they are "greatly exaggerated." The fact is that some old breeches were burned as were some blankets and certain other articles that might have carried and spread disease—we are bound to take no chances since the health of our men is of more concern to us than filthy blankets—but beyond that there is absolutely no foundation for the reports, which have been spread by 'soreheads' and some of our political 'friends.'"

"You might say in conclusion that I arm greatly impressed with the fine contingent that has been assembled here—splendid, upstanding young men who are a credit to themselves and to their country. They made a superb showing this morning—a showing that augers well for their future work, Kingston and the district on turning out such a contingent is living up to its best traditions.

"And finally just let me add this one word, that the temper of the people of Canada in this crisis is wonderful, that it makes a man proud to be a Canadian. From what I can see we shall have no difficulty in raising 150,000 more men in this country if the needs or the occasion demand."

Disturbance On A Clyde Liner

Newspaper Man Killed and Two Others Wounded.

CHARLESTON, S.C., Nov. 13.—F. W Hinman, business manager of the Jacksonville, Florida, Times Union, was killed; Captain Ingram, of the Clyde Liner Mohawk, and C. L. Wright of Utica, N.Y., were seriously wounded by a passenger alleged to be H. G. Perkins, of Baltimore, while aboard the Mohawk last night at sea.

Perkins was arrested when the steamer arrived here today and held pending action by the coroner.

In response to a wireless call, the hospital steward of the torpedo-boat destroyer Flusser came to the assistance of the wounded men.

NORTH CAROLINA SAFE

Washington Hears From U. S. Cruiser in Turkey.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Navy Department officials were greatly relieved this afternoon when they received a cable message from Captain Oman, of the armored cruiser North Carolina, sent from Beirut, Turkey, reporting that the vessel was safe and that all on board were well. This was the first information that had come from the North Carolina since November 2. Captain Oman's message was in response to several cablegrams from Secretary Daniels, asking about a report that the North Carolina had landed marines at Beirut and the alarming story that the North Carolina had been blown up.

The Navy Department made the following statement:

"Today at 2.15 p.m. the Navy Department received a telegram from the commanding officer of the North Carolina at Beirut, dated November 12, stating that forces had been landed from the North Carolina and that everything was quiet at Beirut. All is well with the North Carolina."

Youth Too Quick Saves Father's Life

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Nov. 13.—Four men arrested here at noon today are said to be connected with the same gang that operated here some time ago.

They burglarized the offices of H. Ditchburn and the Muskoka Navigation Company, but did not get any cash.

They also tried to break into the Yeats Bros. clothing store, but were frightened away by Constable Stewart and shadowed till noon today, when they were arrested.

When they were being taken to jail one of the prisoners was caught in the act of pulling a 32-calibre revolver out of his pocket, evidently to shoot Stewart, who was walking ahead with two of the men. He was overpowered at once by Mr. Stewart's son, and the revolver taken away from him.

Turks Sent To Fort Henry

Bound for Fort Henry as prisoners of war a train load of Turks passed through the Toronto terminals on the 12th from Brantford. This was the first occasion that any citizens of the Ottoman Empire have been placed in custody, and the arrival of the train in Toronto created a great deal of interest. The train was composed of two coaches and a baggage car, which was filled with the effects of the prisoners.

The total number of Turks arrested was 120, and they were entrained early yesterday morning. A full company of the local militia was placed in charge of the prisoners, and while ten men were placed upon the platforms with loaded rifles as guards the remainer were seated in the coaches betwen thir charges.

TIED STRINGS TO THE ALARM BELLS

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Special—Tales of brilliant fighting are related by officers who have returned here from the front. One of these officers said today that a brigade of French bluejackets on the Belgian frontier last night played a trick on the entrenched Germans, who had hung cans and bells on their wire entanglements in order to prevent a night surprise attack.

The sailors, according to this officer, crept out and tied strings to the wires and then returned to their own trenches. They continually pulled these strings, which caused the Germans to keep up for many hours a constant though ineffectual fire. When finally the Germans ceased firing the sailors attacked and took a number of prisoners.

Fears They May Be Involved

Senator Burton Says Indecisive Result Might Bring U. S. Into War.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 13.—Again sounding a warning of the possibility of the United States becomint involved in war unless the present European conflict ends decisively, United States Senator Theodore E. Burton today addressed the City Club on "The Effects of the War on the Peace Movement."

German supremacy and the consequent growth of the German military machine to the disabling of the other powers in the event of a victory for the Kaiser, or a long step toward arbitration of differences if the Allies are victorious, were the Senator's predictions of the outcome.

Senator Burton approved the work of the national administration in its peace treaties, and declared he was glad that the voice of the jingo was silent, even in the face of the great war.

He said three circumstances might serve to end the war—a decision by the belligerents that defensive action is better than offensive, sheer exhaustion or a decisive victory. An indecisive victory, he said, might involve the United States.

"Should Germany win," said Senator Burton, "and I speak on the subject with a good deal of hesitancy, because it is the duty of an American citizen to avoid any expression of partiality, I do not think it difficult to determine what the result would be. Denmark, Holland and Belgium would be annexed to the German Empire. An indemnity would be imposed upon Great Britain and France so severe that each country would be disabled in the future from maintaining an army or navy which could compete with those of Germany. The settlement of affairs with Russia would be somewhat a different question, but, however that might be, Germany would be the dominant power in the world."

Direction of Letters To Enemy Countries

They May be Sent Through Agency Of Neutral Country.

OTTAWA Nov. 14.—(Special.)—The Government has received a communication from the Foreign Office giving the regulations which must be observed in regard to forwarding letters or money to British subjects detained in an enemy country. Neither letters nor money can be forwarded through the Foreign Office or the United States Embassy in London to individual British subjects abroad. Private letters to Germany and Austria-Hungary through neutral countries, are now allowed to be forwarded subject to the usual conditions of censorship. Letters cannot however, be forwarded direct to Germany or Austra-Hungary. British subjects and others wishing to communicate with friends in enemy countries must forward their letters through an agency in a neutral country, and correspondents may select their own agency. Messrs. Cook & Son have expressed their willingness to arrange for the transmission of such letters, and applications should be made to them.

Letters intended for transmission to enemy countries should be as brief as possibly, should contain nothing but personal matter, and should if possible be written in the German language.

REPORT CHRISTIANS IN PERIL IN TURKEY

News of Refugees Now in Petrograd--All Men Forced Into

PETROGRAD, Nov. 13.—Refugees who have arrived here from Constantinople report that the state of things there and in Turkey generally is appalling.

Brigandage, murder, and atrocities are committed, Armenians being the chief victims, but all Christians and foreigners are in great danger.

One refugee, a Greek, tells me he ran away to escape forced military service, leaving his wife and his mother behind. According to his account the Turkish authorities are forcing every man possible into the ranks of the army.

The fighting on Saturday and Sunday at Koprikos was not renewed on Monday, but the day was spent in a vigorous artillery duel, apparently without result. In the meantime Russian columns are marching up in two directions to reinforce each other for an attack on Erzerum.

Several strategic points of the utmost importance are already in the hands of the Russians.

ATTEMPED TO POISON WATER AT SALISBURY

Spy Shot After Wounding Canadian Sentry--Deadly Cholera Germs Found on Him -Story Killed by Censor.

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—A private letter received here from one of the Canadian soldiers at Salisbury plains tells of an alleged attempt to spread cholera amongst the Canadian troops.

The story as told is that one f the Canadian sentries on night duty observed a suspicious looking individual around the contingent's water tanks. The sentry challenged him whereupon the individual fired and wounded the Canadian in the arm. The latter replied with a well directed shot which killed the enemy.

A search of the body revealed several phials containing cholera germs and it was evidently the purpose of the man to infect the water.

The letter goes on to say that the affair was hushed up, hence the reason why the incident had not hitherto been reported in the newspapers.

FROM THE WAR ZONE

(Canadian Press Special)

EIGHTY PER CENT. WERE SLAUGHTERED

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Daily Express' account of the German capture of Dixmude says the fighting there was the most terrible yet experienced.

The German corps commander ordered his troops to take the town or not return alive. An earlier onslaught resulted in the slaughter of eighty per cent. of the attacking forces, who were unable to advance across the flooded fields. The dead bodies formed a footway for infantry following them, thus enabling the Germans to win the victory.' The Express also says the Allies have brought up heavy reinforcements before Dixmude and its reoccupation is expected, but its recapture, announced by Central News, is not yet confirmed.

DECIDED CHECK TO THE GERMAN FORCES

PARIS, Nov. 14.—An official communication given out this afternoon says the German attack against the bridge at Nieuport resulted in failure, and the various offensive movements of the enemy around Ypres has been checked.

SENTENCED TO ONE MONTH IN JAIL

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Captain Shaw, of the Canadian Field Artillery, asked the magistrates today to make an example of a sergeant of D. Contingent, charged with begging. The prisoner received a month in jail.

BELGIANS MUST SERVE OR BE EXECUTED

THE HAGUE, Nov. 14.—It is reported here that the German Government of Brussels has ordered all the Belgian Civic Guards to serve in the German army or be shot.

GERMAN WARSHIPS LEAVE VALPARAISO

FIFTEEN "CASUALTIES" AMONG CANADIANS

Privates Dismissed Because of Indulgence in Liquor—General Warning.

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—(Special.)—There have been fifteen new "casualties" among the Canadian troops on Salisbury Plain. But the casualties are due to the common enemy of all mankind and not to the Germans or Austrians.

Too much British hospitality and too much firewater taken by some of the Canadian troops while on leave from camp in London or elsewhere have resulted in fifteen privates being dismissed from the ranks. Word to this effect was received here to-day, and the pay of the men has been stopped by the Militia Department. It is also stated that in a few cases lieutenants have been reduced in rank to sergeants for the same cause.

These sporadic outbreaks of men on leave after the strict discipline of Valcartier and Salisbury have evidently caused General Alderson a little trouble. Hence his public request to the British public to stop treating the Canadian troops, with his added statement that unless more discretion is shown passes will have to be stopped entirely.

LEE DUCK'S DEATH

BRANTFORD Nov. 14.—(Special.)—An open verdict was brought in last night by the jury sitting on the death of Lee Duck, the local Chinese who was mysteriously assaulted in his bed with a butcher's cleaver during the night of October 25. Lee Yon, who was also assaulted, but who has recovered, was unable to throw any light on the sasault, stating that he knew nothing until he awoke at 10 o'clock, lying in a pool of blood. After the inquest a local Chinese stated that a reward of $1,000 would be offered for the discovery of the perpetrators.

THE EMPRESS OF INDIA HAS AN EXCITING TIME

Acting as Naval Transport and Flagship--Took German Prizes Belleville Physician on Board as Surgeon

VANCOUVER, Nov. 14.—The C.P.R. liner Empress of India, Captain Halley has been having an exciting time as a naval transport, according to a letter received here today. It is dated Hong Kong, October 10, and the correspondence describes the movement of the liner during September. While at Singapore the Vancouver liner had the honor of becoming the flagship for the Straits Settlement squadron, and Admiral Jerram and staff took up their quarters on the liner. Other ships in the fleet were the Monateur, Hampshire, Yarmouth and two Japanese warships. The India was the flagship for ten days.

On September 30 she arrived at Sandakar, British North Borneo, and found two Germans captured and under the guard of H.M.S. Clio, Cadmus and two destroyers. The captain, officers and crew of the two Germans were placed aboard the Empress of India, and on October 1 she sailed for Hong Kong, with the two German steamers following with prize crews aboard. They were the Tannanafells, which had 8,000 tons of coal and large quantities of provisions, and the Rio Passig, which had 4,700 tons of coal. The German prisoner on the Empress of India was very partial to singing "To the Day," and the "Watch on the Rhine." The Empress of India and her prisoners and prizes reached Hong Kong on October 8.

The surgeon on board of the Empress of India is Dr. J. T. Green, of this city, a son of Mr. D. M. Green and brother of Mr. Lorne Green.

SEVERED HANDS OF RED CROSS NURSE

A letter received in this city from a well known member of the first contingent, among other items mentioned says: "I was just talking to a Red Cross nurse, who has been sent back from Belgium with both hands cut off, the atrocity having been perpetrated by the Germans.

Belgians to Canada To Forget Horrors

Many Have Come to Quebec, Where They Are Among People of Own Tongue.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Special—According to Canadian immigration officials in London, a number of Belgian refugees have gone to Canada, full expecting to make that place their home. It is explained that most of them gone to Quebec will be among French-speaking Canadians. The Belgian officials here have said that when the war is concluded an effort would be made to get all the refugees to go back to Belguim again, and to this end an effort has been made to have the refugees registered. One of the immigration officials declared that some Belgians who have gone to Canada said that they were going to make it their home, to forget, if possible, what they had been through, and so they never would be menaced again by invasion of their homes.

An effort is being made to enroll Belgian volunteers for the army, and as fast as this is done they are being sent to London and then to France. There have been a large number of discharged Belgian soldiers here, some as the result of being broken in health, but who are now able to go back. They are gradually being brought together and sent back to France, preparatory to entering the active service.

RENFREW PIPERS TO GO

Militia Department Accepts Band, Who will Act as Stretcher-bearers.

RENFREW, Nov. 14.—(Special.)—The Renfrew band of Highland pipers have been accepted by the Militia Department to accompany the 21st Regiment across the Atlantic. A condition attached to acceptance was that the members of the band agree to act as stretcher-bearers on the field, which they are quite willing to do. The number of men to be taken is eighteen, and it is expected that of these all but two will be Renfrewites. In the course of a few days the band will leave for Kingston.

BOMB FOUND UNDER GOVERNOR'S OFFICES

(Canadian Press Special)

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—A bomb of similar construction to the one that wrecked the entrance of the Bronx County Court House last Wednesday night, was found in the Tombs Court Room, under the offices of Governor-elect Whitman today. The room was crowded. The bomb contained gunpowder, slugs and bullets. The fuse was partly burned. George O'Connor saw smoke coming from the fuse, picked up the bomb, tore off the fuse and carried the dangerous thing out of the court room. The bomb contained enough explosive to wreck the entire building.

FOUR YEARS FOR ASSAULT.

W. Gilzean of Southampton Sentenced For Wronging Young Girl.

WALKERTON, Nov. 14.—(Special.)—William Gilzean of Southampton, a fireman on the G.T.R. was today sentenced to a term of four years in Kingston Penitentiary by Mr. Justice Magee of Toronto, for a criminal assault on Dora Anderson, a sixteen-year-old girl of Southampton, on September 21. H. G. Tuker, of Owen Sound was prosecuting attorney, while Mr. D. Robertson, K.C., of Walkerton, defended the prisoner.

OLYMPIC SAVED CREW OF SHIP

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—Mail advices received by the Associated Press from a point in Ireland, purport to explain the mystery surrounding the arrival of the White Star steamer Olympic in Lough Swilly, on October 29th. The statement is made that she had on board eight hundred or more officers and men rescued from the British superdreadnought Audacious, which was sunk on the 27th of October off the North coast of Ireland either by a mine or a torpedo. Only one or two members of the crew went down with the ship. Wireless calls from the disabled battleship brought the Olympic quickly to her assistance and the crew were taken off in the liner's boats.

A Canadian journal has it to say that the nutritious qualities of Boston baked beans were demonstrated in the world series. Yes, the secret is in the baking.

FORCED TO EVACUATE POSITIONS

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(Special.)—Reuter's Athens correspondent says the Turks have destroyed the railway line from Smyrna to Cassaba, and that it is reported Turkey intends to close the railway from Constantinople to Dedagatch, a seaport on the Aegean Sea. Dedeagatch is the terminus of the railroad line from Adrianople and Saloniki.

The German official communication to-day contains a report from Constantinople to the effect that the Russians, by the grace of Allah, have been forced to evacuate their positions and are "retreating along the entire front, pursued by us on all sides."

VANCOUVER PREPARES FOR GERMAN ATTACK

Broughton Strait Closed to Shipping —Mines Laid Near Victoria

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 13.—It was officially announced today that the western part of Broughton Strait near Vancouver Island, has been closed to navigation and for purposes of defense. Shipping has been notified that vessels between Johnson Strait and Queen Charlotte Sound must take the Weynton passage and Black Fish Sound.

While no reason has been assigned officially for this action, it is popularly believed to be due to apprehension as to possible attack from the German fleet that defeated British warships recently off the coast of Chile.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 13.—Although no German warship has yet entered the North Pacific and the British cruisers Newcastle, Swiftsure, and Rainbow and the Japanese cruiser Idzumo are patrolling the coast, the people of Victoria, Vancouver, and Prince Rupert have been extremely nervous over reports that the way was open for a German naval attack on their cities. The Strait of Juan de Fuca, near Victoria, has been mined, guns have been placed commanding the Narrows near Vancouver, and other defensive steps have been taken.

FRENCH-CANADIANS OFFER CAVALRY CORPS

As That Not Needed, Biplane Suggested, But Curtiss Firm Overloaded

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—A delegation of representative French-Canadians visited Ottawa this week to offer to the Canadian Government a cavalry regiment of five hundred French-Canadian volunteers. The Government was asked to furnish the horses, equipped with saddles the delegation offering to meet all other expenses. The reply received was that cavalry was not really needed just now, the pressing demand at present being for infantry. The suggestion was made to the French-Canadians that a biplane would be acceptable. Upon returning to this city the delegation wrote the Curtiss people, whose factory is in New Jersey, and have received the reply that they are so piled up with orders from the warring nations that a further order could not be listed for some time. There the matter rests.

This latest offer of French-Canadian cavalry is, of course, supplementary to the infantry regiment now in training at St. Johns, Quebec, under Col. Gaudet, formerly in charge of artillery in Quebec city, and Major Archambault, inspector of Cadets for Quebec Province.

CANADIANS BANNED

Members of Contingent Not Permitted To Write to Newspapers

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Increasing stringency in the War Office regulations directed against camp journalism is seen in the fact that a new order has been issued that no member of the force be permitted to correspond either directly or indirectly with any newspaper office.

Luxuries In War Camp

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The French have learned to outdo the enemy in the art of trench making.

An officer writes that not only have his men fitted a cooking range in their trenches, but they have half a dozen bathrooms properly tiled, screened off and fitted with a hot and cold water spray shower.

Better still, a regular system of drainage is to be installed next to the baths in the shaving saloon, and the soldiers are now at work on a cafe and concert hall all under ground, to be warmed and lighted and something less than half a mile from the German lines.

GERMAN PRISONERS GRATEFUL

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Apropos of Ambassador Herrick's visit to the German prisoners in camps and hospitals. The Matin gives details of the treatment of German wounded in the Poiters military hospital. A special representative of the paper has the following voluntary statement from German officers there:

"The undersigned have much pleasure in expressing to the staff, especially the surgeons, of the Poiters hospitals their gratitude for the care since their arrival.

"KOTTERN,
"Lieutenant Eighty-six Infantry.
"STEIN,
"DEGENNER.
"PIMANN.
"Lieutenants of the Reserve."

The correspondents interrogated more than twenty wounded non-commissioned officers and privates, and a hundred prisoners who were wounded, and all willingly signed similar statements which The Matin reproduces in full.

Largely increased dividends

Will be paid in January, 1915, to holders of Canada Life policies eligible to share in them at that date.

AT THE FRONT

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractor permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractic is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect, (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

We can prove Chiropractic is right and applicable to your case. Think it over. Consultation free.

SCENE SHIFTS TO EAST

Russian Advance in Prussia is Event of Moment

Great Enveloping Movement Is Being Vigorously Pushed and Military Experts Are Watching It With Intense Interest — Germans Concentrating East of Mazurian Lakes and Bringing Up Guns.

LONDON, Nov. 14. — While the battle in West Flanders continues to hold the public attention because of the desperate character of the fighting, the numbers of men engaged and the territory at stake, military men now look upon East Prussia as the centre of gravity of the war.

In this latter field of operations a big battle is developing. The Russians are pushing vigorously a great enveloping movement. They are engaging the Germans along a wide curve of one hundred and fifty miles from Stalluponen, in the northeast, through Goldap and Kruglanken, which is well within the tangle of lakes, down to Soldau in the southwest. Military observers say the Germans have apparently checked their retreat in Poland and by counter-attacks are endeavoring to create a diversion. They say, however, that the Russians are not to be turned from their plan, which is believed to be an attack on Danzig. They argue that the Germans will have to either allow East Prussia to be overrun the second time or bring up reinforcements, and that they can hardly weaken their army along the Polish frontier, for that would leave Posen and Silesia open to invasion. The allies naturally are hoping that an effort will be made to relieve East Prussia, and thus lead to the weakening of the German armies in Belgium and France.

In any fighting in their own country the Germans will have the advantage over the Russians, as they have a net work of strategic railways to move their troops quickly, and, besides, they use motors to a larger extent than their opponents. Military men are watching the operations in this region with the deepest interest.

"The Germans have concentrated strongly south of the Mazurian Lakes (East Prussia) with heavy guns from Koenigsberg. Along the Soldau-Lyck line they have constructed heavily-timbered, strongly-armed blockhouses with barbed wire defences."

"The conclusion is drawn from the latest news that the German troops, who in their retreat have occupied all the defiles to the east of the Mazurian Lakes, (East Prussia), where they have placed heavy artillery, intend to resist the Russians tenaciously in that section. The Germans hope that on these positions, which they consider impregnable, the shock of the Russians will be broken. However, yesterday the Russians were successful in sorties to the east of the lakes.

"Throughout all Prussia railway passenger traffic has been suspended. The lines now are transporting troops only, apparently with a view to a new concentration which is said to have been decided upon by a recent council of the Austro-Germanic General Staffs at Cracow. This council is reported to have decided to change completely the plan of battle."

Rumors continue to circulate in financial circles that Austria-Hungary is anxious for peace and has already made private overtures as to peace terms.

The Army Messenger announced yesterday that the Russian army had won another victory over the Germans near Kalisz, in western Poland. The Germans were forced to retreat, it says, abandoning thousands of dead and wounded on the battlefield, and the Russians captured twelve howitzers.

These guns are believed to be part of the heavy artillery with which the Germans had planned to batter the fortifications of Warsaw and Ivangorod.

Australians Oppose Reception.

LONDON, Nov. 14. — A storm of protest has been aroused in Melbourne by the suggestion that Capt. Carl von Muller, commander of the German cruiser Emden, which was destroyed recently by the Australian cruiser Sydney, be given a public reception in recognition of his gallantry and courtesy when he arrives in that city. This statement is made in a despatch from the Melbourne correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co.

Russians Capture Aviators.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 14.—A detachment of Russian cavalry operating in the vicinity of Plock, 58 miles west of Warsaw, captured two days ago two German aviators and repelled the effort of rescue undertaken by two companies of German infantry.

No Epidemic Among Prisoners.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—In reply to the charge made by the Frankfurter Zeitung that forty-six German prisoners have died in England from pneumonia and typhoid fever, it is officially stated that there have been only five deaths among the prisoners. One death was accidental and the others were due to natural causes, the statement says there has been no typhoid or pneumonia.

740 Lost on the Monmouth.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—It is officially announced that the British cruiser Monmouth, which was destroyed recently in the battle off Chile with German warships, carried 42 officers and 698 men. Captain Frank Brandt was in command of the Monmouth.

Sarnia Man Wounded.

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 14.—Word has reached here that Capt. Dudley Gulston of this city, has been seriously wounded in action in France while serving with his regiment, the Northumberland Fusiliers.

FEEDING THE SOLDIERS AT KINGSTON CAMP

Belleville Boys Are Being Well Looked After;

KINGSTON, Nov. 13.—The Army Service stores in Tete de Pont barracks look like a wholesale grocer's warehouse these days. There the provision supply department is located to feed the soldiers of the 21st battalion. The potato bins look as if they would hold a carload or two, while in the supply room even a casual glance shows that the sides of bacon, the boxes of butter, the huge bags of beans and peas, cheese, tea, coffee, and jam and much else besides must be reckoned in tons. All the varied articles of the regulation army ration are there, placed so that each is readily available without loss of time.

The supplies are taken in the new motor-trucks to the half-battalion head quarters at Artillery Park barracks and the Cereal Works.

In the kitchens in the Artillery Park barracks a number of large stoves have been installed and white-dressed cooks take care of the cooking part. The barracks are divided into two divisions. Two companies that occupy the west end of the west kitchen and the two using the east end, the east kitchen. The men march past an opening and taking their portions go to their tables. These tables are in the centre of each corridor and benches have been built around each. There are several tables in each of the four corridors. The self-serving idea lessens the help that would otherwise be required.

Two bowls are given to the men besides the granite plate, and the knife, fork and spoon. Both bowls are about the same sizes, but the smaller is really a cup, although it has no handle. The cereal works barracks have a similar system except that the men eat at the tables on the main floor, which is also their recreation room.

At a special time each day the quarter-masters of the two half-battalions hand in their requisitions. The amount of each article that they ask for is based on the parade state or the number of men who have turned out at the morning inspection. The quantities of each article issued are determined by a fixed scale per man. The regulation army ration per man is as follows:—

Bread, 1 lb.; meat, 1 lb.; beans, 2 oz.; potatoes, 1 lb.; bacon, 2 oz.; jam, 2 oz.; butter, 2 oz.; white sugar, 2 oz.; fresh vegetables, 2 oz.; cheese, 1 oz.; split peas, ⅓ oz.; pepper, 1-36 oz. Many articles are done up in convenient parcels, such as sugar enough for 100 men, etc.

The men have all been completely supplied with two double pairs of heavy grey army blankets each. The blankets are kept in the south end of the Armouries in bales containing ten pairs.

A new automobile arrived on Wednesday for the use of the battalion. Another for general militia use is expected. The truck now in use is a great time saver. Supplies of all kinds are rushed about without any waste of time.

DRINK CURE A MIRACLE

No, Just Sound Science.

Many drunkards are sent to jail when what they need is medicine. Drink has undermined their constitutions, inflamed their stomachs and nerves, until the craving must be satisfied, if it is not removed by a scientific prescription like Samaria.

Samaria Prescription stops the craving, restores the shaking nerves, builds up the health and appetite and renders drink distasteful, even nauseous. It is odorless and tasteless, and dissolves instantly in tea, coffee or food. It can be given with or without the patient's knowledge.

Read what it did for Mrs. G., of Vancouver:

"I was so anxious to get my husband cured that I went up to Harrison Drug Store and got your remedy there. I had no trouble giving it without his knowledge. I greatly thank you for all the peace and happiness that it has brought already into my home. The cost was nothing according to what he would spend in drinking. The curse of drink was putting me into my grave, but now I feel so happy and everything seems so different and bright. May the Lord be with you and help you in curing the evil. I don't want my name published."

Now, if you know of any unfortunate needing Samaria Treatment, tell him or his family or friends about it. If you have any friend or relative who is forming the drink habit, help him to release himself from its clutches. Write today.

A FREE TRIAL PACKAGE of Samaria Prescription, with booklet, giving full particulars, testimonials, price, etc., will be sent absolutely free and postpaid in plain sealed package to anyone asking for it. Correspondence sacredly confidential. Write to-day. The Samaria Remedy Co., Dept. 206, 142 Mutual street, Toronto, Canada. Also for sale by Albert L. Geen, Druggist, Belleville.

A despatch says that food is plentiful and cheap in Paris. Usually it is three thousand miles away from the war zone that war prices prevail.

Deseronto News

(From The Post)

A youthful stamp collector of Deseronto showed the 'Post' man one day last week a Belgian postage stamp which showed very plainly the Liege postmark upon its face. In view of the prominent place Liege has gained in the great war now going on, the young collector esteems this stamp very highly.

Four young ladies of this town, Misses Lena Warren, Marjorie Rathbun, Jeannette Rathbun and Agnes Thompson are doing a work each Saturday among a number of our young girls which commends itself to many of our townspeople. They get them together in the spacious parlor of the Church of the Redeemer, where they teach them the art of sewing and also teach them how to do fancy work. Many, if not all articles made are forwarded to worthy institutions in the larger centres. All that is asked of the little seamstresses is that they take one cent apiece each Saturday. So attractive is this Saturday afternoon gathering becoming that many new faces are seen each week.

Dragged By Colt Dies Of Injuries

Animal Threw Youth And Escaped -Unconscious Victim Found In Field

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—After lingering in an unconscious state for two days, the death occurred yesterday of Lucien Maisonneuve, the thirteen year old son of Mede Maisonneuve, a farmer, of St. Phillipe, near Lachute. On Tuesday young Maisonenuve was sent into one of the pastures on his father's farm to capture a colt. After some difficulty the frisky animal was caught and as the boy was experiencing trouble in taking it to the barn he wound the rope around his right arm. On the way home the animal became frightened, and young Maisonneuve, in an effort to subdue it, was thrown to the ground and dragged a distance of two acres. The animal finally got away, and his parent, anxious about the absence of his son, went in search of him and found him lying in the field in an unconscious condition. Taken to the house, Dr. James Mason, of Lachute, was called, and found the victim had sustained a fracture at the base of the skull and a broken right arm.

GERMAN TRAVELLER DEMANDED BREAKFAST

Entered Kingston Home and Made Himself At Home for a Meal

KINGSTON, Nov. 13.—In broad daylight, a German walked into a home on Brock street, between Division street and University avenue, on Saturday morning last, and demanded that the good lady of the house provide him with his breakfast. The matter was kept quiet, but the story, like all stories, managed to leak out on Thursday morning.

The German showed plenty of nerve, especially when he found that the lady was the only person in the house at the time. It is stated that he did not even knock at the door, but walked right in and told the woman that he wanted his breakfast. The man was fairly well dressed, and stated that he arrived in Kingston from Montreal on a freight train and that he intended to catch a freight train and go on through to Toronto. The lady was good enough to give him his breakfast. He made many boasts as to what Germany would do to England before the war was over, and the two had somewhat of a heated argument. The woman upheld Great Britain in all her actions and told the German that his country would certainly be downed, and that it was merely a matter of time.

"Don't you be too sure of that," replied the stranger. "You will see that Germany pulls through this war with a grand victory."

After finishing his breakfast the man made off and was never seen again in the neighborhood. The woman would have liked to notify the police or military authorities, but she was afraid that the man would do her harm should she give an alarm. Had the military authorities been notified there would have been another prisoner of war in Fort Henry.

BROCKVILLE HAS MYSTERY

Man Found In Serious Condition With Gash in Head.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Nov. 13.—William Foster, an employee of a local manufacturing concern, was today found lying unconscious on the floor of his apartment with a gash on the side of the head which had produced concussion of the brain. He was removed to the hospital in a serious condition. How Foster came to be injured is a mystery. Some ugly rumors are abroad which cannot be cleared up until he recovers sufficiently to make a statement to the police. One story has it that the man got into an altercation with a German sympathizer over the war and was felled with a bar of iron.

A CAMPAIGN OF INNUENDO.

The "truce" campaign of the Liberal guerillas continues. It is one in name only—a cover for cowardly attacks—attacks where damage is attempted and responsibility evaded.

In the Maritime Provinces that attacks on the Government take the form of insinuations against the probity of Ministers responsible for army contracts, more especially those purchases made for the British War Office. An example is seen in the Halifax Recorder, owned by the defeated Liberal candidate of 1911. The public is asked by this defeated candidate to consider what he terms "the perfidy, the grafting, the weakness, the wobbling and imbecility of the gang in power at Ottawa," adding that the members of the "gang" "have become wealthy" whilst the people suffer from unemployment and other hardships.

In all these wild attacks not a definite charge is made, not a tittle of evidence produced, nor any responsibility assumed. The facts are there is absolutely no truth in these vaporings of former Grit heelers and their authors know it, but hope that if enough filth is thrown some will besmirch the person attacked.

What are the facts? There is a committee of seven of the leading members of the Cabinet who place these contracts. Is it likely that seven reputable statesmen would agree to enter into a conspiracy to defraud the people? Such a combination is no more likely than that the members of the House of Commons would form a mutual pillage and grafting association.

But there is stronger evidence respecting the honesty of the administration of army contracts. If grafting was the object care would be taken that contracts would be placed only with those whose party loyalty would close their eyes to maladministration. Yet such has not been the case. Politics have not been considered, and the work has been given to political friend and foe alike. How different from the procedure during the fifteen years of Liberal rule. Then a Conservative was not allowed in the Militia building, much less given an opportunity to furnish supplies for our South African army. The patronage list was so exclusively partisan then that to have a Conservative relative was almost fatal to the chances of a Liberal contractor.

The present administration has been clean, prompt, and economical, and only the guerillas of the Grit press insinuate otherwise. Even they only dare do it by innuendo and under the protection of the white flag.

ST. VITUS DANCE

ANOTHER SEVERE CASE CURED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

St. Vitus dance is a common form of nervous trouble, which affects not only young children but men and women as well. The only cure lies in plenty of pure blood, because good blood is the life food of the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure the most severe cases of St. Vitus dance because they actually make the rich, red blood that feeds and restores the starving, shattered nerves. This has been proved in hundreds of cases, among them that of Mrs. John Duncan, London, Ont., who says: "About a year ago I found myself becoming very nervous. At the outset I did not pay much attention to it as I thought the trouble would pass away. In this I was disappointed, for I soon found myself rapidly growing worse. My right arm and leg began to jerk and twitch all the time, even when I was in bed, and I found great difficulty in walking or doing my work. Finally the trouble affected my speech and it was with difficulty I made myself understood. Of course I was doctoring for the trouble, but was not being helped, and finally the doctor wanted me to go to the hospital for treatment. This I did not care to do, and it was as this stage that I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. By the time I had used four boxes I felt much better, and in a short time longer I was quite well and strong. My neighbors look upon my cure as quite wonderful, and indeed I think it is, and shall always be grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or can be had by mail at 50 cents a box or sox boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

There are men who never admit failure, though they do sometimes acknowledge they make a wrong guess as to their ability.

WILL DO ITS FULL SHARE

"The West is intensely patriotic, grimly determined and united as one man in the the support of the Empire at this time," is the report brought back from Winnipeg by the Honorable Robert Rogers, who has just returned to Ottawa after a three weeks' absence. Mr. Rogers found that enthusiasm for the Empire's causes was displayed not alone by native and British-born Canadians, but also by those whom the accident of birth had placed in other lands. Among the numerous Polish settlers in the West evidences of loyalty were most prononunced. Most of those of fighting age are anxious to enlist.

The opinion formed by the Minister of Public Works is reflected by the Press of the Western Provinces which, without exception, is not only devoting itself to promoting Empire-loyalty amongst its readers but daily gives many evidences of the spirit that is stirrring the people of the West. In Vancouver, it is reported that there would be no difficulty in enlisting 5,000 men in adition to those who went to the war with the first contingent. In fact, so bitterly disappointed were the citizens of Vancouver at not being permitted to send more than their allotted quota with the first troops that they formally memorialized the Government, stating as a grievance that thousands of men had presented themselves for enlistment and were turned away because the ranks were filled up. Many of the minor communities throughout the West have shown equal enthusiasm, and if, as the dispatches say, it is intended to send at least 100,000 soldiers from Canada to take part in the War, one of the least of the difficulties will be in finding the men fit and willing to go. The West is more than ready to do its share.

OUR PATRIOTIC RED MEN

The days are long past when the only good Indian was a dead one, says Becks Weekly. In any case the proverb is of United States extraction where the relations of the conquering race with the aborigines were never anything like as peaceful as ours. It is too often forgotten that our Indians, as much as the old Loyalists, suffered for their adherence to British rule and gave up lands and associations rather than remain in the United States after the Revolution. They are not less patriotic to-day when they have offered to raise a regiment for service overseas and have actually contributed $13,000 to the Fund.

These people are poor, and as they number in all Canada barely 100,300, the offer is all the more remarkable. It is, moreever, a remarkable tribute to the kindly government relations that obtain in this country, and though the offer of men is unlikely to be accepted it gives a fine indication of the solidarity of all the various and ethnically widely separated nations that find peace and settled existence under the British flag.

If the proof of the pudding is in the eating there must after all be a good deal to be said for that Empire which the Germans professors were so sure would fall to pieces at the first blast of ill-fortune. But not the least of those surprises which the Germans promised this war had in store must be the emphatic contradiction by hard facts of most of the prophecies of the dry-as-dust theorists of which this instance is not the least definitive.

PREMIER HEARST

The Toronto Globe reports Premier Hearst as having made an inspiring address to an Epworth League rally in the Carlton Street Methodist Church at the annual rally of the Epworth Leagues of Toronto district. Hon. W. H. Hearst, Premier of Ontario, was the speaker of the occasion, and chose as his subject "Patriotism."

Mr. Hearst applied the teachings of patriotism to the present world crisis. The British Empire and British institutions were passing through a period of trial, and only by a self-sacrificing persistent patriotism could any lasting peace be secured. "The peace that follows this war must be a permanent peace," he said. "It will be a permanent peace because right must prevail." He admired the patriotic devotion of those who had gone to the front, and was proud of the numbers which had displayed a willingness to go to the battle-line. All could not go to fight, but all could discharge their alloted duty. There was much to be done at home, to keep cheerful, to help one another, to see that the needy and dependent were looked after. He had already seen a benefit from the war in the closer feeling that was manifested one to another, "a sense of brotherhood that is bringing us together."

At the conclusion of his address the Premier was accorded an enthusiastic ovation, which found further expression in a Chautauqua salute when a vote of thanks was moved by Rev. W. F. Wilson and seconded by Rev. Dr. Briggs.

The Premier is rapidly proving that he is a worthy sucessor to Sir James Whitney.

"LEST WE FORGET."

Some statements made by the Liberal press or Liberal politicians within recent years, which will prove interesting reading today, as they have a more or less direct bearing upon present-day political or national issues:—

WAR IN PROGRESS IN 1909.

"But as a matter of fact, war is in progress. The contest in ship-building is war. If the Mother Country were engaged in a deadly conflict, Canadians could not get across the ocean fast enough to the aid of the Motherland. But we must remember that our aid is as much needed now as if a physical war instead of a shipbuilding war were on. It is Canada's duty from every point of view, from our affection for the land of our fathers and for our own self-interest to take prompt and practical action."—Toronto Globe, March 24th, 1909.

ONLY FIRST CLASS SHIPS ANY USE.

"The sort of vessel that should be built is fixed by circumstances. The competition now raging between Great Britain and Germany is in the direction of first class battleships. If Canada were to build a little fleet of wasps and hornets it would have no moral effect on the situation at all. What we would like Canada to do would be to manifest by a veritable act that in this competition of the fleets she ranges herself proudly and gladly by the side of the Mother Country."—Toronto Globe, March 26th, 1909.

NOTHING FOR BRITAIN.

"I am in favor of a sufficient fleet for protecting our fisheries and for nothing more."—Dr. G. A. Turcotte, Liberal member for Nicolet, Quebec, House of Commons, 1910.

NOT INDEBTED FOR ANYTHING.

"As a Canadian I wish to say that in a material sense we are not indebted to Great Britain for anything."—M. Y. McLean, Liberal member for South Huron, House of Commons, 1910.

ANNEXATION OR INDEPENDENCE.

"It is not patriotic nor loyal, I say, to contend that we must remain forever under the protection of the British flag; but, thank God, I am satisfied it will not be so, and the establishment of a war navy will, in my humble opinion, be the last step towards independence. I speak from the Canadians' point of view, and that my viewpoint is also that of the greater number of the electors of my constituency, and I would even say of the majority of the electors in the Province of Quebec. Will not Canada sooner or later have to choose between annexation and independence?"—Dr. G. A. Turcotte, Liberal member for Nicolet, Quebec, House of Commons, 1910.

CURRENT COMMENT

Montreal's revenue shows a falling off of $2,000,000, and the City Fathers are preparing to use the pruning knife on the estimates. This is in contrast to the general invitation to the out-of-works last winter to come and help themselves to the well paid jobs which the City had at its disposal.

The treasurer of Campbellford has recieved a cheque for $12,000 from the Dominion Government. This sum covers the amount of claims of the town for compensation for loss of privileges and lands sold to the Government for canal purposes.

Mr. Walter Mitchell, barrister, of Montreal, has been appointed Provincial Treasurer in the Gouin Cabinet. Mr. Mitchell was chosen Tuesday by the Liberals of Richmond as their candidate to replace Hon. P. S. G. Mackenzie and it is certain now that Mr. Mitchell being a member of the Cabinet will meet no opposition in the running.

The boasting of prohibition in the liquor traffic among the soldiers in Russia, seems to have been a fake. A telegram from London of the 12th November says: "The statement that Russia and France have prohibited the sale of alcoholic liquors is denied by the brewers and distillers, who point out that Russia has banned only vodka, of which the Government has a monopoly, but the use of wines and liquors among the troops is permitted. France has prohibited the use of absinthe, but not wine.

Ottawa Citizen: "Henri Bourassa, the Canadian Nationalist editor of Le Devoir, will speak in Ottawa on Sunday, November 22, under the auspices of the People's Forum. Mr. Bourassa has created a bitter controversy over his attitude to the war and only recently an address which was to be delivered in Kingston university had to be cancelled owing to the strenuous opposition from a certain section of the press and public."

WAR NOTES

Beck's Weekly: "The war has proved also that when it comes to the day of the big gun it does not make any very great difference whether a boat belongs to the British government or to the Government of Australia or the Government of Canada; she is placed at once under one general control, becomes part of one vast defensive system, co-operates with every part of that system and seeks out the common enemy wherever he may be found. That is a very useful and salutary lesson. When the Empire is at war Canada's war vessels, few or many, large or small, are at war; and quarrels over the wording of laws for settling that point are futile foolishness.

Toronto News: "As a result of an agreement honorable to the British and United States Governments, adjusting all differences over contraband shipments to neutral countries, American shipments are to go forward to Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Norway under guarantees that they will not be re-shipped to Germany or Austria."

General Botha, the fighting Premier of South Africa, has not lost his cunning and skill as a commander. He has just defeated General De Wet and taken prisoners two hundred and fifty of the rebel leader's forces.

INNOCENT GERMANY

Though years of peace she dreamed of war, and talked of war when waking; it's what she has been planning for, and all her engines making. "The day" has been the German toast, for that day she's been praying, when she might tread the British coast, destroying, burning, slaying. And now the day of war is here, and all the German legions are fighting for their faith—and beer—in haunted, corpse-strewn regions. "The day" is come, the day of ire, the toast of every German, and on the page of blood and fire he reads a ghastly sermon. The hate of all the world he's won, the scorn of every nation; his way of "getting in the sun" brought woe and tribulation. And now, the war dogs raging loose, his loud voice has a quaver; he offers every lame excuse, to gain the nation's favor. His cry is "Murder!" and "Police!" from out the struggle fateful; and all he ever wished was peace, and he thought warfare hateful. He fought for peace, year after year, and only waved his banner for God and home and lager beer, in quite seemly manner. His learned professors sign a scroll, of many allegations: "Our Fatherland is in the hole, so hear our explanations!" Explain, professors, plead and swear—we do not care a button! You can't produce a grizzly bear and prove that it's a mutton!

GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS

Another Shipment To Supply Demand

Great Distribution Rapidly Taking up First Allotment, But More On The Way

Somebody asked, "When is it going to end?"

"Why, it's just begun," is the answer.

Referring, of course, to The Intelligencer's distribution of the greatest Bible ever published. It did look for a while as though some of our readers would have to be disappointed, but additional shipments are now on the way and everybody will be supplied in time.

The Intelligencer recognizes the fact that there are numerous "illustrated" Bibles ever published. "Illustrated" Bibles offered to the public. But they contain merely pictures of Biblical scenes taken at random from various sources and inserted without regard to subjects or chapters. Some New Testament scenes are inserted in the Old Testament and vice versa. Thus they entirely lose their educational value. In this Bible there are more than 600 illustrations printed with the type, so that they make plain the verse which they accompany. Those who are not familiar with the Bible will catch many a new meaning aided by these illustrations. Then this Bible also contains full page color plates from the wonderful Tissot collection, each of which has been selected with the same object of explaining the accompanying test matter. So with all respect to other Bibles, the fact remains that this is the only really illustrated Bible.

No difference how many other Bibles you may now have, this one explains and makes clear the many subjects illustrated; and even though you may have no religious beliefs such a work will be found an invaluable aid to education.

In addition to the educational helps, the copious marginal references and the beautiful colored maps, every proper name in this Illustrated Bible is separated into syllables and marked for pronunciation, being treated the same as in a dictionary, so that mispronunciation is impossible. This is one of the most important features of this great work and is of immense value to both young and old who find it difficult to pronounce Bible names.

The LAPSE of ENOCH WENTWORTH

By ISABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Wolvertons"

ILLUSTRATIONS By ELLSWORTH YOUNG

COPYRIGHT, 1914 BY F. G. BROWNE & CO.

"I wish," Oswald's tone was almost wistful, "that you would at least talk it over. I think I can deal with the woman if anyone can. I have always treated her with a certain stand-offishness that she resents. She has tried, more than once, to cross the line I drew. She didn't succeed, and it galls her. I never put into words what I think of her. She understands, however, that I recognize her value dramatically, while personally—to me—she is offensive. If she has you in her power, won't you tell me? It would never go beyond these walls. She knows that I know her story. Low as she has sunk, she realizes that it is not what the world would call a creditable story. I can handle her easily."

A gleam of relief and hope drifted for a moment across Wentworth's face. Then he laughed nervously and the sullen frown returned to his eyes. He rose and began to pace the office floor with nervous footsteps.

"Won't you trust me?" pleaded Oswald. "I have a real regard, Wentworth, for you as well as for your genius. I would do it for your sister, if for no other reason. There is time enough yet to pull away, but," he spoke abruptly, "it won't be long. The woman has dragged more than one man to the gutter or to—suicide."

Wentworth laughed disagreeably.

"Well, it won't be suicide," he answered harshly.

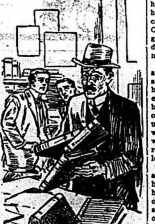
"Don't be too sure. When a man who has always had a fair amount of self-respect begins to lose it, he usually faces two alternatives; that is, unless he has a solid anchor in his home."

Enoch lit a cigar and began to smoke.

"Evidently it is useless to talk. What passes my understanding is how any man can turn out a woman like your sister to give shelter to Zilla Paget. I hate to say it, Wentworth, you will set me down as a cad, but I prefer to have a separate office. I am willing to take the little back room or you can. One suits me as well as the other."

"Certainly." Wentworth leaped to his feet alertly. "I'll change at once. I'd hate to thrust my society upon anyone who does not care for it."

"It is not your society I mean wholly. I object to Miss Paget dropping in here as she did today. Don't hurry, I did not mean that—"



Dropped an Armful of Books on His Desk.

"I don't care what you meant. I can make the change at once." Enoch's voice was churlish. He began to drag volumes from the bookcase beside him and heap them upon the top of his desk. "You made yourself tolerably plain, don't spoil it with politeness."

He pulled the papers from pigeonholes in his desk and tossed them about in loose piles, dropping some in the waste basket and bundling others together with rubber bands.

Oswald's pen was traveling slowly across a sheet of paper when some one tapped softly at the door. Merry entered. Enoch did not turn his head. The actor seated himself beside Oswald's desk.

"I could not show up this morning when you 'phoned," he explained. "I have been arranging for a funeral. It's one of those funerals which have no great string of carriages."

"Who's dead?"

"George Volk."

Oswald laid down his pen and stared at Merry. "George Volk! When did he drift back to America?"

"Nobody seems to know anything about him. It's a mercy though; it sets Alice free."

"How did she take it?" asked the Englishman quickly.

"I haven't told her yet."

"Where did he die? The last time you heard of him was in England, wasn't it?"

"Yes. This morning I came to the theater to get a letter I left in my dressing-room and ran into a policeman who was looking for Alice Volk. I asked him what he wanted. They found a letter addressed to her on a man who was killed last night down near the bridge. I've been with the officer since 10 o'clock."

"Is there anything I can do?"

"No. I've looked after everything. But I want your advice on one point. What do you think of not telling her—till he is buried?"

"It's the best plan. I supposed he had fallen pretty low."

"Low!" Merry shrugged his shoulders. "I did not know such dives existed as the place where I found him. He had been lying there soaked to the point of insensibility for two weeks. He was too horrible a sight for the eyes of any woman."

"What an end!" exclaimed Oswald. "The man once stood on a pinnacle that many an actor would give half a lifetime to win. He had—"

The Englishman and Merry both looked up quickly. Wentworth had dropped an armful of books noisily on his desk. He opened the door which led to the inner office, passed through, then slammed it sharply behind him.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Yellow Envelope.

More than one "summer show" had begun to blazon an alluring sign over the door of a Broadway theater before "The House of Esterbrook" closed its season. The fame of the play had gone abroad through the country, and night after night, long after the residence part of New York showed a labyrinth of boarded fronts, every seat in the Gotham was sold before the curtain went up.

The house was packed to the roof, on the night the play closed. It was the middle of June and the city had grown uncomfortably hot. Wentworth had spent a restless day. It seemed to him as if the air was filled with anticipation. He overheard the Breens discuss their plans for the summer in a Maine camp. Julie Volk had approached him, half shy, half eager, to tell of a shore cottage where they were to stay with Dorcas until the season opened. Telegrams came and went, everyone in the theater had plans except himself. He felt forsaken and isolated amid the excitement of a closing night. He had no ties—not a human being cared whether he came or went. There was a house—he held the title deeds for it, he paid taxes and hired servants to care for it—but it was not a home. Only a year ago the three of them had gone holidaying, as care-free as children. Ages had passed since last summer.

He wandered about the theater in aimless, unseeing fashion. The world seemed to have grown intolerable. He hated the gay laughter in the audience, the rustling of fans, and the buzz of voices between the acts. The orchestra had chosen airs that jarred upon his inmost nerves. He stood watching the throng when suddenly he wondered how he should meet tomorrow and every tomorrow of a long, lonely, inactive summer.

Before the curtain fell on the last act he strolled through the darkened house and opened a narrow door behind the lower boxes. A few shadowed steps led to the stage. A man stood inside with his fingers moving over the buttons, which flooded the stage with light or shadow. Wentworth pushed past him and walked swiftly behind the drops until he reached a corner which was comparatively deserted. He stood inside a wing, watching the company take their curtain calls. Last of all came Merry, alone. The insistent applause importuned a speech. Wentworth smiled grimly. Andrew's one terror was a speech. He saw the actor glance about him appealingly, then his eyes signaled to the man who controlled the curtain. It began to descend with quiet deliberation. Merry paused for a moment, then he came back.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I had hoped—"

While Wentworth stood listening he wondered why the descent of the curtain did not stop. He turned and whispered a command to the stagehand who stood beside him. The man's face was deathly white, he looked paralyzed with terror. In a second Enoch realized that something in the machinery had lost its grip. The house had grown still, while Merry stood smiling and talking in his nonchalant fashion. A young man with a gleaming expanse of shirt front rose from a lower box and set his foot upon the railing, preparing to climb over to the stage. A woman stood beside him clasping her hands and staring at Merry with horror-stricken eyes. Her face grew as white as the lace robe she wore. Then she shrieked, a long, shivering cry of terror. Enoch sprang toward the footlights with one swift leap, holding his arm over his head as if to ward off the heavy curtain, which was still descending. He seized Merry with a desperate grip and tossed the actor far back on the stage, then he fell with the ponderous curtain across his inert body. His closed eyes were facing the glare of the footlights.

SOLDIER CARRIED BABY 13 MILES

"War brings out all one's best qualities," said Miss Helen Boulnois, who has just returned from visiting the wounded in the Craigleith Military Hospital, Edinburgh, at a meeting of the Municipal Chapter, Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, yesterday. She laid great stress on the valor and humanity of the soldiers.

"Nearly every Highlander spoke of their children, and many of them carried photos of their babies," she said. "One Belgian mother gave her baby to a soldier and he carried it for thirteen miles."

Miss Boulnois said that the men told her every story of German atrocities were true. One said the Belgians women used to cry to the English to kill them after the Germans had been through a city. The agony of these left half dead or terribly mutilated was awful.

LOST LIFE DEER HUNTING

Wounded Animal Attacked Huntsman While in Canoe.

LINDSAY, Ont., Nov. 13.—An unusual hunting fatility occured this week at Buck Lake, five miles south of Wilberforce, by which William Hughie, Jr., of that village, lost his life. Hughie had wounded a deer which attacked him in his canoe, upset him into the lake and mauled him badly. A companion, who heard his cries for help, swam out to his assistance and brought him ashore alive, but he died shortly afterwards from the wounds inflicted by the deer and immersion in the icy water.

BEAT PICKED TROOPS

British Repulse of Prussian Guards Was a Notable Victory.

Two Brigades of the German Emperor's Pet Troops Were Hurled Against British at Ypres and They Broke Through at Their Points, But Finally Were Driven Back With Great Loss.

LONDON, Nov. 14. — The official press bureau issued the following communication at 11 o'clock last night:

"A very severe attack against the portion of the line held by the First Army Corps before Ypres was delivered on Wednesday, the 11th, by a Prussian Guard corps. The enemy made an especially strong effort on this occasion to break the line, which they hoped already had been weakened by attacks of infantry of the line.

"The facts briefly are as follows: Our troops were subjected to the heaviest bombardment that we have yet experienced, from dawn for three hours. This was at once followed by an assault in force, carried out by the first and fourth brigades of the Prussian Guard Corps. It is understood that these picked troops had been brought up specially to act against us in order to force their way through at points where previous efforts made by the infantry of the line had failed.

"The attack was pressed with the greatest bravery and determination. Owing to the gallantry of our troops and their splendid resistance against great odds, the attempt to penetrate to Ypres was repulsed, but the weight of the enemy's advance enabled them to break through our lines at three points. They were, however, hurled back and prevented from gaining further ground.

"An immense loss had been inflicted on the Germans, seven hundred of their dead having been found on the ground behind our front trenches alone. The casualties suffered by them in advancing up to our line under direct and enfiladed fire must have been enormous. Our casualties also were heavy."

AEROPLANES ARE DESTROYED.

Eight German Officers Killed By Shrapnel Near Ypres.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—A thrilling encounter in which eight aeroplanes, four German, two French and two British figured, occurred in the vicinity of Ypres. The German machines were destroyed finally by artillery and the eight officers whom they carried killed.

The Germans were seen approaching to reconnoitre the lines of the allies. The French and British airships immediately ascended to meet them. For some time the aircraft circled about each other, rising and descending, while machine guns spattered bullets among them. The sky was clear and the gunners on the ground had a good view of the aeroplanes, but failed to cripple any of the German machines.

Then suddenly four of the allied aeroplanes made a swift dash toward their own trenches and were followed by the Germans, who too late discovered the feint and perceived the peril of the situation only when shrapnel burst among them. In a few minutes the four German aeroplanes crashed to earth.

Did Not Think I Would Ever Be Able To Enjoy Another Meal, Until I Decided To Investigate Claims For "Fruit-a-tives"

W. F. ALLEN, ESQ.

Halifax, N. S. Nov. 22nd, 1913

"I feel that I would be doing "Fruit-a-tives" a great injustice if I did not make known to you the wonderful results that I have obtained from its use. For the past eight years, I have been afilicted with Dyspepsia. I had given up all hopes of ever being able to enjoy another meal, when I chanced to see your advertisement in the papers, and as a last resort, I decided to investigate and see if all you claimed for "Fruit-a-tives" was true. Now, after having used six boxes, I find that your claims for "Fruit-a-tives" are well founded. I am now in perfect health and can enjoy my meals as I formerly did, and I cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" too strongly". WELLARD F. ALLEN.

Another Shipment To Supply Demand

Somebody asked, "When is it going to end?"

"Why, it's just begun," is the answer.

Referring, of course, to The Intelligencer's distribution of the greatest Bible ever published. It did look for a while as though some of our readers would have to be disappointed, but additional shipments are now on the way and everybody will be supplied in time.

The Intelligencer recognizes the fact that there are numerous "Illustrated" Bibles ever published. "Illustrated" Bibles offered to the public. But they contain merely pictures of Biblical scenes taken at random from various sources and inserted without regard to subjects or chapters. Some New Testament scenes are inserted in the Old Testament and vice versa. Thus they entirely lose their educational value. In this Bible there are more than 600 illustrations printed with the type, so that they make plain the verse which they accompany. Those who are not familiar with the Bible will catch many a new meaning aided by these illustrations. Then this Bible also contains full page color plates from the wonderful Tissot collection. each of which has been selected with the same object of explaining the accompanying test matter. So with all respect to other Bibles, the fact remains that this is the only really illustrated Bible.

No difference how many other Bibles you may now have, this one explains and makes clear the many subjects illustrated; and even though you may have no religious beliefs such a work will be found an invaluable aid to education.

In addition to the educational helps, the copious marginal references and the beautiful colored maps, every proper name in this Illustrated Bible is separated into syllables and marked for pronunciation, being treated the same as in a dictionary, so that mispronunciation is impossible. This is one of the most important features of this great work and is of immense value to both young and old who find it difficult to pronounce Bible names.

The LAPSE of ENOCH WENTWORTH

By ISABEL GORDON CURTIS
Author of "The Woman from Wolvertons"
ILLUSTRATIONS by ELLSWORTH YOUNG

COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY F. G. BROWNE & CO.

"I wish," Oswald's tone was almost wistful, "that you would at least talk it over. I think I can deal with the woman if anyone can. I have always treated her with a certain stand-offishness that she resents. She has tried, more than once, to cross the line I drew. She didn't succeed, and it galls her. I never put into words what I think of her. She understands, however, that I recognize her value dramatically, while personally—to me—she is offensive. If she has you in her power, won't you tell me? It would never go beyond these walls. She knows that I know her story. Low as she has sunk, she realizes that it is not what the world would call a creditable story. I can handle her easily."

A gleam of relief and hope drifted for a moment across Wentworth's face. Then he laughed nervously and the sullen frown returned to his eyes. He rose and began to pace the office floor with nervous footsteps.

"Won't you trust me?" pleaded Oswald. "I have a real regard, Wentworth, for you as well as for your genius. I would do it for your sister, if for no other reason. There is time enough yet to pull away, but," he spoke abruptly, "it won't be long. The woman has dragged more than one man to the gutter or to—suicide."

Wentworth laughed disagreeably.

"Well, it won't be suicide," he answered harshly.

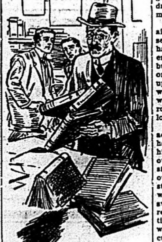
"Don't be too sure. When a man who has always had a fair amount of self-respect begins to lose it, he usually faces two alternatives; that is, unless he has a solid anchor in his home."

Enoch lit a cigar and began to smoke.

"Evidently it is useless to talk. What passes my understanding is how any man can turn out a woman like your sister to give shelter to Zilla Paget. I hate to say it, Wentworth, you will set me down as a cad, but I prefer to have a separate office. I am willing to take the little back room, or you can. One suits me as well as the other."

"Certainly." Wentworth leaped to his feet alertly. "I'll change at once. I'd hate to thrust my society upon anyone who does not care for it."

"It is not your society I mean wholly. I object to Miss Paget dropping in here as she did today. Don't hurry, I did not mean that—"



Dropped an Armful of Books on His Desk.

"I don't care what you meant. I can make the change at once." Enoch's voice was churlish. He began to drag volumes from the bookcase beside him and heap them upon the top of his desk. "You made yourself tolerably plain, don't spoil it with politeness."

He pulled the papers from pigeonholes in his desk and tossed them about in loose piles, dropping some in the waste basket and bundling others together with rubber bands.

Oswald's pen was traveling slowly across a sheet of paper when some one tapped softly at the door. Merry entered. Enoch did not turn his head. The actor seated himself beside Oswald's desk.

"I could not show up this morning when you 'phoned," he explained. "I have been arranging for a funeral. It's one of those funerals which have no great string of carriages."

"Who's dead?"

"George Volk."

Oswald laid down his pen and stared at Merry. "George Volk! When did he drift back to America?"

"Nobody seems to know anything about him. It's a mercy though; it sets Alice free."

"How did she take it?" asked the Englishman quickly.

"I haven't told her yet."

"Where did he die? The last time you heard of him was in England, wasn't it?"

"Yes. This morning I came to the theater to get a letter I left in my dressing-room and ran into a policeman who was looking for Alice Volk. I asked him what he wanted. They found a letter addressed to her on a man who was killed last night down near the bridge. I've been with the officer since 10 o'clock."

"Is there anything I can do?"

"No. I've looked after everything. But I want your advice on one point. What do you think of not telling her—till he is buried?"

"It's the best plan. I supposed he had fallen pretty low."

"Low!" Merry shrugged his shoulders. "I did not know such dives existed as the place where I found him. He had been lying there soaked to the point of insensibility for two weeks. He was too horrible a sight for the eyes of any woman."

"What an end!" exclaimed Oswald. "The man once stood on a pinnacle that many an actor would give half a lifetime to win. He had—"

The Englishman and Merry both looked up quickly. Wentworth had dropped an armful of books noisily on his desk. He opened the door which led to the inner office, passed through, then slammed it sharply behind him.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Yellow Envelope.

More than one "summer show" had begun to blazon an alluring sign over the door of a Broadway theater before "The House of Esterbrook" closed its season. The fame of the play had gone abroad through the country, and night after night, long after the residence part of New York showed a labyrinth of boarded fronts, every seat in the Gotham was sold before the curtain went up.

The house was packed to the roof on the night the play closed. It was the middle of June and the city had grown uncomfortably hot. Wentworth had spent a restless day. It seemed to him as if the air was filled with anticipation. He overheard the Breens discuss their plans for the summer in a Maine camp. Julie Volk had approached him, half shy, half eager, to tell of a shore cottage where they were to stay with Dorcas until the season opened. Telegrams came and went, everyone in the theater had plans except himself. He felt forsaken and isolated amid the excitement of a closing night. He had no ties—not a human being cared whether he came or went. There was a house—he held the title deeds for it, he paid taxes and hired servants to care for it—but it was not a home. Only a year ago the three of them had gone holidaying, as care-free as children. Ages had passed since last summer.

He wandered about the theater in aimless, unseeing fashion. The world seemed to have grown intolerable. He hated the gay laughter in the audience, the rustling of fans, and the buzz of voices between the acts. The orchestra had chosen airs that jarred upon his inmost nerves. He stood watching the throng when suddenly he wondered how he should meet tomorrow and every tomorrow of a long, lonely, inactive summer.

Before the curtain fell on the last act he strolled through the darkened house and opened a narrow door behind the lower boxes. A few shadowed steps led to the stage. A man stood inside with his fingers moving over the buttons, which flooded the stage with light or shadow. Wentworth pushed past him and walked swiftly behind the drops until he reached a corner which was comparatively deserted. He stood inside a wing, watching the company take their curtain calls. Last of all came Merry, alone. The insistent applause importuned a speech. Wentworth smiled grimly. Andrew's one terror was a speech. He saw the actor glance about him appealingly, then his eyes signaled to the man who controlled the curtain. It began to descend with quiet deliberation. Merry paused for a moment, then he came back.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I had hoped—"

While Wentworth stood listening he wondered why the descent of the curtain did not stop. He turned and whispered a command to the stagehand who stood beside him. The man's face was deathly white, he looked paralyzed with terror. In a second Enoch realized that something in the machinery had lost its grip. The house had grown still, while Merry stood smiling and talking in his nonchalant fashion. A young man with a gleaming expanse of shirt front rose from a lower box and set his foot upon the railing, preparing to climb over to the stage. A woman stood beside him clasping her hands and staring at Merry with horror-stricken eyes. Her face grew as white as the lace robe she wore. Then she shrieked, a long, shivering cry of terror. Enoch sprang toward the footlights with one swift leap, holding his arm over his head as if to ward off the heavy curtain, which was still descending. He seized Merry with a desperate grip and tossed the actor far back on the stage, then he fell with the ponderous curtain across his inert body. His closed eyes were facing the glare of the footlights.

CATARRH TRUTH

TOLD IN A SIMPLE WAY

Without Apparatus, Inhalers, Salves, Lotions, Harmful Drugs, Smoke or Electricity.

HEALS DAY AND NIGHT

It is a new way. It is something absolutely different. No lotions, sprays or sickly smelling salves or creams. No atomizer, or any apparatus of any kind. Nothing to smoke or inhale. No steaming or rubbing or injections. No electricity or vibration or massage. No powder; no plasters; no keeping in the house.

Nothing of that kind at all. Something new and different, something delightful and healthful, something instantly successful. You do not have to wait, and linger and pay out a lot of money. You can stop it over night—and I will gladly tell you how—FREE. I am not a doctor and this is not a so-called doctor's prescription—but I am cured and my friends are cured, and you can be cured. Your suffering will stop at once like magic.

I AM FREE—YOU CAN BE FREE

My catarrh was filthy and loathsome. It made me ill. It dulled my mind. It undermined my health and was weakening my will. The hawking, coughing, spitting made me obnoxious to all, and my foul breath and disgusting habits made even my loved ones avoid me secretly. My delight in life was dulled and my faculties impared. I knew that in time it would bring me to an untimely grave, because every moment of the day and night it was slowly yet surely sapping my vitality.

But I found a cure, and I am ready to tell you about it FREE. Write me promptly.

RISK JUST ONE CENT

Send no money. Just your name and address on a postal card. Say: "Dear Sam Katz: "Please tell me how you cured your catarrh and how I can cure mine." That's all you need to say. I will understand, and I will write to you with complete information. FREE at once. Do not delay. Send postal card or write me a letter today. Don't think of turning this page until you have asked for this wonderful treatment that can do for you what it has done for me.

SOLDIER CARRIED BABY 13 MILES

"War brings out all one's best qualities," said Miss Helen Boulnois, who has just returned from visiting the wounded in the Craigleith Military Hospital, Edinburgh, at a meeting of the Municipal Chapter, Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, yesterday. She laid great stress on the valor and humanity of the soldiers.

"Nearly every Highlander spoke of their children, and many of them carried photos of their babies," she said. "One Belgian mother gave her baby to a soldier and he carried it for thirteen miles."

Miss Boulnois said that the men told her every story of German atrocities were true. One said the Belgians women used to cry to the English to kill them after the Germans had been through a city. The agony of those left half dead or terribly mutilated was awful.

LOST LIFE DEER HUNTING

Wounded Animal Attacked Huntsman While in Canoe.

LINDSAY, Ont., Nov. 13.—An unusual hunting fatility occured this week at Buck Lake, five miles south of Wilberforce, by which William Hughie, Jr., of that village, lost his life. Hughie had wounded a deer which attacked him in his canoe, upset him into the lake and mauled him badly. A companion, who heard his cries for help, swam out to his assistance and brought him ashore alive, but he died shortly afterwards from the wounds inflicted by the deer and immersion in the icy water.

SUBMARINES DESTROYED BY BRITISH AND FRENCH

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Standard publishes an interesting report, which the official press bureau permits, that two German submarines have recently been lost. There has been no official announcement of either, but The Standard says there is every reason to believe that two submarines which have been raiding in the English Channel have been satisfactorily accounted for.

According to information from credible naval sources, one of these submarines has been carrying out a series of daring reconnaissances in the vicinity of Dover, and a patrolling cruiser has reported attempts by this German craft to torpedo her. Patrol flotillas from Dover searched for the submarine, which was believed to be lying on the sea bed.

During one of the very calm days for which the end of October was notable, bubbles were seen rising at a certain point. Vessels went out and dredged over this area in a similar manner to mine-sweeping, but using a powerful chain with explosives attached. This was dragged at a depth that would catch the submarine if lying there. After patrolling several times over the area there was a heavy explosion, followed shortly by large quantities of oil rising to the surface. Those who took part in the operation have no doubt that a German submarine was blown up.

The second case concerned a German submarine that had been particularly troublesome to ships of the Dover flotilla that had been engaged in the bombardment of the Belgian coast. Seamen state that she was trapped into believing herself safe in an attack and then was heavily shelled and sunk.

It was also reported yesterday that a French torpedo boat rammed and sank a German submarine off Dunkirk.

DE WET FAIRLY BEATEN.

Official Statement Given Out Regarding South African Battle.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Nov. 14.—The official statement of the defeat of Gen. De Wet, commanding the rebel forces, by Gen. Louis Botha, Premier of South Africa, his companion in arms in the Boer war against Great Britain, is published to-day.

Gen. Botha moved out from Winberg in the Orange Free State after De Wet, who it was reported had 2,000 rebels with him. Co-operating with Gen. Botha were Gen. Lukin, Col. Britz and Col. Brand.

Botha's plan was to surround De Wet's force by a concerted drive against it. But for Gen. Lukin and Col. Britz being prevented from coming up in time the plan would have succeeded.

As it was, Gen. Botha, with whom Col. Brand co-operated actively, inflicted a heavy defeat on De Wet, making 250 prisoners and capturing two laagers, which contained motor cars and 100 carts and wagons.

An incident of the battle was the catpure by the rebels of Commandant Fouche and forty men. But Gen. Tobias Smuts effected a brilliant rescue of Fouche and his men. Among the prisoners whom the Government forces released were Senator Stuart and the Magistrate of Winberg, whom De Wet made prisoners when he entered Winberg. De Wet's defeat has made a profound impression in the Orange Free State.

MORE MONEY NEEDED.

LONDON, Nov. 14—The announcement of the presentation of Parliament of a measure to vote a credit of $1,125,000,000 was issued officially yesterday afternoon. This money is intended to cover not only the naval and military expenditures, which may be incurred before March 31, but all the expenditures which may be necessary or desirable to meet trade or other abnormal conditions created by the war. This further sum, added to the previous credits voted by Parliament, brings the total of credits to $1,625,000,000.

The credit of $1,125,000,000 will cover the $14,550,000 advanced to Belgium, the $4,000,000 advanced to Servia and sums necessary to facilitate the raising of funds for his Majesty's dominion and protectorate and by the allied powers.

Advances in the way of loans will be made also to the dominions and the allied powers for the purposes of war and to meet difficulties arising out of the war, and to local authorities and other bodies for relief work.

Weather Reports Stop.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—"By order of the Government," says an announcement in Le Figaro yesterday, "the communication of meteorological information is suspended. We are only able, therefore to give the temperature of Paris."

This step is believed to have been taken as a precautionary measure, the Government weather and predictions being of potential value to German commanders, especially those of the navy.

German Deserters Watched.

LONDON, Nov. 14. — A despatch from Amsterdam says it has been confirmed that secret agents were posted at Antwerp to keep a watch on deserting German soldiers. Organized relief is going ahead for the necessitous and unemployed. Last week 8,000 families received support.

OFFICIAL BULLETINS.

French War Office Says Vigor of Enemy's Attacks Is Waning.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Last night's official bulletin says: "From the sea to the Lys, the German action has not been so strong, and some parts of front we ourselves have taken the offensive.

"We have progressed to the south of Bixschoote.

"At the east of Ypres we have retaken by a counter-attack a village which had been lost.

"At the south of Ypres we have repulsed an offensive movement of the Prussian Guard.

The afternoon announcement says:

From the sea coast as far as the Lys, the fighting has been of a less violent character than on previous days. Several efforts of the Germans to cross the Yser Canal, at the western outlet from Dixmude and at other points of passage in the Amont district, were checked. Generally speaking, our positions have been maintained without change.

To the north, to the east, and to the south of Ypres, attacks of the enemy were repulsed, at the end of the day at different points of our line and that of the British army.

From the region to the east of Armentieres and as far as the Oise, there have been artillery exchanges and actions of minor importance.

In the course of the last few days of foggy weather our troops have not ceased to make progress little by little. They are to-day established almost everywhere at distances varying from 300 to 500 metres from the network of barbed wire entanglements of the enemy.

To the north of the Aisne we have taken possession of Tracey-le-Val, but with the exception of the cemetery to the northeast of this village. We have made slight progress to the east of Tracy-le-Mont and to the southeast of Nouvron, as well as between Crouy and Vregny, and to the northeast of Soissons.

In the vicinity of Vailly, a counter attack by the Germans, delivered against those of our tropos who had re-taken Chavonne and Soupir, was repulsed.

In the Argonne there has been a violent artillery duel.

There has been minor progress in the vicinity of St. Mihiel and in the region of Pont-a-Mousson.

A surprise attack delivered by our troops against the villages of Val and Chattlion, near Cirey-Sur-Vezouse, made it possible for us to capture a detachment of the enemy.

It is reported that snow is beginning to fall on the heights of the Vosges Mountains.

Negotiates For Cattle Entry.

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—Hon. Martin Burrel, Minister of Agriculture, stated yesterday that he was making efforts to obtain modifications of the order issued by the United States Government prohibiting the entry of Canadian cattle, sheep, or swine into that country.

It is admitted that no infection has been discovered in Canada and it is presumed that the United States authorities are afraid of the return of infected cars.

Childhood Constipation

Baby's Own Tablets are an absolute cure of childhood constipation. They never fail to regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, and unlike castor oil, their action is mild and they are pleasant to take. Concerning them Mrs. G. Morgan, Huntsville, Ont. says: "my Baby was greatly troubled with constipation and colic till I began giving her Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are surely the best remedy I know of for little ones as they quickly banished all signs of constipation and colic. I would use no other medicine for baby." The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DIXMUDE IS RETAKEN

Kaiser's Costly Gain Proves of Little Use to Them.

Allies Carry Town at Point of Bayonet — Franco-British Positions Along Entire Line Are Held, Especially at Lombaertzyde Where a Desperate Attack Was Repulsed.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Germans have not had long in which to congratulate themselves on the seizure of the mass of ruins which was once the ill-starred town of Dixmude. Towns are more dangerous to hold nowadays than forts. The Germans have been sprayed with shrapnel and shattered by high explosive shells until extermination threatened them. Thus, when a force of gallant French marines appeared with bayonets fixed and guns leveled at the charge, the Germans became convinced that it was not worth the candle to resist further. Hence, Dixmude is again in the hands of the allies.

The northern section of the line is intact, but the situation further south remains obscure. It seems that the Germans have made slight advances before Ypres, but it is doubtful if they can hold the village of Sainteloi, which they claim to have occupied, officially.

At La Bassée, as at Antwerp, the Germans are attempting to drive a wedge into the allies' line by concentrated heavy artillery fire. It is known that many heavy guns are at Givenchy, whence they are bombarding Bethune. In a month the Germans have gained five kilometres (three miles) at this point. The fortress of Calais is 100 kilometres from La Bassée, and the time it would take the Kaiser's troops to reach the Channel at this rate of progress can be easily estimated.

There has been a considerable bulge in the line at La Bassee for some time. North and south of it the allied troops hold positions on either bank.

On Wednesday the Prussian Guard launched an attack against the British positions at Armentieres, but was unable to make any headway because of the deadly shooting of our men. They were supported efficiently by guns firing shrapnel. The attack was courageous, but finally petered out.

The fury of the German attack lessened somewhat yesterday, and there was a general lull all along the front, as compared to the activity of the past few days. It is believed that the enormous losses by the Germans in the past few weeks have contributed to this slackening of the assault.

North, east and south of Ypres the British have thrown back onslaughts in great force, and continue to hold all of their positions. French and British troops are defending every foot of ground on the Belgian front with a tenacious resistance that has completely baffled the Kaiser's troops. They have absolutely nothing to show for weeks of campaigning, and their tenure is extremely precarious in the positions won.

Lombaertzyde, recently taken by the allies, was the scene of fierce fighting yesterday, the Germans striving to drive back its defenders. The town is of great strategic value. Nieuport is again the centre of a fierce engagement, the Belgians being supported by a steady play of the allied fleets' big guns. German submarines are reported to have made several attempts to clear away the big sea fighters, but without result.

Letters found on German prisoners show that the infantry and artillery ammunition of the invaders is running low, the men having been advised to husband their supply whenever possible. Other letters and orders found on men and prisoners show that great masses of second and third line troops have been in Flanders for ten days, the German leaders hoping to break through the wall of steel which confronts them by sheer weight of numbers. In order to meet this condition, the allied lines have been heavily reinforced by French infantry, including some of the best regiments in the service and several of the chasseur battalions which have rendered such distinguished service on the centre.

There are many indications of a resumption of the fierce fighting along the Aisne, which has been stilled while the Flanders operations were in progress. The French have retaken Tracy-le-Val and driven the Germans as far northeast as a cemetery beyond the town, where they are now entrenched.

East of Tracy-le-Mont, southeast of Nouvron, and between Vregny and Crouy, the French have made advances. Northeast of Soissons successes are also reported in the neighbodhood of St. Mihiel and north of Pont-a-Mousson. A surprise attack delivered by the French against German forces in the villages of Val and Chatillon was notably successful. The outposts were driven back in headlong flight, and before the Germans could muster increased strength a part of their troops were cut off and compelled to surrender.

German efforts to dislodge the French from their trenches at Berry-au-Bac, and from the villages of Soupir and Chavonne, were without result.

In short, along the Aisne, around Verdun and in the Argonne, the Germans are evincing renewed strength, and it is not unlikely that they will abandon their unfruitful attempts along the Channel in favor of a concentration at other points. The German headquarters at Ghent are expected to be removed within a few days.

Six Escaped From Tsingtau.

LONDON, Nov. 14—Capt. Zimmermann and five other German officers escaped from Tsingtau before the surrender of that city and have arrived at the German Embassy in Pekin, according to The Frankfurter Zeitung.

Business transactions in Mexico are paralyzed as a result of the shortage in change.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 13.—Wheat prices on the Winnipeg market opened unchanged to ½c lower, oats ½c higher, and flax 2c to 2½c higher. Heavy selling operations developed later, causing sharp declines. Peace rumors were again prominent, causing the break. Trading was fairly heavy in options. Previous to noon wheat had declined 1½c to 1⅝c, and showed weak. Closing figures were ¾c to 1⅛c lower for wheat, oats ½c to ¾c lower, and flax 2½c to 3c higher.

A feature of today's trading was the excellent demand for all grades of cash wheat by millers and exporters, yet prices went lower. Cash oats and barley were in fair request, while cash flax was in keen demand, and a number of sales were put thru at higher prices.

Inspections were 527 cars inspected Thursday as against 1448 last year, and in sight were 425 cars.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable today was very quiet, there being few firm bids in the market, and those that did come forward were 1s 6d to 1s 9d below what exporters offered to sell for last night. The local market for coarse grains was unchanged, with business slow.

Export trade in flour was quiet, but the local demand for small lots was fair at firm prices. The trade in millfeed continues active, and the tone is firm. Butter quiet. Cheese in good demand at firm prices. Eggs active and strong.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

PRINCESS PAT'S GO FIRST.

They Will Probably Reach the Firing Line Before the Others.

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—From word that has been received here it is understood that the first of the Canadian troops to reach the firing line will be the Princess Patricia Regiment. It will go to the front very soon and the next troops to follow them will not be the first contingent now at Salisbury Plains, but the reinforcements for the Princess Patricia Regiment to be sent from Canada.

Reinforcements for infantry are now calculated on a basis of 25 per cent. per month of the original force and reinforcements for the first two months are expected to be provided when the main body is sent out.

It had been expected that a certain amount of reinforcements would be sent along with the second contingent, but the request for two months' reinforcements for all infantry to go with the main body will mean that an extra six battalions, or six thousand men, will be required making a total of 21,000 to sail in January.

Rival Leaders Meet.

"The formal meeting of the commander-in-chief of the Japanese army, Lt.-Gen. Kamio, and Capt. Meyer-Waldeck, formerly governor of Tsingtau, occurred on Nov. 10 at the Moltke Barracks. Capt. Waldeck will go on board a transport bound for Japan to-day. The total number of prisoners taken is 5,000.

"The ceremony of entry by the Japanese troops into the city of Tsingtau is expected to take place Nov. 16."

Zeeland Ashore Near Sorel.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—In a blinding snowstorm the Red Star Liner Zeeland, operating in the White Star-Dominion service, ran ashore at noon yesterday in Lake St. Peter, about 10 miles below Sorel. She stuck fast on a mud bottom, although the reports indicate that she has not suffered damage. It is thought she may be released before long, although some dredging may possibly have to be done first. About 100 passengers were taken off the Zeeland and brought to Montreal on Grand Trunk and Quebec Southern trains.

Those Tinkling Tango Tunes

are simply fascinating when reproduced by The EDISON Phonograph. There's no fun trying to do the new dances — the Fox Trot, Maxixe, One Step, Hesitation, Boston, Three Step—to the jerky drumming of a piano. There's no tempting tempo.

But when the National Promenade Band swings into the seductive "La Bella Argentina" or "Waltz Hesitation", and reproduces the full, rich melody—the sway and swing of it—the fascinating rhythm of it—then you have something worth dancing to.

The new EDISON PHONOGRAPH
(THE INSTRUMENT WITH THE DIAMOND POINT)

There are other special Dance Records available to owners of Edison Phonographs — several hundred other Band and Orchestra records, many of which are suitable for the new dances —and any number of Tango songs like "Underneath The Tango Moon."

The new Edison Phonograph has the diamond reproducing point, unbreakable and long playing records, superior motors and construction, concealed horns, and the Cabinets are made in true Period styles, in perfect harmony with the finest furniture.

Come in and hear the EDISON play all these tinkling tango tunes—play them as they should be played—then you'll appreciate just how much pleasure you can have with an EDISON PHONOGRAPH in your own home. 139

DOLLAR A YEAR HIS SALARY

At a salary of $1 a year Frederick W. M. Burmeister has been appointed custodian of the cut-off channel front and rear-range lights in the Patapsco River, Baltimore.

Custodian Burmeister has but few duties to perform. In addition to his salary he has the free use of a home on the lighthouse reservation. He could not be carried on the Government payrolls without a specified salary, and to give official importance and responsibility the salary of $1 was agreed upon.

It was not stated whether he would be paid monthly, as is the department's custom, or let it accrue to the end of the year.

A HOUSEHOLD MOTTO

No longer de we gasp with admiration at the woman who tells us that the things she had in her house came from more than half the civilized countries in the world. It's all very well for the hunter to point to the heads on the walls of his den and tell you that he shot them in nine provinces, or on three continents, in lands of almost eternal snow and lands of tropical heat, on mountain, moor and plain over a whole atlas of maps. It's very interesting to listen to the aged athlete tell you from how many sporting associations and under how many flags he gathered his great mugs and shields and illuminated addresses. But the man or woman who strikes a thrill into us nowadays is the man or woman who can take us over the house and demonstrate that from garret to cellar, from front verandah to the steps at the back kitchen door, and even out into the woodshed, the things which make that home a home were made in Canada, the land of homes, and under one flag, the Union Jack: There should be in every home a "Made In Canada" society whose business it is to increase the number of things in that home made in Canada. Some may call it patriotism. It isn't. It's only common sense and the best kind of selfishness.

An Easy Way To Stop Head Noises

GOOD ADVICE FOR THOSE WHO FEAR DEAFNESS

Men and women who are growing hard of hearing and who experience stuffy feeling or pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by buzzing rumbling sounds in their head like water falling or steam escaping should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble. Headnoises are almost invariably the forerunners of complete or partial deafness and most people suffer from them constantly. Sometimes these head noises become so distracting and nerve racking, with their never ceasing "hum" they drive the sufferer almost frantic and complete nervous breakdown and even violent insanity have been known to result.

Thanks to a remarkable scientific discovery made recently in England it is now possible to almost instantly lessen the severity of these headnoises and in a very short time to completely and permanently overcome them. With the disappearing of the head noises, the hearing also greatly improves and very frequently can be restored to normal. This English treatment is known as Parmint and can be easily and safely self administered at home. Leading druggists in Belleville and vicinity now have it in stock. Get from your druggst 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength) and mix it at home with ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and hearing improves. Parmint is used double strength in this way not only to reduce, by tonic action, the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tube and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum but to correct any excess of secretion in the middle ear and the result it gives are both remarkably quick and effective.

Important.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St. Montreal, P.Q., who make a speciality of it.

INJURED PARTY PROGRESSING

The young man, John Louis, of Shannonville, who was brutally treated, is progressing as well as could be expected. A detective has been placed upon the case, with the result that the parties who were responsible to the injuries inflicted upon Louis, will in all probability be dealt with by law.

THE MARKET

The attendance upon the market this morning was good, and prices were fair for all produce offered for sale. Butter sold at from 30c. to 32c per pound; dressed chickens from 75c. to $1.25 per pair, according to size and quality; ducks from $1.25 to $1.50 per pair, and geese from $1.25 to $1.40 each. Fresh eggs were scarce and sold readily from 35c. to 40c. per dozen, the former price being for basket lots.

Star Course Last Night

There was a splendid attendance to hear Dr. Byron Stauffer of Toronto. Mr. Stauffer is pastor of the Bond St. Congregational Church, where gather such crowds as overtax the church. Last night Mr. Stauffer delighted the audience with his lecture entitled "My Funny Pennsylvania Dutchman." It characterized the mixed traits of the Dutch, German and Swiss blended together. The lecture was highly instructive and replete with humorous anecdotes and stimulating philosophy.

Rev. Byron H. Stauffer, the lecturer, boasts of Swiss blood, being a descendant of the Swiss Radicals who emigrated to Pennsylvania about 1700 and became absorbed by the Pennsylvania Dutch mongrels, who lated emigrated to Canada in such large numbers. He is cosmopolitan, having lived in the United States and travelled extensively.

The Famous Tower Of London

Shooting Of A Spy Recalls A Period Of Interesting History

The execution of Karl Hans Lody, for espionage, in the Tower of London, calls attention once more to that historic spot. It is more than a century and a half since such an occurence stirred the feelings of the Londoners. The last to meet death in the Tower before Lody paid the penalty were Lords Kilmarnock, Balmerino ad Lovat, in conection with the Rebellion of 1745. Before the war now raging ends more may share Lody's fate, for the European game of espionage, or spying, is punishable with death, and the spies work all the time.

The Tower of London is interesting to the world chiefly because of its manifold associations. It is on the Thames at the southeast angle of the old walled city of London. It is composed of several buildings erected at various times and covers much ground. On its site a stronghold existed before William of Normandy invaded and conquered England in -066. With him, however, its history really begins. The chief buildings are the work of the Norman kings. It has been used as a royal residence, a mint, a state prison, a place of execution for sate prisoners, a national arsenal and museum. Blood has often flowed over its stone floors and dark deeds have been committed within its precincts. There have been thefts from its interior, and as late as last year the work of a suffragette attracted world-wide attention to it. Thousands of visitors enter its portals every year to see the relics on view. There the Crown jewels are kept for safety and there is a special staff with a constable as governor responsible for their safe keeping. The Yeomen of the Guard, or Beefeaters, are of the Tower of London. On the walls of the dungeons are scribblings made by the hapless prisoners who have gone to the gallows. In the chapel of St. Peter and St. Paul there lie the bones of many of the noted persons who offended the state or the head of it, and who, in consequence, were put out of the way of doing more mischief or causing more annoyance. By the execution of Lody, the spy of the German Government, the use of the Tower as a place of state punishment has been revived. It is possible that more such scenes will be enacted within its walls before the European Continent again settles down for a period of peace.

DREAD CATTLE DISEASE COMMUNICABLE TO HUMANS

U. S. Department Of Agriculture Urges People To Keep aWay From Disease

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Foot-and-mouth disease, now raging among cattle in fourteen States, is communicable to humans, the Department of Agriculture announced to-day, but its effect rarely is serious. The department urged, however, that humans keep away from diseased cattle to avoid spreading the infection, and recommended the use of pasteurized milk.

POVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 13.—Fears that the foot-and-mouth disease had spread to human beings were expressed by Federal and State authorities to-day. Four children of a Providence man who owned infected cattle were found to have sores in their mouths. A boy of fourteen, who had taken care of the cows, had the most pronounced symptoms. The children have been examined by several doctors, but the nature of the disease has not been determined definitely.

ACQUITTED OF THEFT CHARGE

COBOURG Nov. 14.—(Special.)—Oscar Cronkwright of Trenton came up for trial before his Honor Judge Ward here on the charge of having stolen a sum of money from Mr. Peacock of Colborne. Leading citizens of Trenton including the Mayor and Chief of Police, testified to Cronkwright's good character. He was acquitted. W. F. Kerr appeared for the Crown. T. F. Hall defended Cronkwright.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior

IN FOUR CAMPAIGN VETERAN ENLISTS

Dr. Anthony Caramelli will Go With Second Contingent, in Army Medical Corps.

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.——A veteran of four campaigns, Dr. Antony Caramelli, 215 Sherbrooke street west, has volunteered for service with the second contingent, in the Army Medical Corps.

Dr. Caramelli is one of the most noted members of the local Italian colony and he will be no novice, having served with distinction in several campaigns. He was with the Italian forces at the battle of Alba-Carima, and was severely wounded in this engagement, being left on the field for dead; his two brothers were killed in the same battle. He later served with the British forces in the Soudan, mostly in the column of Sir Archbald Hunter, and was with Lord Kitchener's expeditionary force at Faskoda.

Dr. Caramelli volunteered for service with the Russian Red Cross on the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war, and was at Mukden with the Russian forces when General Kouropatkin surrendered, with 200,000 men, to the Japanese. He was also in the Boer war. Afterwards travelling through Central Africa from the Pacific to the Atlantic studying berberi and yellow fever.

Dr. Caramelli's offer of service has been accepted, and he is now preparing to leave.

WHY LIVING IS HIGH

Largely Due to Housewives' Ignorance, 'Tis Said

NEW YORK Nov. 13.—Ignorance on the part of housewives is responsible in large measures for the high cost of living, in the opinion of Mayor Mitchell's food supply committee, of which George W. Perkins is chairman. Working girls and those reared in the homes of the well-to-do are equally at fault, according to the report.

Young women employed in offices, stores and factories, before their marriage, have little or no practical training in the art of housekeeping, the committee finds. The same is true, it is held, of the daughters of prosperous families, where the mistaken notion prevails that it is not necessary for them to learn housekeeping.

The committee contends that extravagance and waste in households, headed by women not trained for homekeeping lead to large and unnecessary drains upon the city's food supply.

GERMAN DEFEAT RUSE

For Has Not Kaiser Cut off Ferocious Moustache Ends

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 13.—The Kaiser has clipped off the upstanding ends of his moustache. This startling change in the Emperor's appearance was observed the last day or two when the Emperor was passing through central Germany on his way to inspect a large number of recruits completing their military training. The loss of the aggressively erect moustache extremities robs Wilhelm II. very much of his semi-ferocious martial appearance, and some persons seem to think that stamps upon his face the outlines of a dejected depression. When it was observed some time after the beginning of the war that the Kaiser's hair had turned white, no one paid much attention to the change, but the removal of the moustache ends has struck the public imagination and, strange as it may seem, has done more, perhaps, than anything else to convince the population of Berlin that the war outlook is becoming bad for Germany. The absolutely chastened appearance of the Kaiser, due to the absence of his moustache ends, is attributed to his sadness about the German reverses. In these circumstances his advisors may urge him to allow his moustache to attain its former conspicuous dimensions.

WEATHY PRINCE WIELDS GREAT POWER

Business Adviser and Friend of Kaiser--May Have Had Much to do in Bringiug About War

His serene Highness, Prince Maximilian Egon zu Furstenberg, Kaiser Wilhelm's bosom friend as well as business associate, is a queer mixture of medievalism and up-to-the-minute modernity.

Born in Bohemia 51 years ago, he traces his ancestry back to one of the paladins of Charlmagne and his forebears were poor as compared with other families of similar rank.

It wasn't till 18 years ago that by the death of relatives he became head of the family and owner of its estates. But though one part of him is steeped in tradition going back to the beginnings of Teuton imperialism, another part somehow qualifies him to be a modern king of trade.

PRINCE FURSTENBERG

Since he got hold of the Furstenberg fortunes he has multiplied them many fold. Report credits him with being now worth $100,000,000. He owns breweries in Bavaria, coal and iron mines in Silesia, vast timber and farm tracts in Baden, Bohemia and Austria, and huge blocks of buildings on the choicest sites of a number of Europe's foremost cities.

He and the Kaiser have shared in many a business as well as hunting adventure.

Austrian to the core, he may have had more to do than most folks surmise with guiding the throw of the die which meant the greatest of wars.

GERMANY'S "DADDIES"

Nickname for Landstrum Whose Men Are Better Eaters Than Fighters

The Petrograd correspondent of the London Standard quotes a Russian journalist as authority for the following:

Russian soldiers have discovered a good nickname for the German Landstrum. They call them "Daddies." The Landstrum consists mostly of fat, middle-aged burghers of very good-natured appearance. Yet it is the same class of troops who distinguished themselves during the numerous incursions of Germans into Russian territory in the earliest days of the war.

The "daddies" are not especially noted for brutality, but they are keen on food and drink and they treat the local population mercilessly in the matter of victuals.

On the other hand it is enough to set going a rumor of the approach of Russian troops in order to get rid of them, for the "daddies" develop extraordinary speed in a retreat "nach dem Vaterland." They are often caught by reconnoitering Cossacks. When they stand among a crowd of prisoners they seem to lose all the warlike appearance which they display when invading. They appear a peaceful group of good-natured family men.

So inoffensive do they look that Russian soldiers cannot feel any hatred for them. They shower upon them good-natured remarks such as "Oh you daddy! Fancy you going to war with such a fat stomach!"

Feared a Loss

"I call it an unwarrantable insult," said the company promoter, angrily.

"Why, what's wrong?" asked his partner, in surprise.

"Did you see what that old scoundrel did?" roared the company promoter. "He carefully counted each of his fingers after I shook hands with him."

A SOLDIER'S LOAD

The personal equipment of a soldier, exclusive of his arms and clothing, is called his accoutrements. It comprises knapsack, belt, braces, etc. The rest of his equipment, which he must carry with him all the time while he is in the field, is as follows:

A rifle, weighing about 9 pounds, with bayonet, ammunition, entrenching tool, etc.; his clothing, including a change of underwear, identification disk and first-aid dressing, in addition to his field uniform; food, generally one emergency ration, or two in the case of the Germans; water bottle, mess tin, knife, fork and spoon (the Russians carry merely a wooden spoon stuck in the boot); a great coat and half of a shelter tent. The total weight of this equipment varies. In the British army it is 47 pounds; the German, 38 pounds; the French, 44 pounds; the Russian, 61 pounds.

ORIGIN OF AMBER

"Clotted Sunshine" of the Ancients is Merely Fossilized Gum

Scientists have said that the high value placed on gold is purely a hereditary instinct, coming down to our present enlightened generation from our sun-worshipping ancestors, who saw, in its color, some kinship with the life-giving "orb of gold" above their heads. The same explanation has been given for the esteem in which amber has always been held—"clots of sunshine," the glowing globules have been called. Whether because it was "sun-stuff" or simply because it was pretty, the fact remains that in all ages amber has been coveted by the ladies for their adornment, and has ranked as a gem from the stone age to the present day.

Great mystery the ancients made of its origin, appearing as it did mysteriously and by chance on the shores of many seas, but amber is now known to be the resinous gum of prehistoric trees fossilized in certain strata of the earth's crust, and here and there laid bare by the gnawing of the ocean currents, to be rolled up in rounded pebbles or nuggets on the nearest strand.

Amber has been found on all the coasts of Europe, and sometimes in inland lakes and springs, or in the shafts of coal mines. The so-called amber of Burma and other parts of the East seems to be rather a non-fossil gum similar to the copal which is used in making varnish. It seems probable that all the genuine amber is directly or indirectly of European origin. The chief deposits of amber are on the shores of the Baltic, near Konigsberg, the only place in the world where the collecting and mining of the precious fossil is an organized industry. From these shores the Greeks and Romans obtained their chief supply, and here it is, to-day worked into pipe mouthpieces, or ground up to serve as a basis for varnish. Another use of the powdered amber is in Oriental temples, where it is burned by Mohammedans and by Buddhists as an incense.

It is as a gem, however, that amber is most attractive; and here the pale yellow product of the north is surpassed by the many-hued nuggets which the streams and shores of Sicily yield. Not only does yellow deepen into orange and orange into a dark rust-red—it even occurs in greens and mellow blues, and is rendered more lovely by the fluorescence of its surface, causing a shifting play of colors with every change of light. Such treasures, however, are rare, and when found compete not unequally with diamonds in value. The surface of cut amber dries and darkens with age, adding variety to the hues obtainable. A wide variety of objects has been found embedded in amber, and much interesting knowledge of early insect life has been obtained by zoologists from the specimens thus immortalized—a form of immortality which has also provided a favorite figure for the poets.

A Touch of Vanity

It's a curious thing the way vanity works. It is seldom that anyone is vain of the things of which he might have a right to be vain. The successful and learned physician regards himself as a mere student in his profession, but displays an inordinate pride in his skill at card tricks. The woman who shows real ability in financing her household and making home delightful for her family is quite modest about her gifts and rejoices only in her No. 2 slippers. But, after all, a touch of vanity is an excellent thing in a woman. It makes her very amiable. The diplomatic wife, however, will never squelch her husband's pet vanity, but will make it a key to his management.

Whole Village Was Exploded

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The Eclair prints a letter from a French soldier recently engaged in the Argonne fighting, which, as the writer says, forms an interesting pendant for the bald words of the official communique telling of German attacks being repulsed. He describes the French retirement before a superior force from a village commanding an affluent of the Meuse intersecting that part of the Argonne, where a wide road followed that valley.

"We soldiers," he says, "couldn't understand why the Colonel abandoned the village, which was evidently of strategic importance, without a struggle, but we obeyed orders and retired sullenly.

"After traversing a quarter of a mile, there was a sudden terrific explosion that staggered the ranks. Simultaneously the officer, smiling, gave the order to retrace our steps.

"We re-entered the village, which was a scene of frightful desolation. The houses were utterly destroyed, and everywhere there were huge gaping holes in the ground, which was strewn with a thousand corpses. A dense pall of powder smoke hung over everything.

"A peasant who witnessed the catastrophe gave the details. Shortly after our departure two brigades of Bavarian and Saxon infantry occupied the village. Some were entering houses and others were resting.

"Then came the screaming noise of a shell which exploded near a church. An explosion like an earthquake followed, almost annihilating the enemy. Only a few stunned survivors were left on the outskirts.

"The Colonel had mined the village before retiring. The German assault was definitely repelled at this point."

BACKYARD GARDENS

Any Kind of Soil Can be Utilized For Vegetable Growing

Many a backyard could annually produce vegetables that would cost $150 if they were purchased at the grocer's. Any patch of ground will grow some kind of vegetable if given half a chance. No matter what kind of soil one has to deal with, it can be made to grow things. If the soil is sandy it will grow early crops to great advantage, but will not stand the hot, dry weather of summer as well as clay or loam. For this reason most sandy soils would be improved by the addition of several inches of barnyard manure and heavier soil plowed in in the spring and thoroughly mixed. Heavy clay soil is the toughest proposition for a gardener to handle. A loamy soil is the best for general cropping. If there is sod in the new garden it should not be stripped off as is often done, but should be turned under, where it will decay and improve the texture of the soil.

Another feature is fertility. Barnyard manure or commercial fertilizers must be used in abundance. It is difficult to give advice on the kind and amount of fertilizer to use. This depends upon the character of the land and the nature of the crops to be raised. All seedsmen have for sale combination fertilizers that will answer the purpose of most amateur gardeners. Good drainage and lots of sunlight are other necessary factors in getting best results.

Catholic Register: "You are too British," writes a subscriber to us. We are just as British as we have always been, and as we will, please God, always be. We cannot well understand how anyone can be too British now.

DONT'S FOR GUN-USERS

Legislation, in some degree, may prevent a good many incidents. The remedy, however, largely lies with the individual himself and at the risk of repeating what may seem like a list of platitudes, the following "don'ts" are set down for the consideration of sportsmen readers:

Don't point a gun at any person in fun. It is always the gun that "we did not know was loaded" that goes off. Then only time to point a gun is when you intend to kill.

Don't carry a loaded gun or rifle in a buggy, automobile or any other kind of vehicle.

Don't drag a gun under a fence with muzzle pointed towards you.

Don't allow your boy to handle a gun without first drilling him thoroughly in the way it should be used. To allow him to pick up his knowledge in his own way is courting disaster.

Don't use a cheap gun. They are apt to explode when using heavy charges.

Don't load your gun until you actually get to business. At all other times it should be empty.

Don't get intoxicated.

Oil Loosens Tight Screws

If screws, gas fittings, the sides of bedsteads, or anything else of the kind become tightly fixed and cannot be moved, the following method will generally be found to loosen them. Pour a little oil on the tight parts, and then hold a lighted candle underneath until it is warm. You will then find that it is easy to separate or unscrew the fixed parts.

ONTARIO'S PREMIER APOSTLE OF THE NORTH

Hon. W. H. Hearst an Energetic Man who Knows the Wilderness by First Hand Experience

From private life to the Premier's chair in six years, taking all the hurdles of office as he went, is the record of the Hon. William Howard Hearst, K.C., Premier of Ontario. His career has been a remarkable one, and it is all the more astonishing when one remembers that outside of New Ontario the name of Hon. Mr. Hearts was more or less unknown when he was called upon to form a government.

Since the North is a country which lives on work, Mr. Hearst was able to thrive and learn that lesson of economy which is taught by stern living. They say that he numbers his personal friends by thousands, and that they are among the class which breeds strong men—lumbermen, miners, settlers, loggers, and the hundred-and-one other castes which grub a living out of the North. In fact, the Hon. Mr. Hearst's liking for the North amounts to a passion. It is his dream, it is his rising star before which he is always willing to extinguish all other torches. Doubtless

Hon. W. H. Hearst.

Mr. Hearst understands the heart of the country, for assuredly he has lived close to it. While others idled away summer vacations at fashion resorts, the Hon. Mr. Hearst time and again headed exploration parties into the unknown and undeveloped wilderness, and each time he came back with first-hand information, which in the end enabled him to fill the chair of Lands, Forests, and Mines in the Ontario Government.

When a railway company approached the Government with a proposition to tap the timber and clay belts, the Hon. Mr. Hearst did not take their statements as say-so, but he climbed into wilderness togs, spent some weeks scouting through the district in question, and came back prepared to talk business. Some people say that Mr. Hearst is urbane, at the least he is very approachable. Approachableness does not always mean that the visitor gets what he wants, but he does go away with the impression that the Hon. Mr. Hearst is personally interested.

Combativeness is one of the Premier's strong cards, but Irish ancestry brings that to him quite by nature. Upon the floor of the House he has always proven himself willing to take up the gage of battle. When it comes to fighting verbal battles he doesn't stoop to hitting under the belt, and he seldom wastes time on the witticisms which might be expected from one of his nationality. Straight, outspoken, and as vigorous as a battering-ram are his political speeches, stripped entirely of fancy oratory. In speaking the style is pretty much his own, and has sometimes been likened to the fire of a machine gun, both in its directness and its vigor. At the same time it is to be noted that it is a very peculiar speech of the Hon. Mr. Hearst which does not find place for some reference to New Ontario and its development.

Personally, when circumstances permit him to drop the garb of office, the Hon. Mr. Hearst is a very pleasant man. He can forget that there is such a thing as work in the world, but he quite fails to harken to the call of society, or sport, or any of the dozen and one other cries of private interest or private amusement.

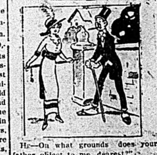
Steel Railroad Ties

Steel railroad ties are being extensively used in Switzerland. At present 65 per cent. of the Federal Railways employ them. They have the form or profile of a trough into which shape they are rolled at the mills. The ends are bent down, the profile of the trough being thus closed. Holes are provided for the attachment of the rails by means of clamp plates and no tieplates are used under the rails. The weight of the trough profile is 55.47 pounds per meter and the ties complete, with holes bored, weigh 159.84 pounds each. According to the requirements of the Federal Railways an entire trough piece shall admit of being bent together on its back without showing any breaking fissures.

Canada's Great Fisheries

Canada has the most extensive and best stocked commercial fishing waters in the world, including 5,000 miles of Atlantic and 7,000 miles of Pacific coast, and 220,000 square miles of fresh water. The value of the yearly catch is about $30,000,000. Canada's fishery equipment is worth $24,000,000; and something like 88,000 persons are employed by the industry.

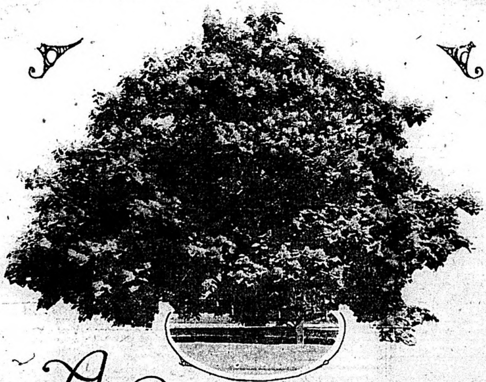
Only 10 per cent. of Canada's foreign trade is carried in Canadian bottoms; the rest by British and foreign ships.



He—On what grounds does your father object to me, dearest?"

She—On yours, principally. He says if he catches you here again he'll set the dog on you!

BEAUTIES OF ONTARIO



A Catalpa Tree

A CATALPA TREE

London, Ontario, famed as the "Forest City" of Canada, our compliment to its beautifully shaded streets and parks, has one distinction, from the horticultural point of view, that no other city in Canada possesses. This is a rare specimen of the exotic shrubby-climber, the Catalpa Tree.

For size, wealth of foliage, clustering panicles, and gorgeousness, it stands unique in the Dominion. The Catalpa Tree is one of the most desirable ornamental trees. It has simple leaves, but with terminal panicles of showy flowers, and long linear pods, with winged seeds. Some species (as in illustration) show divided leaves and trumpet-shaped flowers. The general effect is one of showiness.

Although shrubby in form, the Catalpa tree, in the tropics, and in the Orient (China and Japan) often grows to the tops of the highest trees in those countries. The wood is light and soft, but very durable, and the bark, which is very bitter, is much used by medical practitioners as a vermifuge. In the industries the wood has various uses, according to particular species.

From one of the species comes the gourd out of which are made a familiar and popular calabash smoking pipes. Another species is used extensively for railway ties, because the wood, though light and soft, is exceedingly durable, withstanding the corroding effects of rain and snows. And another species, West Indian, but known as French oak, is highly prized both for its architectural value and for its tanain.

London, Ontario, besides being one of the most beautiful and prosperous cities of Canada, has an important local history and tradition. For instance, Governor Simcoe, thought of naming the city-to-be "Georgina-on-the-Thames, but finally decided on the shorter and more famous name London, the decision being taken on the advice of Englishmen who kept in their hearts a warm affection for their native city in England, the metropolis of the British Empire.

The Canadian London is also known as the centre of one of the most fertile and wealthy sections, not only of Ontario, but also of the Great Dominion. With a population of more than 50,000, it is noted for the enterprise of its citizens and for the manifold industries it sustains. It is a military post and the seat of of one of the best universities in the Dominion. Well laid out, its streets beautifully trees and paved, London is noted for its fine churches and public buildings. All in all—in site, in environs, in highways, waterways, in residential architecture and public buildings, and in parks, London, on the main line of the Canadian Pacific, is quite one of the finest cities of the Dominion of Canada.

GURNEY OXFORD

An Extraordinary Stove for Three Reasons

APART from its splendid workmanship and material—there are three points to a Gurney-Oxford that make it an extraordinary stove. The first is a point in fuel economy.

The fire rests on specially designed grates. The air gets at the fire and the fire burns the air. The fire gets lots to breathe. The coal burns with a snap—gives off abundance of heat and leaves no wasteful clinkers.

The second is a point in economy and comfort. The Gurney-Oxford Economizer (not to be had on any other stove) is a simple handle that regulates the fire. When the fire is not in use, turn the handle to notch No. 6 and it goes down to a spark but never goes out. Turn to notch No. 1 and almost immediately the fire is bright and hot again.

The third point is one of vital importance, because it means "results." Running from the fire box to the oven, and over and around it, is a system of divided flues. The Gurney-Oxford oven is as hot at the front as at the back. Everything entrusted to the Gurney-Oxford oven is properly, thoroughly cooked—and this point, perhaps more than any other, has made the Gurney-Oxford famous.

We not only want you to read of these features—we want to show you the stove itself and explain its simplicity, its construction, its advantages. It is its own best advertisement. We are anxious that you should see it.

It is apparently settled that no general law to suspend mortgage payments will be enacted in Ontario, says the Toronto News.

Toronto News asks: "Who were the miserable scoundrels that hinted at a general election while the patriotic Liberal politicians were eschewing all political controversy and standing by the Empire with aching feet and backs almost broken with the burden of patriotism?" Has our contemporary lived all these years next door to The Globe without ascertaining the inside facts?

FOR THE YOUNGER GENERATION.

Velvet is very much the thing on all occasions, and, for street wear, a velvet suit trimmed with fur is just the thing. The wide skirt is unquestionably the new thing. One noticed at the openings the absence of anything resembling a bustle. The above model was of dark green velvet and black fur.

THE CARE OF THE PIANO

Extreme heat or cold, or draughts, are as fatal to the health of a piano as to that of a human being; therefore it should never be placed too near a fire or a window.

The best place to choose is a part of the room which is out of a draught and where a fairly good temperature is maintained.

The keys should on no account be washed, as that discolors the ivory. If they are stained rub the stains out with a little lemon juice and salt. If sticky, rub well with a dry wash leather.

A piano should never be placed hard up against a wall, as that deadens the sound, as do also books or ornaments on it.

No piano can possibly be heard to advantage in a room which is either heavily curtained or overcrowded with furniture.

Do not let baby hang on the piano. It is very amusing to watch his fat little fists banging away—but the piano—that suffers.

A good plan to ensure the correct temperature of the room in which the piano stands is to keep a growing plant there. So long as the plant thrives you can tell that any changes of heat and cold there may be are not sufficient to affect the piano.

Great care should be exercised in the choosing of a tuner, otherwise the instrument may be ruined. It should be tuned every three months. The best plan is to make a yearly contract with a good tuner.

Above all things, keep the top of the piano open, or rust will in time spoil the mechanism. It is only in very large concert halls, however, that it is necessary to have the top of the piano open when playing for "full sound."

LORE OF THE SEA

Drastic Rules Which Portuguese Sailors Once Observed

Some remarkable advice to seafarers is given in an old Portuguese book, published for the guidance of mariners. Amongst other things it deals with the rights of captains to assault sailors, and the methods in which the attacks are to be legally met.

The sailor is advised to bear calmly any verbal abuse that an irate skipper may hurl at him, but if words passed to blows he was to run away into the bows and firmly take his stand beside the anchor chain.

Should an infuriated master, armed with a belaying pin or other lethal weapon, chase him to his stronghold, the mariner was to slip around to the farther side of the chain. Should he still be pursued, he was to call his messmates to witness that the master had broken the rules by circumventing the chain.

Then, at last, he was to defend himself! Other little matters of discipline are set out, and they show a noble effort to make the punishment fit the crime.

The ship's clerk, a privileged person who acted as bookkeeper, purser, and cargo-master, was liable to be branded in the forehead, to lose his right hand, and to forfeit all his property—if he made a wrong entry in the ship's book, or connived at such an entry.

A seaman who fell asleep on his watch was only put on a diet of bread and water, unless the offence was committed in hostile waters. In that case he must be stripped naked, flogged by his messmates, and ducked thrice in the sea.

If he were an officer, however, he would only lose all food except his bread, and have a pail of water flung over him from the head downwards.

MARVELLOUS FEATS OF TRAINED PIGEONS

High-flyers Which Stay up in the Air For Eighteen Hours And Even Longer

To tell the uninitiated that pigeons will fly for over eighteen hours at a stretch, without food, water, or a rest, is probably to find oneself accused of pandering to one's imagination. Yet such is the astounding truth. Amongst the birds of those who make a hobby of breeding and training pigeons to fly for long periods among the clouds, specimens which regularly fly the clock around are to be numbered by the thousand. Week in, week out, in the districts where high-flying—the name by which the pastime is known—is followed, pigeons leave their aviaries at the break of day, go right up into the blue almost beyond the vision of the human eye, and remain flying there until the light falls in the evening. It is, in fact, by no means uncommon for them to keep up their aerial evolutions until darkness comes on, and the owner cannot see the birds of which he is so justly proud.

Somersaults in the Air

The variety of pigeon which flies the longest time is the Flying Tippler, and consequently it is the most popular. Other flying breeds are the Cumulet, the West of England Tumbler, the Performing Tumbler, and the Roller. The two last-named perform in the air as they fly, the Tumbler tumbling and the Roller rolling. The actions of the latter are most peculiar. A Roller will stop in its flight and turn somersaults downwards in an almost perpendicular line, sometimes actually striking the ground and injuring itself.

Thousands of English working men find recreation in the sport of high-flying. The great centre of the sport is Sheffield, which is as much the headquarters of the hobby as Newmarket is of the racing world.

Many clubs exist throughout England and these bodies organize the sport and promote the flying competitions.

How Contests Are Conducted

The manner of conducting these contests, briefly described, is as follows. A time is fixed by the club for the birds to start. This is as early as possible, say 3.30 a.m. or 4 a.m. An official referee is sent to each competitor's home to take the time, and see that the conditions of the fly are properly carried out. The referee remains until the birds drop. At the liberation hour the owner allows his "kit" of birds, usually three in number, to leave their loft. The pigeons, revelling in their liberty, immediately soar aloft, and commence flying with an easy, graceful action. Although they do not usually go very far out of sight of their home, they cover quite a wide area, flying backwards and forwards and round and round.

The conditions usually are that the "kit" has to be seen by the referee once in the first two hours of the fly, and once in each subsequent hour.

Calling the Pigeons Home

When the birds show signs of coming down, the owner puts out what is known as the "droppers." This is usually a white pigeon of some other variety—a white Fantail, for instance. When this bird appears on the loft top the high-fliers see it, and if they have been properly trained they fly down to their aviary, though it sometimes takes hours to get flying pigeons to "drop." The referee records the time up to the moment at which the owner puts out the "droppers." The pigeons have all to "drop" within a prescribed area, and within a fixed length of time, or they are disqualified.

The world's record fly is eighteen hours thirty-two minutes and there are many proud owners whose birds have stayed aloft for eighteen hours.

EDUCATION IN CANADA

There are 2,141,939 children, between 6 and 20, in attendance at school in Canada according to the latest available figures. Of this total, 1,801,779 (or 84 per cent.) are Canadian-born, 142,560 British-born, and 197,570 foreign-born.

Persons in Canada who can read and write, of population of five years of age and over, 88.98 per cent.

Persons who can read only: One-half of one per cent.

Illiterates 10.50 per cent.

Ontario still leads in percentage of those able to read and write, namely, 93.17 per cent.

Of 2,197,663 males of voting age, 90.57 per cent., or 1,990,341, can read in some language.

REAL BOYS LOVE DOGS

But Many a Lad's Heart Is Saddened Because He Cannot Keep One

"Aw, Ma, lemme keep him. Aw—Ma!"

"I won't have the dirty beast around. See the mud he's brought in already."

And so the boy led the dog out of the house and the two sat on the back steps and communed together, both faces wearing very much the same expression.

There were three unhappy beings because of the mother's ultimatum—for the mother herself, though she triumphed, felt something wrong in the atmosphere.

Good housewives, however, have always forbidden dogs in the house. Dogs don't stop to wipe their feet before coming in. Dogs shed hair on carpets. Dogs, in the exuberance of their feelings, jump on one and muss one's dress. Dogs lie on cushions and the best sofa. And dogs have fleas. Ugh!

NO PEDIGREE—JUST A DOG

What if the very soul of one's boy longs for the intimate companionship of a dog? What if one's husbands would be a happier man with the understanding eyes of his dog sending warm glances toward him every time he moved?

But these are not considerations for many women. Rather a spick-and-span house than a happy boy or husband, if it's a question of a dog. A lot of women never can see anything attractive about a dog. They have eyes only for his faults—just as they manage to have eyes only for the failings of everybody in their environment.

Of course a dog can be an awful nuisance. But so also can a small boy be an awful nuisance. It's largely in their training—and in the way you look at the boy, or the dog. Many a boy is actually starving for affection because his mother just tolerates him and makes no effort to understand him.

Entirely True

"What do you think of married life?" asked the henpecked man, addressing the youthful bridegroom.

"Bliss is no name for it," said the young husband, enthusiastically.

"You are right," said the henpecked one, gloomily. "Bliss is no name for it."

MENTAL THERMOMETER SHOULD REGISTER HIGH

Don't be governed by your mental thermometer.

It may be the plaything of mood and an uncertain liver. Never mind. Get rid of the moods and fix the liver.

It may be used to greeting you in the morning and dictating to you the day's work, how much shall be done and how well it shall be done. If so, forget the habit.

Learn to rise above your mental thermometer. Learn to be master of it. Learn how to change it to normal.

If it has dropped by reason of some failure of the day before, or some disappointment, look it squarely in the face the next morning and laugh at it.

Blow it full of sunny, happy, optimistic thoughts and make it get so busy that there will be no other possible thing for it to do but rise.

When your mental thermometer is right, the chances are that your body will be in a normal, healthy condition.

And when both are right, health and happiness are pretty apt to get together under the same roof.

THE POOR MAN'S BANK

An Institution Which Might Advantageously be Copied in Canada

The Atlanta Loan and Savings Company is the official title of an institution in the Georgia city which everyone calls "The Poor Man's Bank."

It was founded by Mr. W. W. White as a protest against the loan shark and lives up to its name in spirit and act. Its basis of credit is honesty and labor, the only capital a poor man has. To draw money from this bank all the borrower needs do is to get three reputable persons to endorse him as honest and industrious. On this security "the poor man's bank" will advance money for a term of 52 weeks on dollar-a-week payments. Eight per cent. interest is charged. Each borrower, whether his loan be large or small, subscribes for one or more shares of stock, according to the amount of his loan. This stock is hypothecated to secure the loan. At the end of the 52-week term the borrower may surrender his stock and cancel his note or he may re-invest it in bank stock. In its first year it made 1,115 loans for a total of $150,552, and it has practically put the loan shark out of business.

YUKON TIMBER WASTED

Immense Fire Damage Caused by Careless Travellers

Writing from the Yukon a gentleman interested in the conservation of natural resources, said: "I know of no other place in Canada where our limited area of timber should be so zealously guarded as in the Yukon. We have many uses for wood here, whereas it is not so necessary in other parts of Canada. We must depend entirely upon it for fuel, and we cannot import timber for mining purposes as it would be too expensive and we would have to let low grade mines remain undeveloped. Notwithstanding these facts, our timber land is burned over and thousands of cords destroyed every year. Most of this destruction could be avoided. The fires mostly occur along the Yukon valley on account of people making their way into the interior in small boats. They land on the bank of the river to cook their food. After this is done they return to their boats, leaving the fires to go out or to ignite the nearby woods just as may happen. This could be stopped by increasing the Mounted Police patrol, and this should be done as early as possible."

DUST FROM FLOOR RUGS

It Carries Germs Far and Wide—Some Common Sense Suggestions

When a woman beats her rugs on her porch, the filth and disease goes right into the house.

She has no intention of spattering germs around promiscuously, and she might be offended if her neighbor suggested that there were any in her rugs. It is for each person to spare a thought for others without the unpleasantness of being told to do it which will add to the world's health and happiness. Rug dust, injurious, disease-breeding rug dust, carrying consumption and colds, a woman will throw into her own and her neighbor's home without a second thought. In some cities there are ordinances providing that "no mat, carpet or cloth shall be shaken or beaten in any street or public place."

This may seem absurd to many, and unnecessary to others. It is neither. But several hundred inspectors and a dozen laws cannot successfully curb nuisance-makers who only work a few minutes a day, and then on the porches of their own homes. The only remedy is public sentiment and reasonable thought for others. It is a well known fact that janitors have more than their share of consumption. There is every reason to believe men making rug-beating their business fall a prey to disease. Watch one in a vacant lot. See the swirl of dust in which his head is enveloped.

All the more reason, then, why the everyday woman in the everyday home take the time and trouble to beat her rugs in some place where the dust will not have a chance to float into her neighbor's rooms or her own rooms, and endanger the health of all the inmates. There are many pneumatic cleaners on the market now which may be purchased at reason-

ABOUT CONSUMPTION

Throughout the world, consumption claims more victims than any other disease. It takes toll of every age in life, more often than not of the fairest and best. Efforts are being made to stamp it out in every quarter of the civilized world. It is in our city, it is in every city. Each year its grim harvest is reaped. What can be done, is being done. Here and there, success is achieved. One case, right in Toronto, that was given up by the doctors as hopeless cheated the grave of its victim. This case is of interest to everybody, especially so for the reason that all hope of recovery was abandoned at the time Mr. Copeland began his treatment. The doctors had given the patient only 8 to 10 days to live, yet he was pulled through by the power and merits of Mr. Copeland's medicine. This was in March, 1911, and the patient, Mr. David Warnock, is TO-DAY in the city of Toronto ALIVE and WELL. We publish here his own testimony, and he is, moreover, willing to state the facts of his condition at that time and of his recovery to anyone suffering from consumption.

Mr. W. R. Copeland:

Dear Sir.—Now that I am well and strong again, I write to state that the fact I am alive to-day witnesses to the merit of your medicine.

My doctor, a specialist, said that I had the worst kind of consumption and that it was impossible for me to live. He gave me only eight to ten days before the disease would terminate fatally. He also said that it was no use in treating me, as I was too far gone.

I was left to die, but a friend of mine told me about your medicine and procured me a bottle. Without much hope, I tried it. It did wonders. First the weakening perspiration stopped and the food I took stayed in the stomach. After a second bottle, I commenced to regain my apetite and was up in a few days of the time that the dotor said I should die. Five weeks later I was at work and have been working ever since.

I wish everyone could know the worth of your medicine, especially those afflicted with consumption as I was, for I undoubtedly owe my life to its use. I will at all times cheerfully answer any correspondence, and you are at liberty to publish this letter if you think it will help to recommend your medicine to others.

I remain, gratefully yours,

Not only has this medicine proved remarkably beneficial in cases of consumption and weak lungs, but it has also conquered stubborn cases of chronic bronchitis that withstood for over 30 years all that medical men could do for them. Letters received bearing out this statement are from well-known persons living in Toronto and copies of same will gladly be sent on request.

This medicine is known as "Copeland's Cure for Consumption," and is procurable at drug stores at $1.00 a bottle or direct in a plain wrapper from Copeland Medicine Company, Limited, 511 Pape Avenue, Toronto. 6-14

Making Cabbage Digestible.

Cabbage that is crisped in cold water before it is cooked or served raw will agree with almost every one if you do not commit the error of overcooking it. Overcooked, water soaked cabbage is an unpardonable sin against the powers of digestion. If you find that the peas, green beans, cabbage, etc., have grown beyond their tender youth you may resort to the use of a little baking soda added to the water in which they are boiled. But use soda very judiciously. The slightest excess will injure their flavor.

EXERCISE YOUR LUNGS

Deep Breathing as Necessary For Health as Frequent Bathing

Millions of people live on "half breathing" all their lives. There are trusts on food, and trusts on drink and trusts on clothes. But there is no trust yet on air. There is enough, and to spare, of this one great health-giving, life-prolonging commodity to go around. It's free and it's fresh all the time. Hardly a day passes in which some individual does not proudly say: "I never did try deep-breathing, though I understand it is a very good thing to do."

In plain words "deep-breathing" is an ordinary washing of the lungs. It is as important, or more important to cleanse the inside of the body than the outside. It is more injurious to breathe worn-out air than to forget or neglect to bathe. The person who cultivates the habit of taking long breaths will be as hungry for them as he is for food. If you haven't yet formed the habit—which is not in any sense a fad, begin now.

Take at least one real breath a day and see how it goes. Multiply this by ten, giving ten inhalations and ten exhalations at each time. The result will be 100 real breaths during the day. Breathe these long breaths from the open window or better still out of doors. Follow the general rule taking the breath in through the nose and exhaling it through the mouth.

It is so simple that most people forget to do it. It is so efficacious as an aid to health that it is a wonder anyone neglects it. Try taking one real breath.

OLD FRIENDS ARE THE BEST FRIENDS

When middle age creeps along, and one is forced to realize the fact that the best of youth and its ambitions have passed for ever, one of the greatest comforts—especially to a woman—is the recollection that, during the course of her life, she has gathered around her some real friends.

I suppose you will be moving farther afield, now, was asked of a woman, whose husband has just retired from business life.

"Well, my dear," she answered, "we've decided to keep where we are, and I'll tell you why. All our married life we have lived here, and we don't like the thought of parting with the friends we have gathered round us. They know my children, I know theirs; we have spent many happy hours together, and have sympathized with each other in the little ups-and-downs that have occurred at different times. If we went away I've no doubt we should make new acquaintances, but they could never compensate us for the loss of such tried and true old friends."

It is a wise woman who realizes and values so fully the happiness that such friendships brought into her life. The fair-weather friends fade quickly away in times of trouble and need, but it is then that the light of real friendship shines truest and strongest. It is not always material aid that can soothe a breaking heart, or ease a worried mind. It is the word of genuine sympathy, and the honest grip of a friend's hand that can act as a balm and give one courage to go forward.

LENGTH OF SCHOOL HOURS

New Rule Adopted in Montreal Does Away With Home Work

What should be the "hours of labor" of the school pupil? A lively discussion of this question started among Montreal teachers and parents by a new rule inaugurated by the Catholic School Board. Formerly the pupils of the Catholic Schools of Montreal attended classes from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., and were given a certain amount of work to prepare at home for the following day. The new schedule brings the pupils to their desks at 8.30 a.m. and keeps them at work until 5 p.m. with an hour for luncheon and two brief intervals for relaxation. These hours are for the pupils of the third and higher grades. The idea is that the pupils shall have no home work, but shall devote the extra hour in the afternoon to preparation of the next day's lessons. This sounds like a good arrangement, in theory, but in practice it is found to have several faults. The teachers declare that in the higher grades one hour is not sufficient for the pupils to prepare their work for the next day's lessons, and, of course, under the new arrangement the pupils are not compelled to do any work at home. Therefore one hour's preparation is all they get. The parents complain that the new regulation increases the difficulty of looking after their children. Under the old-time schedule when the children were dismissed from school they were generally allowed the remainder of the afternoon for recreation. After supper they settled down to prepare their lessons. Now there are no lessons to be done after supper, and parents say that it is much harder to keep the youngsters off the streets at night.

If the capture of guns by all the armies continues at the present rate, none of them will have an artillery left by the time the war is half over.

CATTLE VERSUS SHEEP

Profitable Raising Depends More on the Man Than Animal

There is always more or less discussion as to which is the more profitable the cow or the sheep. This, like all other live stock and agricultural comparisons, depends more on the handler than on the stock.

All kinds of farm animals will succeed and become profitable when properly handled. This we see on all sides; it has been proven. The question nowadays is, will the owner or handler of live stock make a success out of the business of handling stock? The business itself is a success, but the handler often does not know anything about the business of handling stock, and therefore fails in obtaining the best results or even moderate results.

The sheep is a profitable animal on the farm and has made a very profitable animal on the range when systematically handled. The cow is a profitable animal on the farm when used as a dairy feature, and the farmer who has an aptitude for dairy management and dairy work will make a success with the cow in this line of industry.

The relative cost of keeping the cow and the sheep cannot be figured accurately, owing to the variation in the size and feeding capacity of these animals. The experiences of those who have thought they observed tests closely are widely different in their estimates, ranging all the way from five to ten sheep, as an equivalent to a cow in matter of feed consumed and expense of keeping. All sheep and all cows are not on an equal basis in consumption of feed. It is fair, however, to presume that on an average of six sheep can be kept on the feed required for a 1,000-pound cow.

The keeping of a few sheep on the farm where there are pastures fenced to hold them is a safe proportion of any farmer. Even the dairy farmer may find it profitable to keep a few sheep, as they are good weed destroyers, and in wool and mutton will return a good profit for feed consumed. They are not injurious to cow pastures, as many believe, especially where but few are kept. The keeping of cattle and sheep on the same pastures at the same time is not recommended; yet all over the eastern sheep-raising districts the cow pastures were usually the run of a few sheep of extra quality, those being given a little extra care for show or breeding purposes. The keeping of a few sheep is the best way to solve the question of profit, also of the matter of whether you would like to engage in sheep-raising as a business.—The Maritime Farmer.

IDEAS FOR BUILDERS

Keep a Note Book in Which to Enter Practical Suggestions

If you are going to build a new house or remodel an old one, any one who has been through the mill will advise you to be sure that you have twice as much money as you think you will need. This is good but annoying advice.

A more hopeful word comes from a recent builder who for a year before his new house was built kept a scrap book of suggestions. Two scrap books, in fact, one of notes and one of pictures. The book of notes was divided into so many pages for each room. For instance, there was the heading "Kitchen," and underneath was noted any practical or attractive ideas pertaining to kitchens that the owner had observed.

Then came "Pantry," with this suggestion:

"Back opening to refrigerator so it may be filled from the porch."

"Window slides into the kitchen."

Room was given space for notes on decoration and ideas.

In the other scrap book were kept illustrations and photographs of windows, doorways, staircases—anything that might prove helpful for use in the designing and building of the new house.

The result was that when the house finally came to be built, the owner knew exactly when a cupboard was to be built, what kind he wanted, when the kitchen was designed he knew in every detail what made for convenience, and throughout the house there was not a room to which attention had not been given.

BRITAIN OWES MUCH TO BELGIAN PEOPLE

It would hardly be too much to say that Britain owes some of her most important manufactures to the people of Belgium.

In early days Britain was not exactly a manufacturing nation, but owed its prosperity to its flocks and herds. It was famous for its sheep, the wool of which was exported to Flanders for the manufacture of cloth.

Large colonies of Flemings entered England at one time or another, either brought over for a set purpose or coming as refugees. Henry I. colonized parts of South Wales, from which he had expelled the Welsh, with Flemings, who were of no little use in keeping that one-time turbulent country in order.

Flemish mercenaries were employed by Stephen in his civil war, and it was during the time of Henry I. that a number of Flemings, rendered homeless by the irruption of the sea, crossed over to Norfolk and founded the worsted industry.

THE CZAR INCOGNITO

A Story Illustrating the Kindly Side of His Character

The Czar tells this story of his visit to Paris in 1896. He wanted to go to the Luxemberg, if possible, incognito, so a closed landau was provided, and the Czar, accompanied by one attendant, stepped in and drove off without an escort. Arrived at the Luxemburg the attendant got out of the carriage to make sure that a certain official was there to receive the Imperial visitor.

The Czar, left alone in the carriage, looked out of the open window at a ragged boy playing on the curb. Their eyes met and the youngster stared hard. He had never seen the Czar, but he had seen his photograph, and the likeness to this foreign-looking man in the carriage, was certainly striking.

"Supposing it is Nicholas," he muttered, and he resolved to make sure at once. Stepping boldly up to the carriage he shouted in at the window, 'How's the Empress?"

Picture his stupefaction—for he really thought he was only having a good joke—when the unknown foreigner replied with a smile:

"Thank you, the Empress is well, and we are both delighted with our visit to your beautiful city."

"Then," says the Czar in telling the story, "my true-born Parisian friend immediately lost his tongue, and stared at me in astonishment. But after a few seconds' hesitation he raised his cap with a dignified flourish and stalked gravely away, his nose very much in the air."

WOMEN WANT TO HELP

Hundreds Volunteer For Work at Home or Abroad

Remarkable testimony to the eagerness with which women want to fill the places of men who have been called away from Britain to fight for their country is given by the Women's Emergency correspondent, who under the leadership of the Duchess of Marlborough, has compiled a register of upwards of 15,000 names of women who desire to be of service. "How diverse the jobs they seek," says Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, in writing of the work of the Women's Emergency Corps, "may be guessed by the entries of over 100 interpreters—none of whom speak less than four languages—and some of them eleven—of more than 200 expert horsewomen ready at a few hours notice to serve and who are quite capable of managing or working in remount camps."

"Many of these, having shot and camped all over the world, are eminently suited for rough work. Then there are 150 expert motorcyclists eager for patrol or despatch work, and endless stalwart young women for such jobs as omnibus conducting, milk deliveries, gardening and the farm work that is generally done by lads of 19 and 20.

Cost of Germany's War

A Berlin paper published a very interesting estimate of the weekly cost to Germany of keeping her armies in the field.

The food consumed by the armies in a week was given as 27,200 tons of bread, 7,289 tons of meat, 54,600 tons of potatoes, 912 tons of coffee, and 620 tons of sugar. The total cost of these is worked out at $20,000,000, and the cost of transport of food at $5,000,000. Provision for wounded and prisoners of war would run into at least another $3,000,000. Cost of war material and the upkeep and replacement of horses is put down at $40,000,000.

Thus a week's fighting, including smaller items not already mentioned, must cost Germany $70,000,000.

Killed After Act of Mercy

A shell exploded in a group of French soldiers and a dozen or more were killed. One man, who had both legs and an arm blown off, implored his superior officer to kill him. The officer put a bullet through the soldier's heart, saying, "It is better, poor devil." The officer opened his mouth to speak again and a bullet struck him in the mouth and killed him.

COMMON POISONS AS SEEN BY SCIENCE

Physician Discusses Drugs, Dangerous and Otherwise and Tells How to Counteract Effect

To the average man or woman the word poison means "something that kills." To the scientist poison is "something which, under controlled conditions, makes by chemical action some change in living tissue, in a way that interferes temporarily or permanently with what that tissue or organ usually does."

When an acid merely puckers the lips, it is not a poison. But when the action of that same acid reaches the point where the lips cannot for a time do their expected work, then the lips are said to be poisoned.

When indiscreet persons kiss little babies, and transfer their ever-present microbic inhabitants to the infants, and no infection arises, poisoning cannot be said to have resulted. If, unhappily, the kiss sets up a sore throat or a cough, bacterial poisoning has occurred.

It is then easily understood that such habitually used poisons as coffee, tea, tobacco, alcohol, are really poisons only when the blood, brain, or brawn, is altered. In old age, infancy, and debility, their toxicity is plainly discernible. Since conditions of health are not often perfet, it may also be concluded that such drinks are more often poisonous than otherwise.

Some poisons such as morphine, alcohol, and nicotine have the curious property of forming anti-tissue neutralizers. That is, their action upon the human body is much like that of disease germs. The individual becomes immune to small doses, at the same time acquiring an irresistible longing for the drug. When your son comes home some fine day, and is unaccountably pale, sick at the stomach, and groaning, you may safely conclude that he has smoked his first cigar or cigarette. He is poisoned by nicotine.

After the first smoke or the first drink the body juices begin to manufacture excessively those strange anti-bodies, that tend ever afterwards to crave the particular cigar or beer that established the first violent reaction.

No matter how active the poison, a healthy person will always find his or her body making a desperate effort to counteract it. The stomach battles valorously to expel carbolic acid, which is made harmless by alcohol and whisky. The intestines bring up reinforcements in the way of a ferment or secretion to render vitriol, muriatic, or other acids, harmless.

Mineral acids such as sulphuric, nitric, aqua regia, and muriatic, are at once destroyed by ammonia or soda. These form salts and soaps. These antidotes must be given quickly, or the acids will eat through the throat and stomach linings. Then the surgeon's work begins!

Of the patent medicines, household remedies, and drugs that may, when taken by accident or mistake, prove poisonous, police records show carbolic, mineral, and prussic acids to lead. Next comes paregoric—erroneously supposed by mothers and patent medicine manufacturers to be without injury to infants—laudanum, opium, and the other morphine-containing liquids. Corrose sublimate, chloral, and acetanilid are not far behind, running neck and neck with arsenic and strychnine.

After sending for all the doctors in the neighborhood give the unhappy one milk and whites of raw eggs for mercurial sublimate poisoning; emetics for strychnine, acetanilid and headache poisons; and dialized iron for arsenic.

For paregoric and other morphine conditions permanganate of potash and coffee will neutralize the toxic drugs in the stomach and keep the sufferer awake until skilled aid appears.

No mother can have her medicine chest well filled without an emetic such as ipecac, alcohol for carbolic and headache poisons; dialized iron, baking soda and ammonia for acids, lemon juice and vinegar for ammonia and alkali poisons—and permanganate of potash ready for instant use, yet beyond the reach of curious tots.

The Hotel's Curse

A curious story is being told of a big London hotel which is now beating records for prosperity. When it was building all manner of mischances piled up the bill of costs, and things continued to go wrong.

One of the directors, with some belief in the occult, inquired into the history of the land on which the building stood, and found that it had once belonged to a monastic community whose abbot, on being expelled, had solemnly cursed the ground and declared that no enterprise connected with it should prosper.

Ascertaining that a monastery of the same order existed in Devonshire, the director went thither and prevailed on the abbot to go through the form of removing the curse. His fellow-directors laughed when he told them the story, but the hotel has prospered ever since.

Address on Grain of Wheat

The Canadian Churchman tells of a wonderful piece of microscopic engraving accomplished by a Jewish farmer in Alberta, who wrote, on a grain of wheat, in Hebrew characters, an address of welcome to the Duke of Connaught. The address contained 300 letters, and was so fine as to require a powerful microscope to read the inscription.

COMPLAINTS FROM CHINA

Far Away Wives Want the Money Husbands Earn in Montreal

Acting upon complaints which came all the way from China, prominent Chinese merchants in Montreal appealed to Chief Campeau for his assistance in a final attempt to put a stop to the wholesale gathering of married and single laundrymen in the various joints along Lagauchetiere street in that city, where they are lured by the fan tan game to hazard their earnings of a week at one sitting around the plain wooden table, over which the keeper presides, and [illegible] unceasingly.

The gambling and its baneful influence was so far-reaching that far-off China was heard from in the complaint of the nine wives of as many Chinamen, who were sending no money home on account of fan tan.

The letters sent to Montreal declared that for a long time gambling has diverted the flow of money from the wives of many Canadian Chinamen, to the pockets of the fan tan gambling houses, and tales of hardship were recounted by the women, mothers of children, whose fathers were doing nothing for their maintenance.

When Chief Campeau was appealed to he readily accepted the offer of the delegation of Chinese merchants who agreed to place him in touch with the meeting places of the Tongs, where gambling was likely to take place. Heretofore it has been a difficult job to catch Chinamen at a fan tan game, and it is declared that the number of successful raids do not come anywhere near in numbers the ones which brought no results, other than to find a meeting of Chinamen with nothing in sight to indicate that a game was in progress. Sentries are placed as far away as one hundred yards, and the semaphore signals of Boy Scouts are a poor second compared to the speed of the sentry once the police appear in sight.

Our Gift to you of this $5 Bible

No difference how many Bibles you now have, this one MAKES PLAIN the subjects by pictures printed with the type; so of all others, this is the USEFUL Bible for all. PRESENTED by the

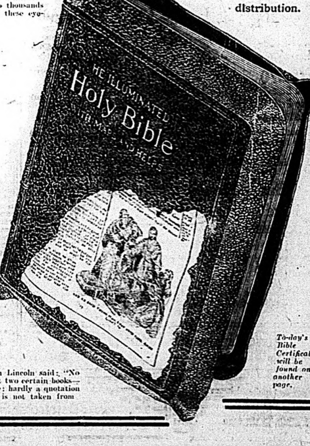
to its readers who will ever be grateful for the opportunity offered by this grand educational distribution.

In addition to the 600 beautiful text illustrations are full page plates of the famous Tissot pictures in handsome colors. As Edward W. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, says: "This Bible is not a meaningless picture book. The illustrations serve a distinct purpose. They enrich the text, but they do more—they intelligently EXPLAIN it, so that many a hitherto obscure passage assumes to thousands a new meaning through these eye-teaching pictures."

You will enjoy this Bible, whether you belong to church or not, for its "eye-teaching" pictures make it of rare educational value to all.



This is what Abraham Lincoln said: "No library is complete without two certain books—the Bible and Shakespeare; hardly a quotation is used in literature that is not taken from one of these books."

Because a woman of Butler County, Kentucky, whipped her daughter-in-law, night riders paid a visit to her home with the avowed intention of beating her and all her folks. In the fight two of the riders were killed and another badly wounded by the intended victims. If all the lawless ones in old Kentucky are so opposed when they go on their periodical rampages, the sport of night riding is likely to become most unpopular.

In the November examinations for the Civil Service for 65 vacancies, there are now no fewer than 1,300 candidates writing in various cities. Of these there are 300 writing at Ottawa, many of them being now employed in the departments. The large number of candidates is due to the business disturbance in the country owing to the war and the desire to obtain permanent positions under the Government.

One thing that will impress all concerned is the statement that something like a hundred and forty members of the English House of Commons, more than a fifth of the whole, are absent on military duty, some in France or Belgium, some on service at home.

When you meet the man with the tin pail at six in the evening, can you look him in the eye when you know you are helping to drive him out of a job by refusing to buy the things he and his fellow-workers are making?

TRIBUTE TO GHURKAS BY CROWN PRINCE

Now that some of the Ghurka regiments are on the firing line it is interesting to have a genuine German estimate of those particular fighting men.

Here, at last, is a word of truth from Berlin, written by the Crown Prince himself in the sporting volume he published two years ago under the title, "From My Hunting Day-Book." Describing his tiger hunt in the Ganges Delta, and the necessity of having enthusiastic drivers, he wrote:

"We thought it wise to bring several Ghurka policemen with us for this very purpose. The Ghurkas hail from Nepal on the northeast frontier of India, and in type they resemble the inhabitants of Eastern Asia. They might almost be mistaken for Japanese, and are the best soldiers the English possess in India. They are small, but extraordinarily wiry and tough little people, who fear neither hell nor the devil."

In which case they are hardly likely to fear Germans.

LOYAL PRINCES OF INDIAN EMPIRE

Stirring Patriotism of Men Whom Kaiser Thought Would Rise Against England

The Kaiser, it is said, counted upon an uprising of India's forces when he declared war against Great Britain, for had his spies not told him that the natives were seething with discontent against British rule? Never was a monarch more woefully misled and mistaken, for with one accord the rulers of the native States in India, who number 700 in all, rallied to the defence of the Empire and offered their personal services and the resources of their States for the war.

India sent over 70,000 men to the front, and accompanying these were six Indian princes, who are worth at least $250,000,000. Even the veteran Sir Pertab Singh, the Regent of Jodhpur, would not be denied his right to serve King George, and in spite of his seventy years he went to the front, accompanied by his sixteen-year-old grandson.

Forefathers Were Enemies

The Maharajah of Baroda, who placed his troops and resources at the disposal of the British Government, is one of the most powerful of Indian rulers, as well as one of the wealthiest. His forefathers fought against Britain in the Indian Mutiny, but the Maharajah is proud and eager to be on the British side to-day. He rules over a State larger than Wales, and has an income which is said to be more than $10,000,000 a year.

Another familiar prince is the Maharajah of Mysore, who placed fifty lacs of rupees (about $1,650,000) at the disposal of the Indian Government for expenditure in connection with an Expeditionary Force. His State contains nearly 6,000,000 Hindus, who contribute the flower of the Indian army, and he is one of those Indian rulers entitled to the Imperial salute of twenty-one guns.

The Maharajah of Gwalior, in addition to sharing the expenses of the hospital ship, the idea of which originated with himself and the Begum of Bhopal, offered to place large sums of money at the disposal of the Government of India and to provide horses as remounts. He accompanied the British Expedition to China eleven years ago, and presented on that occasion a hospital ship for the accommodation of the wounded.

Natives Eagerly Contributed

Another potent Indian ruler is the Maharajah of Kashmir. He recently presided at a meeting at Srinagar, his capital, and delivered a stirring speech to 20,000 people, which resulted in the subscription of many thousands of dollars. Kashmir is one of the largest and most prosperous of the Indian States, and noted for its shawl weaving and lacquer work, while its silver and copper work is rapidly rising in importance among the Oriental arts.

Mention should also be made of the Maharajah of Patiala, who also went to the front. Patiala has a splendid record of loyalty behind it, for in 1857, when practically the whole of Hindustan revolted against the British, and the Sikhs were wavering, the Rajah of that day, with only one attendant, rode into the nearest British station and placed at the disposal of the Government not only his fighting men, but the whole of his treasury.

FLYING BY NIGHT

Military Airman's Calling Certainly a Most Perilous One

The aeroplane that flies by night is no longer secure from detection, because of the use of vertical searchlights. Still, the chance of its being hit is not sufficiently great to deter brave men from undertaking night scouting and reconnoitring.

Generally speaking, the military aeroplane stands an even chance of escaping destruction in an ordinary war; though in a war where a recklessness of death is shown, like the present one, the pilot in charge of a fighting aeroplane may have orders that, if he misses hitting an enemy's airship or aeroplane with his light quick-firing gun, he must be prepared to ram it or charge headlong into it, in which case death is almost certain.

Hatred For His Traitor Son

There is recorded an instance of stern patriotism from Alsace. An old French peasant welcomed the French army, gave the soldiers refreshment, and then urged them "to go out now to battle and kill my son, who serves with the German army."

A hale and hearty London veteran offered to start a fund towards raising a corps of veterans.

The British War Office is placing orders for goods in Canada. Why not line up with Kitchener and do a little Canadian-made buying yourself?

THE STRONG MAN OF SOUTH AFRICA

General Botha Rose From Private to Commander-in-Chief—Always Fair and Broad-minded

The decision of General Louis Botha, Premier of United South Africa, to take command of the South African forces, and fight for the Empire rounds out the career of a remarkable man who has always been loyal to his flag—loyal to Britain as well as loyal to the Boer Republic.

General Botha was born at Greytown, Natal, in 1863, and when the Boer war broke out he enlisted as a private in Kruger's army. He rose to be commander-in-chief of the Boer forces and won historic victories at Colenso and other places.

When in 1910 Great Britain, in accordance with its wise policy of allowing self-government to every colony and dominion in as full measure as possible, formed the Union of South Africa, with the Boers being given absolute freedom of action, Botha was elected the first Premier. His position has been a very difficult one. But in every crisis which arose he by strength, wisdom, and tolerance, safeguarded the interests of both British and Boers. He watched the interests of his fellow-countrymen, but recognized that British dominion in South Africa was a fact to be accepted and his generous nature recognized that self-government under British protection and British ideals must be the happiest condition which the Boers could live under.

GENERAL LOUIS BOTHA

In 1912 Premier Botha was confronted by an inevitable crisis—a political clash between the parties who had a few years before met in a terrible clash of arms. General Hertzog, the Minister of Justice, and the leader of the Dutch Irreconcilibles, started a bitter campaign against the British. Among other things, he objected strenuously to the part South Africa played in helping to maintain the imperial navy. The Union was then granting $400,000 yearly for that purpose and the Unionists demanded an increase.

Botha and Hertzog finally had an angry quarrel. Botha appealed to his Cabinet, practically all of whom supported him, and he then resigned and was asked by Lord Gladstone, the Governor-General, to form another Cabinet. This he did, with Hertzeg left out, and he has been Prime Minister ever since.

Personally General Botha is a very brave and very shrewd man, whose vision is wide enough to perceive the short-comings of the large number of Boers who have not enjoyed the benefits of education and whose views are narrow and bigotted. When he went to King George's coronation he was persuaded to wear knee breeches and the other regalia prescribed for a levee. Later he was made an honorary general in the British army. For those things he was abused by many of the men whom he formerly led with such great courage and skill in the South African war. And in taking his present stand he will be further abused by many of the older generation of Boers. But these old prejudices die, and when they are practically obliterated, as far as it is humanly possible to obliterate such things, the chief credit for bringing peace and prosperity to a happily united, well-governed South Africa, will belong to General Louis Botha.

THE FLAG INDUSTRY

British Navy Requires Cloth of Very Superior Quality

The flag industry is one of the industries which, during war time, do not fall into decay. But, even in normal times, flags do a flourishing trade, and it has been estimated that eight million yards of bunting, or enough of the material to make between ten million and twelve million flags of one kind and another, are sold every year throughout the United Kingdom.

Bunting in use for flag making is of two kinds, the woollen bunting, which is the finest variety, and the cotton stuff, which is cheaper, less durable, and less ornamental. The fabric comes in rolls, usually of forty yards, and is worth from $1.00 to $2.00 per yard, according to quality.

The most expensive bunting, such as is used for naval flags, is absolutely free from imperfections, and weighs just 5¼ pounds per piece of forty yards of ten inches width. The yard is evenly spun, and the warp and filling contain not fewer than thirty-four threads to the inch. The colors must be as "fast" as possible, and not liable to be seriously affected by being soaked continuously for twenty-four hours in fresh water, and then thoroughly washed in water with which is combined a good grade of laundry soap.

This is the kind of world struggle where the last ounce of real fighting strength is going to tell. Every ounce of goods made in Canada that you buy will be as telling as a bullet on the ranks of the enemy. It adds to our resources and depletes theirs.

THRILLING DEEDS WHICH HAVE WON V.C.

Most Coveted Honor Which British Soldier or Sailor Can Gain—Indian Mutiny Heroes

About sixty years ago the Russian fortress of Bomarsund in the Baltic Sea was being bombarded by an Anglo-French force. Suddenly a shell fired from the fortress fell on the deck of H.M.S. Hecla. In an instant a brave young mate seized it, and, with the fuse hissing between his hands, he flung it with a jerk overboard. That young mate—he ultimately became Rear-Admiral Charles Davis Lucas, who died a few days ago—was immediately promoted lieutenant and awarded the V.C., being the first to win that much-coveted decoration, although, owing to three other officers being of senior rank, he was the fourth actually to receive it from Queen Victoria.

Many a gallant deed on land and sea has, since that day, been rewarded by the bestowal of the little Maltese cross of bronze which bears the simple inscription, "For Valor."

The Victoria Cross had its origin in the Crimean War, and was primarily intended to be conferred upon junior commissioned officers and the rank and file. Neither rank, length of service, nor wounds, or any circumstance whatsoever can qualify for this noble badge, save a personal act of signal bravery performed in the presence of the enemy. The decoration was instituted by Queen Victoria in 1856, the Prince Consort being, it is said, its originator and the designer of the insignia of it.

Where Crosses Were Won

It would require a volume to describe the many acts of personal bravery which have won the V.C.; but perhaps the most heroic deeds were those performed during the Indian Mutiny, which provided the most V.C.'s. Altogether during that campaign 182 heroes won the decoration. The Crimean War accounted for 111, the war in South Africa for seventy-eight, the Zulu War for twenty-three, the Afghan War (1878-80) for sixteen, the New Zealand campaign for twelve, and the operations on the North-west Frontier of India (1897-8) for ten. These wars accounted for 432 crosses, the remainder, between ninety and one hundred, being distributed among the many other campaigns in Africa, India, and elsewhere that have been fought during the past half-century.

Each V.C. is made from bronze which once formed part of some Russian guns captured during the Crimean War, and although the medal itself is intrinsically worth only about 9 cents, a number of them have been sold at sales for $500 and over. The winning of the V.C. carries an annuity of $50, which may be increased to $250, to all except officers, but including those who have risen from the ranks.

Boys' Gallant Deeds

Several boys have secured the medal for valor. There was Bugler Hawthorne, of the 52nd Light Infantry, who gallantly tried to save Lieutenant Salkeld at the blowing in of the Cashmere Gate at Delhi on the morning of September 14th, 1857, and it was at Delhi that young Bugler William Sutton, of the first battalion 60th Rifles, on the eve of the assault of Delhi, voluntarily went close up to the walls to ascertain the state of the breach. He succeeded, and by the whole regiment was elected for the V.C. Like Hawthorne, he was a mere lad.

Later at Cawnpore we find Drummer Thomas Flinn, of the 64th South Staffordshire Regiment, actually charging the guns of the rebels with the short sword, the only arms of his rank, with which he slew in hand-to-hand combat two stalwart gunners.

In a few rare instances the V.C. has been won by more than one member of a family. The most conspicuous case is that of the Gough family, which can boast of three V.C.'s—General Sir C. J. S. Gough, General Sir H. H. Gough, and Lieutenant-Colonel J. E. Gough. The first two were brothers, and the last named is a son of the second. Major-General E. H. Sartorius and Colonel R. W. Sartorius provide another case of brothers winning the decoration. Another instance of a father and son winning the cross is seen in Lord Roberts and his gallant son, Lieutenant the Hon. F. H. S. Roberts, who lost his life in gaining the V.C. at the battle of Colenso. Lieutenant Roberts, as all will remember, won the cross in an heroic attempt to save the guns at Colenso in the Boer War, his cross by order of the late Queen, being awarded to Lieutenant Roberts' parents after his death.

Sailor in a Tree

The navy has always been proud of the manner in which Sir Nowell Salmon won the V.C. at Lucknow by climbing a tree, and from this dangerous and exposed position silencing the firing of a rifleman who was inflicting serious injury on the British troops. No man distinguished himself more, however, during the Mutiny than Sir Dighton Probyn. At the battle of Agra, when his squadron charged the rebel infantry, he was separated from his men and surrounded by five or six sepoys. He defended himself from various cuts made at him, and before his own men had joined him he had cut down two of his assailants.

At another time, in single combat with a sepoy, he was wounded in the wrist by a bayonet, and his horse was also wounded, but though the Sepoy fought desperately he cut him down. The same day he singled out a standard bearer, and in the presence of a number of the enemy killed him and captured the standard. These are only a few of the gallant deeds of this officer.

So many employes wished to enlist in one London bank that the men had to draw lots, in order to decide who should go.

TORONTO MAYOR IN THE ROLE OF CUPID

Asked to Find Wife for Merlin Man--Nationality the Only Objection--His Worship Waiting Replies to Offer

TORONTO, Nov. 16.—Evidently considering that one of Mayor Hocken's duties is to conduct a matrimonial bureau, Mr. Robert McCrank, of Merlin, Ont., who describes himself as "an engineer and machinist, 36 years of age," has written his Worship to find him a wife. The letter reads in part:

"I saw in a paper that any bachelor in need of a wife should apply to either Hamilton or Toronto. I am an engineer and machinist, 36 years of age, and do not drink or smoke. I kept house for my mother and myself last April, now I don't like boarding out. I will take a good wife as soon as I find what I want. If you can give me the address of some good persons I will write and see about them.

"I will not have anything to do with English people, as I am a Scotchman, from Edinburgh. I don't want English. If there is anything to pay I have it at any time."

GERMANS HAVE AMPLE FOOD

Only Curtailment is in Amount of Wheat in Bread, American Reports

LONDON, Nov. 14.—An American who returned to London today from Germany, but who, because of business reasons, asked that his name be not published, gave a graphic description of present conditions there.

Speaking of conditions in Germany, the American said: "The confidence of the Germans had not diminished in any particular since I was there in the second week of the war. I visited many of the big cities, and was surprised to find so large a proportion of men of military age not yet called on for service. As to foodstuffs, there has been no curtailment, only the bread is not entirely made of wheat. This precaution was taken by the Government, which knows just how much food there is in Germany and how far it will go. If the Allies think they can starve Germany into submission, there is certainly not the slightest indication of the success of such a policy at the present time.

"Many men have been working in the fields. I had expected to see women doing such work. Great emphasis is placed on the value of the success of the late fall crops. Every available piece of land in Germany was planted with fall products shortly after the war started. As to unemployment, I failed to see very much, for the Imperial Government, as well as every town, is carrying out building projects unstintingly.

"In Berlin I found a somewhat apprehensive feeling about the Russians, despite the outward show of confidence in repelling them. The opinion was expressed to me by some Germans that should the war end in a draw, Germany might take certain portions of Austria to satisfy the people, as well as one port in Belgium and perhaps Liege. You hear about an intended raid on England with 200 Zeppelins, and there is a great feeling of hatred for the English everywhere, but I believe the press is largely responsible for it.

"In some quarters it is felt that Russia's determination to get to the Mediterranean may upset the eventual peace conference, which might give Germany an opportunity to assume a vital role; but all of this is prefaced on the possible defeat of Germany, which is not really countenanced by any Germans at the present time. The ordinary man in Germany does not know what he can safely say, so he is careful to talk but little. The military control everything, and the censorship keeps him from knowing anything that is not good for him."

It was said by this American that Frankfort, because of the fear of possible airship raids, was dark at night, but that all the other big cities were lighted, as usual.

German Prisoner Tells Why Roubaix and Tourcoing Escaped Ruin

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Surprise is frequently expressed in French newspapers at the comparative immunity of the twin industrial centres Roubaix and Tourcoing, which were quite unharmed by the invasion, and even escaped the imposition of fine. The St. Omer correspondent of The Temps says that a German officer recently captured had a Headquarters Staff map with a red chalk circle drawn around the Roubaix-Tourcoing district. When asked to explain, he said.

BROCKVILLE RESIDENT WELL KNOWN HERE

He Leaves To Join The Suffolk Regiment

The military secretary of the British War Office has notified Mr. H. W. Lumb to report at the earlist date to the Officer Commanding the 8th Battalion of the Suffolk Regiment at Colchester, Essex, England, for duty. Major Lumb will at once arrange his affairs here and leave for England at the earliest opportunity. He expects to be in England within a month from date, and is losing no time in preparing to go. Mrs. Lumb will accompany him and will engage in Red Cross work. Many congratulations on his good fortune and patriotism from friends and elsewhere will accompany him on his departure.—Brockville Times.

Capt. Lumb lived in Belleville a few years ago, he being manager of Anglo-American Hotel at one time, afterwards going on the road as a traveller. He is well and favorably known in this city.

Officers Are In Big Demand

Surplus with First Contingent is Provisionally Appointed to Kitchener's Army

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—There has been some speculation as to what would be done with the surplus of officers who went to England with the first contingent. It is learned, however, that none will come back to Canada.

Only one is being appointed an officer in the second contingent. The rest will receive provisional appointments in Kitchener's second army. They are all going through hard training in England now. There is great need of competent officers.

A Few Canadians Likely At Front

Main Body May Stay at Salisbury For Some Weeks

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—No official advices have as yet been received by the Militia Department here confirming the published rumors to the effect that a number of the Canadian troops, including some of the western cavalry are already in France and in the firing zone. It is thought probable in official circles here, however, that some of the regulars among the Canadian force, with perhaps a few of the artillery and some of the motor transport service, have already been sent to the front. It is not expected that the main body of the first contingent will see active service for some weeks, it being Lord Kitchener's policy to send only thoroughly-trained troops to the firing line unless further reinforcements of the more recently enlisted men are absolutely necessary.

The principal need of the allies in France at present, however, is understood to be in the artillery and transport units, and when the troops left here last September it was expected that some of the artillery units, which are particularly well equipped and trained, would be speedily sent to France. Owing to the strict British censorship it is not expected that anything will be sent out in regard to the movement of Canadian troops to France until after they are already at the front and have perhaps had their first baptism of fire.

Meanwhile it may be noted that the Canadians at Salisbury are not more than a day's journey from the battle line, and can be rushed to the front as quickly as the hundreds of thousands of French reserves in southern and western France, who have not yet been pressed into the actual fighting.

SERVIA'S FINE STAND AGAINST AUSTRIANS

Severe Fighting--Berlin Admits Fierce Resistance to Austrian Attacks

NISH, Nov. 15.—Very severe fighting has been going on continuously in the northwest of Servia for several days in which, however, Servian troops have prospects of definite success.

The Servian positions at Belgrade have been bombarded by the enemy, and the Servian headquarters have been removed to Kragujovatz.

Berlin, Nov. 15.—An official report here says: "The Austrians in Servia appear to have met with a severe resistance to the northwest of Valjevo, where they were hampered by bad roads and snow.

"A Servian prisoner declared their army had planned to make a decided stand in the vicinity at Valjevo."

ONE HUNDRED TURKS ARE NOW IN FORT HENRY

There are Now Three Nationalities of Foreign Suspects There--Additional Guards On Duty

KINGSTON, Nov. 16.—There are now three nationalities of foreigners confined in Fort Henry—Germans, Austrians and Turks. One hundred and three of the later "landed" in the historical prison on Thursday night from Brantford.

The train from Toronto pulled into the outer station on time at 7.15 o'clock on Saturday. On the rear were two coaches and a baggage car, the former loaded with the new arrivals and the baggage car with their baggage. The three cars were transferred quickly to the surburban and very few of those in the station know what was going on. The blinds of the coach were down and two soldiers stood at each door.

The suburban stopped between Place d'Armes and Barrack street and dropped off the three rear coaches, before continuing on into the city station Shortly before the train arrived, a squad of 14th men were at the stopping place of the train. The Turks were marched out and lined up on the lawn. The twenty-three soldiers from Brantford, who escorted them down and the 14th squad, then marched to the fort.

They were a motley looking gang. Some wore turbans but the most of them were dressed in ragged clothes. A few were very neat in their dressing. They are very dark complexioned, wearing their hair rather long and a good number have beards. They are as a rule, pedlers, small store keepers hawkers. They had been rounded up all through western Ontario and quartered in a temporary construction camp just outside of Brantford. When they were searched a number were carrying long knives and two or three had revolvers. The ones that had revolvers claimed to be jewellery salesmen.

Alterations have been going on to the jail part of the fort for some time and as soon as they were finished the Turks were sent for.

The guards had no trouble with them on the way down. The march over was orderly and no trouble was experienced. The Turks were immediately put into their new quarters after being again searched.

An extra number of the 14th guards are now on duty at the fort and now there is no risk of trouble. Col. T. D. R. Hemming made an inspection of the camp on Thursday and was well satisfied with the arrangements. Another squad of suspects is expected from Montreal in the near future.

Appeal To Bryan On Behalf of Germans Here

Protection of United States Asked for the Kaiser's Subjects in Canada

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Arthur von Briesen, of this city, sent the following letter to Secretary of State Bryan today regarding the condition of unemployed Germans and Austrians in Canada:

"New York, November 13, 1914.

"To the Hon. Secretary of State, Washington, D.C.:

"Sir:—It appears from letters received by me from Canada that there are a large number of German and Austrian subjects in that country who are at the present time looked upon as public enemies, and that many of them are in great need and are suffeing from lack of employment, as it is regarded as treasonable to employ anyone belonging to those nationalities.

"During the preceding years Canada has sought German immigrants mainly for her agricultural developments. Many came in good faith and obtained satisfactory employment, some even acquired little farms and other property. Now their position is very difficult and to an extent, I believe, fraught with danger.

"As the United States have undertaken to protect the citizens or subjects of Germany and of Austria, who may be in England or in her possessions, its consulates might perhaps be called upon, if you approve, to extend such protection as may be lawful and proper to these people. It is suggested, and I believe correctly so, that since many of these Germans and Austrains are not acquainted with the England language, a German-speaking official of your Government might be attached to the consul-general's office in Ottawa, so that at least one of our representatives would be able to understand their complaints and their needs.

"I there fore respectfully suggest that measures be taken in some proper and apt manner to extend protection to Germans and Austrians in Canada, and if need be, also to help where help is found necessary. If they were permitted to come to the United States they might find work and sustenance in our midst. When individual cases requiring financial or other particular aids are brought to the attention of your consul or consul-general they might be reported either to Jacob H. Schiff, of 52 William street, or to Edmund Payenstedt, of Muller, Schall & Company, 45 William Street, both of New York city, who might then apply to some of the relief funds that are being raised in New York and in other parts of the United States for special assistance in such cases. If such reports should also come to me I should be very glad to do my uttermost in the same direction.

MORE MEN ARE WANTED FOR LONDON ARTILLERY

GUELPH, Nov. 15.—Special—Captain Simpson, recruiting officer in charge of the enlistment of men for the battery of artillery for the London district, has received additional orders for the recruiting of more men from this section. The response since the call for men was made has been fairly good, but the recruiting officer is far from satisfied. He states that while there have been some splendid fellows from Guelph offered themselves for active service he would like to see a great many more. Quite a few of the men already enlisted have come from out of the city, and they are anxious to hear the call for mobilization. The sooner the required number of men is secured the sooner the corps will be mobilized at London.

ASQUITH WILL MAKE IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

To-day He Will Tell of Britain's Attitude on Aspects of Contraband Law

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Special—The Prime Minister is expected to-morrow to make a statement in Parliament concerning the British attitude on the taking of reservists from neutral vessels, on its treatment of copper and oil as contraband, and on the closing of the North Sea. These questions have been laid before Mr. Asquith with the statement that they have been agitating the American public and arousing a great deal of comment in the American press. It is therefore with a view to explaining the situation to America that the Premier makes the announcement.

Canada May Have Stamp Duties

(From Ottawa Free Press, Nov. 14.)

Hon. Mr. White, Minister of Finance, is busily engaged day and night worrying with the problem how to raise money necessary to enable Canada to properly participate in the great war.

Extra taxation for the purpose of providing from thirty-five to fifty millions of dollars will, it is said, be required.

Mr. White's special problem is to devise a scheme that shall distribute this extra taxation as much as possible over the entire population, without pressing unduly hard upon one section. And the particularly hard nut in that special problem.

How shall the farmer, who has suffered least from the war if he has suffered at all, be made to contribute his fair share of the extra taxation

Hon. Mr. White has been in close consultation with prominent men in the financial world, and it is rumored that there is every probability some further form of direct taxation in the shape of a stamp duty on cheques and receipts and commercial bills of all kinds may be imposed. Such taxes were imposed in the United States to meet war expenses.

THE BRITISH PLUCK IN STRUGGLE FOR TRENCHES

One of Great Achievements of War, British Charge at Soissons--Trenches Were Real Fortified Positions--British Took Them at Point of Bayonet Against Artillery

LONDON, Nov. 15.—One of the achievements of British bulldog pluck and one which is magnified tenderly when properly understood, was the success of General French's army in taking the German trenches north of Soissons. The news came merely as an incident of the battle all along the line and caused no more than a ripple of satisfaction. But to those who understood how the Germans had succeeded in intrenching themselves on the slopping hills the feat stands out as one of the strikingly brilliant bits of attack which overcome almost insurmountable obstacles.

It is interesting, perhaps, for the layman to realize something of the task that the British were called upon to perform. To the fire burned, smoke blackened troops and their officers, it has all become more or less a matter of grim, determined routine so far as the actual work of dislodging an enemy is concerned, but to the average individual the odds will doubtless seem one hundred to one against success when the conditions of attack and defence are outlined.

Stand Almost Impregnable.

It must first be realized that the Germans north of Soissons proposed to hold a line of defence at any cost. While the British were occupied in fighting their way across the river the Germans on the hills to the north had ample time to prepare for their determined stand. Their guns were placed on the crest of the hillside, where they had as much protection as the best genius of their officers could provide. Some two hundred yards in front of the guns the first row of trenches, known as "cover trenches", were dug, and some hundred yards fruther forward rows of "fire trenches" were carefully prepared. In front of the "fire trenches" were placed land mines invisible to the enemy.

This work completed, machine guns were disposed in and behind the rows of trenches in such manner that they could deliver frontal, oblique and flanking fire at the approaching attack. In addition there were, of course, the thousands of spitting rifles fired y the infantry so buried in the trenches that they could scarcely be seen at all.

By the nature and contour of the ground, the British to storm these positions had to first expose themselves to fire from a distance of nearly a mile. From the layman's viewpoint the disadvantage of troops trying to climb up a hill and drive back an enemy conveniently situated near the top it in itself sufficiently disconcerting. It resembles a many trying to get up a staircase and beat down a man waiting on the top step.

JUDGEMENT ON APPLICATION MADE BY C.L.O. & W. RAILWAY

THE RAILWAY ACT (CANADA)

Sec. 56. The Governor in Council may, at any time, in his discretion, either upon petition of any party, person or company interested, or of his own motion, and without any petition or application, vary or rescind any order, decision, rule or regulation of the Board, whether such order or decision is made inter partes or otherwise, and whether such regulation is general or limted in its scope and application; and any order which the Governor in Council may make with respect thereto shall be binding upon the Board and upon all parties.

THE RAILWAY SITUATION

The judgment on the application made by the C. L. O. & W. Ry. for additional tracks on the west side of the river, which was heard at Ottawa last July and August, has just been handed down. It is a long statement and covers 17 typewritten pages. Mr. E. Guss Porter, counsel for the city, is in Toronto today in the Court of Appeal and a statement of the judgment will be given upon his return. The main part of the argument on the part of the city was entered on the raising of the bridges across the Moira River and the building of subways on Front Street and the south end of Coleman Street. These subways cannot be built satisfactorily without the raising of the bridges but with the raising of the bridges as recommended by M. J. Butler, C.E., C.M.G., and Henry Holgate, C.E., both among the most eminent railway engineers in Canada, this work can easily be done and a satisfactory way made. The judgment was delivered by Commissioner S. J. McLean and after an elaborate argument he refuses to direct the railways to raise their bridges the 3 feet requested by the city. An appeal from the order of the Board of Railway Commissioners can be made to the Governor in Council and upon Mr. Porter's return the judgment will be considered and further action will be decided upon.

WON'T JOIN MINE PROTEST

United States to Keep Hands Off North Sea Matter

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The United States Government has no present intention of joining other neutral maritime powers in representations to the European belligerents looking toward the opening to neutral merchantmen of trade channels in the North Sea now strewn with mines. Secretary Bryan said today that the United States "was not ready to discuss the matter." He told Mr. Brun, the Minister from Denmark, who called at the State Department to ask what this Government's attitude might be, that nothing had been done toward preparing a protest.

It is understood the position of State Department officials is that they do not know who has laid mines in the North Sea, and therefore, have no authority for directing a protest to any particular nation among the belligerents. The notification recently received from Great Britain of the closure of the North Sea merely stated that mine fields had been located on routes previously used by merchantmen traversing the North Sea, and advised such vessels to seek other routes. There was nothing to indicate that the mines had been laid by the British, and the impression has prevailed, that many of them were German.

The suggestion that the United States join in an effort to open the North Sea to neutral commerce came from Amsterdam, and it is understood, representations on the subject have already been made to Great Britain by several neutrals.

WAR AND DRUNKENESS

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A report made by the Manchester Committee of the National Relief Fund as to the allegations of increased intemperance since the war commenced, is favorable to the northern city. Of one hundred districts reported on, 41 showed no increase of drunkenness, 16 reported an increase, four were uncertain, and 30 made no report. There were conflicting stories about women drinking on their separation allowances, the balance of opinion being in favor of the soldiers' wives.

HON. ROBERT ROGERS BACK FROM NEW YORK

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—Hon. Robert Rogers returned from New York today and gave a most emphatic denial to the reports industriously circulated by the Opposition press that the purpose of his visit was to let contracts for military equipment. The Minister said that he had let no contracts, discussed none, nor had negotiations of any kind in respect to contracts for military supplies during his trip.

What Canada Should Do

The first school for the blind in the world was founded by the French philanthropist, Valentin Hauy, in the last quarter of the 18th century. The first school for the blind in Canada was founed by a French priest, Pere Rousselot, at Montreal in 1861. Since that date only four other educational institutions for the blind of Canada have been opened, the last being that of the Montreal Association of the Blind, which began its work in October.

At a very early period in the history of the work or the blind, it was realised that the school would, to a large extent, fail in its object if means were not found to keep the sightless student in close touch with the world of books after his graudation. For individual blind persons to collect private libraries was impossible, both on account of the enormous bulk of embossed works and of their prohibitive price, a book of raised print costing many times more than its ink original. The opening of Departments for the Blind in the ordinary public libraries was found to be most unsatisfactory. The books gathered dust on the shelves for lack of local readers to take them thence.

At last, in 1888, I think, the Halifax School for the Blind established a circulating library for the purpose of supplying embossed books to the blind of the Maritime Provinces and of Newfoundland. The success of this venture proved conclusively that all that was necessary was a central distributing point and a regular mail service in order for the Canadian blind to take eager advantage of literary opportunities.

The volume of good done by this library was still further increased in 1898 when the Federal Government began to transport embossed books free of postal charges. In that year a small circulating library was opened at the Ontario Institution for the Blind at Brantford.

But these activities failed of their maximum possibilities because, in the first place, the attention of their staffs was divided between the schoolroom and the book-shelf, and, in the second place, because the blind themselves were not actively engaged in their management and extension. Hundreds of Canadian blind persons remained ignorant of the existence of these libraries, because no special effort, in the nature of things, could be made to carry this knowledge to them and to enlist their active co-operation. Realizing this fact, a number of blind men and women organized, in 1906, what has since become known all over the Dominion as the Canadian Free Library for the Blind. Incorporation was secured under the provisions of the Ontario Public Libraries Act, and a small money grant was obtained from the Ontario Government with which to purchase books. To defray the necessary running expenses of the enterprise, private individuals were selected and responded with as much readiness as could be expected when it is considered that the blind and their needs are little known and less understood in this country.

The objects of the Canadian Free Library for the Blind are wholly national. Victoria and Halifax being served as impartially as Toronto, in which city the library is located. Its Board of Management are blind men and it librarian is a blind man. The fact that it has circulated a total of more than 32 000 books and pieces of music speaks for itself and needs no enlargement.

Three Reels.

One Paris motion picture plant was producing before the war an average of 3,000,000 feet of films weekly.

German motion picture makers have produced films of noted conductors leading orchestras in playing certain compositions which can be displayed to lead any orchestra in the same music.

Train and Track.

There are 1,260 street and electric railways in the United States, capitalized at $4,708,568,141.

An electric railroad in Pennsylvania has adopted cars that may be used either for freight or passengers, the seats folding against the sides.

A new giant engine with eighteen wheels has been put into use on the French railways. It has no tender, but can store eight tons of coal and twelve cubic yards of water. Its speed is seventy miles an hour.

As the shortage is chiefly in textile dyestuffs, there is no reason for fearing as yet that complexion will be apparently affected by the war.

SEE TALLASSE THE INDIAN PRINCESS

Mr. Charles A. Macfarlane's Catchy Three-Act Drama, Now Perfected for the Stage--An Extremely Interesting Play Backed by Fine Costumes and Pretty Scenery--Put on for the Benefit of the Patriotic Fund by the Best Local Talent Obtainable

That a genuine surprise is in store for the theatre-going people of Belleville, is the opinion of those who have caught a glimpse of the rehearsals of this fine play, which will appear at Griffin's Opera House tomorrow night. Not only is the drama itself well worth the price of admission, but the fact that it is staged for the benefit of the Patriotic Fund, should go a long way toward packing the house. The author, Mr. C. A. Macfarlane, after spending the past six months on the work of dramatization, assisted by a thorough expert, now pronounces it ready in every respect for public approval. Shifting from the east to the west, and vibrating with life and unexpected incidents, there is not a dry moment from the opening of the first to the closing of the final scene. Vivacious characters take their allotted parts with a whirl that is good to see, the beautiful Indian Princess, Tallasse, proving all that could be desired. Be there, you will enjoy it.

DIED AT POINT ANN

Mr. James McCurry died on Saturday afternon at Point Ann, after being ill for some days. Deceased was 65 years of age, and unmarried. He was a son of the late Mr. James McCurry of Tyendinaga, where he was born. All his life had been spent in this locality. Deceased was a member of St. Michael's church.

CONSIGNED TO THE TOMB

The remains of the late Mr. Wm. E. Anderson of this city, who died at Wallace, Idaho, on the 6th inst., arrived here on Saturday and were taken to his parents' residence, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Anderson, Hillside street, in this city. This morning the funeral took place. The services were conducted by the Rev. E. C. Currie, pastor of John Street Presbyterian church, assisted by the Rev. A. R. Sanderson, pastor of Halloway street church. The remains were taken to Napanee for interment.

A RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

On Saturday afternoon a runaway occurred on Front street, which fortunately was not as serious as rumors led it to believe. Mr. and Mrs. E. Barber of Tyendinaga Township, were in a vehicle attached to a team, when the horses became unmanageable and ran away. The occupants of the vehicle were thrown out, and Mrs. Barber was rendered unconscious. The lady was conveyed to the hospital, where she soon regained consciousness. A report became freely circulated that she was fatally injured, but such fortunately was not the case.

RESPECTING HIS MEMORY

In several of the churches last evening the Dead March in Saul was played out of respect to the late General Roberts, and today flags on the public buildings were lowered to half mast.

SHOP IN YOUR OWN TOWN FIRST

This "Made in Canada" movement can be brought a little nearer home to each individual by emphasizing this suggestion: "Patronize the stores of your home city first" Each man is entitled to spend his own money where it will buy the most—whether it be in Rome or Asia. But in fairness is it not wisdom before purchasing elsewhere, to see what the stores of our own town have to offer? The prosperity of each of us is tied up with the prosperity of his neighbor. We prosper together and suffer bad times together. Acquaint yourself with what the stores of your own town are offering by reading the advertising in The Intelligencer.

AT THE FRONT

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractor permanently cures a greater percentage of case than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractic is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect. (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

We can prove Chiropractic is right and applicable to your case. Think it over. Consultation free.

GERMANS ON DEFENSIVE

They Have Flooded District to Check Allied Advance.

Latest Advices Say That the Allies Have Been Actively Attacking All Along the Battle Line and Have Made Some Notable Gains—German Attack on Verdun Fails—Allies Gain Heights at Arras.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Finding the pressure exerted by the allies more than the Germans could withstand, the Kaiser's troops blew up yesterday all the culverts on the Leopold and Schipdonck canals in Belgium, flooding a large area and temporarily halting the advance of the Franco-British soldiers. The allies have assumed the offensive in that section with fresh attacks.

Latest advices from the French capital add that the attacks made by the Germans were repulsed at every point of conflict from the North Sea to the Vosges Mountains.

The Franco-British armies, as a result of their offensive throughout France and Belgium gained ground yesterday at several points of strategic impotrance especially in the region of Arras where the enemy had to give way on a wide front a wedge being driven by the allies between two detachments of the Kaiser's army. One German section was completely cut off and isolated and several other sections were forced to retreat. The allies have captured positions on a plateau where they have mounted heavy guns and control the roads leading north.

Strong counter attacks by the Germans were repulsed all along the line notably in the Verdun region where the Teutonic troops fought desperately to cut a path through the French field army defending the approaches to the Verdun fortification. Furious efforts proving unsuccessful the Germans were ultimately compelled to retreat to their trenches.

In a violent attempt to recapture ground lost by the Germans in the severe fighting of the last three weeks along the line of the River Aisne the Germans made temporary gains only to be driven back by withering artillery fire.

Couriers from the battlefields near Verdun reported that another large German army is being concentrated north of that place probably for an attack on the Verdun fortifications.

A large French field army is guarding the fortress, and it is said all onslaughts of the Germans in that region have been defeated.

The fact that the Germans have attempted advances at widely-separated points indicates, in the opinion of military observers, that the German general staff is seeking to discover a weak point in the Franco-British lines, with the chief object of preparing a new concentrated aggressive campaign against the allies in France. The revival of general activity on the French battlefield included a resumption of the fighting at Dasigny. For the last six weeks the Kaiser's men have attempted to break through the French defence at that place, and each attempt has failed.

The opinion prevails here that the German campaign in western Belgium has passed its high-water mark, and that both the allies and the Germans will seek other ground on which to bring the long-drawn-out battle to a decisive issue. The slackening of the German attacks has given the allies a welcome rest. The trenches are filled with water or mud, the weather is cold and damp, and fogs conceal the enemy's movements. The forces which have successfully borne the brunt of the German works have been reinforced, particularly near Dixmude. It is believed the Germans will not be able to longer withstand the assaults of the French and British troops, and that the Germans will be driven from the town.

According to despatches from Amsterdam, German troop movements in the last day or two in Belgium were unusually active, but it is not known whether they were reinforcements to strengthen the battle line or reserves being brought up to replace the exhausted men on the firing line. Landwehr regiments have been moved from Ostend to Blankenberghe. New troops have entered Bruges, and German soldiers are constantly moving toward and from Roulers. Landsturm soldiers in the German forces in Belgium are reported as being disgusted with the failure of the Germans to advance to the coast. It is said many have been imprisoned through their unwillingness to go the front, and that some of them have attempted to desert at Dixmude after having seized civilian passports.

Meanwhile one discerns no weakening in the line of the allies. Reinforcements are coming forward regularly and marching to battle with amazing cheerfulness. Now and again the French, the British or the Belgians are accepting the insistent challenge of the Kaiser's hordes and striking out desperately against them. When they do attack the German aggressors, the latter seem almost invariably to yield.

Died Before Getting Honors.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—"During the recent fighting the German troops after a fierce charge retreated, carrying all their wounded, except one man. A British officer who went out to bring in the wounded soldier was himself wounded, but managed to drag the German to shelter, where later both were picked up by a German ambulance. As a reward for his bravery and humanity, the officer was decorated with the iron cross by the German commanding officer. The Briton was sent back to his own trenches, where he was recommended for the Victoria Cross, but he soon died of his wounds.

Newspapers are experiencing as much trouble in naming the present war as a young couple finds in naming the baby.

Battalion up to Required Strength --Recruiting Stopped--67 Were Taken on Strength

KINGSTON, Nov. 14.—The 21st Battalion is now up to its required strength and recruiting has been stopped. 47 men were taken on the strength yesterday from various parts of the district and a number arrived this morning of those who came in today were to fill up the vacancies in the base unit. The cyclist corps is also filled and the officer and thirty men are quartered in the Cereal building.

The appointment of Capt. L. Malcolm and Lieutenants Manhard and Ellis of the Queen's Engineers have been confirmed provisionally.

Some time ago a German with his wife and two children were brought to the city and placed in Fort Henry, the man having having been taken as a prisoner of war. Col. Hemming took the matter up with the officials in Ottawa and as a result the family have been paroled.

The appointments of Capt. Fee and Lieutenants Cassels and McCauley to the new overseas battery here have been authorized provisionally.

The Norris garage building, which has been rented by the men of the right half battalion, will be opened with a smoker and a concert, Tuesday evening.

Messrs. E. W. Stranbridge, R. Anderson, J. C. Beatty and R. Stanley, who were employed as servants at the R. M.C., have resigned their positions to enlist in the 14th, P.W.O.R.

Soldiers Can Sing

"It's A Long Way to Tipperary" With Vim

(Kingston Whig)

When it comes to singing, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," the men in the 21st battalion, who are being recruited in Kingston "take the cake."

How often have you heard this simple little song, just like you would hear in any music hall, in the streets of Kingston during the last few days? The men of the 21st battalion have been singing it ever since they came to Kingston, on the march and in barracks, and it is now ringing in the ears of every citizens. Citizens in all walks of life are singing it. Little boys in the streets whistle it, in the offices and factories girls hum it, and men everywhere have taken up this tuneful refrain. But after all it takes "Tommy Atkins" to sing it the way it should be sung. Friday afternoon the boys when parading down Princess street started up the song and in a short time everyone was taking part in the singing.

"That song is contagious," said an old war veteran to a Whig representative Friday afternoon as the boys marched along the street singing for all they were worth.

The men who are here to help make up the second contingent have been warmly praised for their smart appearance. As each squad make their way along the street at various times in the day, citizens stand on the curb and watch them pass on their way, as if paying a tribute of respect. Every man appears to have the stamp of a soldier and swings into the march just like veterans of the war game.

"On to Berlin," is the motto of the men. They are very anxious to get to the front, and they will be a happy lot when the order comes to cross the ocean.

GERMANS LESS CONFIDENT

First Certainty of Success has Vanished, Says Italian Diplomatist.

ROME, Nov. 14.—Reliable reports are received here from Germany through authoritative souces as some are brought verbal by a prominent diplomist, showing that the feelings of the people at large have changed. The original unshakable certainty of their military superiority and their infallible success is gradually toning down. It is yet too soon to speak of dissatisfaction or lack of determination, but undoubtedly the first illusions are vanishing. It is not yet discouragement but anxiety that perhaps their country has attempted too much.

A diplomatist who spent fifteen years in Germany said that headquarters at Berlin had begun to be afraid that Austria will not give the assistance expected. Her inability to crush Servia or defeat Russia he said, made her "a dead weight" on her ally.

RUSSIANS DEFEAT TURKS IN DESPERATE BATTLE

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The London Telegraph's special correspondent at Petrograd says: A telegram from Tiflis to The Bourse Gazette says the stubborn battles at Kaprikai must be considered historical. Artillery has impossible roads, their being neither highways nor railways, and only bare tracks through the hills, in places covered with snow bridges, which it was impossible to take the guns across. All provisions in the district had been removed by the Turks. Day and night the Russian troops advanced on Kaprikai, taking position after position.

The enemy's artillery at Kaprikai was armed with the new German guns. The Turks fought desperately, suffering very heavy losses. Specially severe execution was done by the Russian mountain guns. Each time the enemy was driven back he received reinforcements and returned to the attack. His positions were very strong, and only occupied by the Russians on the evening of the second day of battle.

A brilliant episode was the charge of a squadron of Cossacks up the hill held by the enemy's artillery. Not a single Turk escaped this onslaught. The scouting of the Cossacks is said to have a very demoralizing effect on the Turks, who retaliate barbarously whenever a member of this force falls into their hands. A case is mentioned in which a Cossack prisoner was crucified after his tongue had been cut off and his eyes gouged out. The Turkish army at Kaprikai was composed of six divisions. At a critical juncture the Russians allowed the enemy to advance to within 400 paces before opening fire, which compelled the Turks to make a precipitate flight.

An earlier despatch from Constantinople claimed that this fight resulted in a Turkish victory, with 8,000 Russians killed or wounded.

Found Dead Under His Bed

The following article refers to a former resident of Marmora Village, a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Greenslades:—

REGINA, Nov. 3.—Frank Greenslades, 23 years old, living with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Clinton, at Pilot Butte, was found dead underneath his bed by his room mate, about five o'clock Sunday afternoon.

A post mortem failed to establish the cause of death. No condition of the organs was found likely to cause death. The coroner has instructed that the contents of the stomach be forwarded to the provincial bacteriologist for examination, as poisoning is suspected.

STOMACH HEALTH--OR NO COST TO YOU

Very likely others have advised you to use Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, because scores of people in this community believe them to be the best remedy ever made for Dyspepsia and Indigestion. That is what we think, too, because we know what they have done for others and what they are made of. We have so much faith in them that we urge you to try them at our risk. If they don't help you, they won't cost you a cent. If they don't do all that you want them to do——if they don't restore your stomach to health and make your digestion easy—just tell us and we will give back your money without a word or question.

Containing Pepsin and Bismouth, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medical science, they soothe the inflamed stomach lining, help in the secretion of gastric juice, check Heartburn and distress, promote regular bowel action, and make it possible for you to eat whatever you like whenever you like, with the comforting assurance that there will be no bad after-effects. We believe them to be the best remedy made for dyspepia and indigestion. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores and in this town only at our store. CRAZED BY THE WAR

Duke of Cumberland a Victim of Its Horrors

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 14.—Prince Ernest August, the Duke of Cumberland, and the father of the Duke of Brunswick; son-in-law of the Kaiser, who has been reported missing for several weeks, has been discovered wandering about in a demented condition. It is reported that the horrors of the war have affected the Prince's brain, and he is now confined in an asylum.

One kind of chronic bore is the loafer who acts as if your time was all his own.

Second Interim Report Of The Belleville Patriotic Association

The Executive Committee wish to give the following information to those interested, also to again try to give full publicity of the details of their administration of the Patriotic Fund since the 19th September,—when their first weekly report stated that 22 families had been receiving weekly cheques of $3.60 each, beginning from the 24th of August. It was also then stated that these weekly allowances would be revised later, when it would be definitely known what allowance would be paid by the Government, and also what amount of funds the Committee could count on for this purpose, and having in view the needs of each case.

Since the date of our organization the Militia Department have announced that the wives of volunteers (and widowed mothers who were solely dependent on their sons) would be paid a "separation allowance" of $20 a month. The scale of allowances to be paid from the Patriotic Fund, in the larger towns and cities (in cases where there is no earning power nor other income in the soldiers' families—for of course, families not needing relief are not expected to receive payments from the fund) are as follows:—

Wife (or mother) on her own account, per month	$30 00
Less Separation Allowance paid by Government	20 00
Leaving to be paid by Patriotic Fund per month	10 00
To be increased for each child under 5 years per month	3 00
To be increased for each child from 5 to 10 years per month	4 50
To be increased for each child from 10 to 15 years per month	7 50

Special grants also may be considered in cases of accidents, etc. Families of British Reservists to be paid on a similar basis. Any wages granted and paid to the families by former employers of the volunteers, or any income or earning power in the families would be deducted from these allowances, which may be again revised as circumstances seem to require it.

From 16th November it is intended to make local payments twice a month on the above scale (when the separation allowances from the Government are also being received) in those cases where the above rates of payment have not already been adopted.

In cases of sickness in the families of soldiers at the front, gentlemen of the medical profession have undertaken the patients will have professional attendance without cost, and the druggists have also promised that they would make no charge for their services.

All funds paid to the Treasurer have been acknowledged weekly through the Press each Saturday, and are held in Belleville, and are drawing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. until used. Local cheques are sent to the families of soldiers regularly. In all 271 cheques having been issued to this date, to 31 households--a total of 98 people including children being the beneficiaries.

The books and monthly pay lists etc., of the Association are at all times open for inspection by the public, and those interested are invited to call during business hours at the Bank of Montreal where all available information will be gladly given.

West Belleville Methodist Church Service Yesterday

Sunday, Nov. 15, will long be remembered in West Belleville Methodist Church. In spite of the inclement weather a large congregation assembled and the whole service was inspiring. The choir, assisted by Albert College students, sang several of Gipsy Smith's hymns most effectively, while the Misses Wooten sang a duet "I Know He is Mine", which came home to the hearts of all.

Miss Morton was at her best, and after the pastor had conducted the opening exercises she gave out her text in Act xi:24—"For he was a good man and full of tht Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord."

It was a strong sermon, in which the speaker emphasized goodness, faith, being filled with the Holy Ghost, and the result—much people was added unto the Lord.

At the close of the sermon the Evangelist held a short after service. Here is where Miss Morton excells as the master of the art of conducting an after service.

It was a beautiful sight to see the whole congregation come forward as one man, during which several young men gave themselves to Christ.

The heavy rain at night did not deter many from coming to the meeting, which was a season of blessing. Mrs. Sanderson and Dr. Dupran sang a duet, "Just for Today." The after service was a climax for the day, when several renewed their covenants with God, and others asked for prayer.

Battalion up to Required Strength --Recruiting Stopped--67 Were Taken on Strength

KINGSTON, Nov. 14.—The 21st Battalion is now up to its required strength and recruiting has been stopped. 47 men were taken on the strength yesterday from various parts of the district and a number arrived this morning of those who came in today were to fill up the vacancies in the base unit. The cyclist corps is also filled and the officer and thirty men are quartered in the Cereal building.

The appointment of Capt. L. Malcolm and Lieutenants Manhard and Ellis of the Queen's Engineers have been confirmed provisionally.

Some time ago a German with his wife and two children were brought to the city and placed in Fort Henry, the man having having been taken as a prisoner of war. Col. Hemming took the matter up with the officials in Ottawa and as a result the family have been paroled.

The appointments of Capt. Fee and Lieutenants Cassels and McCauley to the new overseas battery here have been authorized provisionally.

The Norris garage building, which has been rented by the men of the right half battalion, will be opened with a smoker and a concert, Tuesday evening.

Messrs. E. W. Stranbridge, R. Anderson, J. C. Beatty and R. Stanley, who were employed as servants at the R. M.C., have resigned their positions to enlist in the 14th, P.W.O.R.

Soldiers Can Sing

"It's A Long Way to Tipperary" With Vim

(Kingston Whig)

When it comes to singing, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," the men in the 21st battalion, who are being recruited in Kingston "take the cake."

How often have you heard this simple little song, just like you would hear in any music hall, in the streets of Kingston during the last few days? The men of the 21st battalion have been singing it ever since they came to Kingston, on the march and in barracks, and it is now ringing in the ears of every citizens. Citizens in all walks of life are singing it. Little boys in the streets whistle it, in the offices and factories girls hum it, and men everywhere have taken up this tuneful refrain. But after all it takes "Tommy Atkins" to sing it the way it should be sung. Friday afternoon the boys when parading down Princess street started up the song and in a short time everyone was taking part in the singing.

"That song is contagious," said an old war veteran to a Whig representative Friday afternoon as the boys marched along the street singing for all they were worth.

The men who are here to help make up the second contingent have been warmly praised for their smart appearance. As each squad make their way along the street at various times in the day, citizens stand on the curb and watch them pass on their way, as if paying a tribute of respect. Every man appears to have the stamp of a soldier and swings into the march just like veterans of the war game.

"On to Berlin," is the motto of the men. They are very anxious to get to the front, and they will be a happy lot when the order comes to cross the ocean.

GERMANS LESS CONFIDENT

First Certainty of Success has Vanished, Says Italian Diplomatist.

ROME, Nov. 14.—Reliable reports are received here from Germany through authoritative souces as some are brought verbal by a prominent diplomist, showing that the feelings of the people at large have changed. The original unshakable certainty of their military superiority and their infallible success is gradually toning down. It is yet too soon to speak of dissatisfaction or lack of determination, but undoubtedly the first illusions are vanishing. It is not yet discouragement but anxiety that perhaps their country has attempted too much.

A diplomatist who spent fifteen years in Germany said that headquarters at Berlin had begun to be afraid that Austria will not give the assistance expected. Her inability to crush Servia or defeat Russia he said, made her "a dead weight" on her ally.

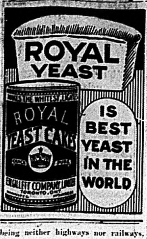
RUSSIANS DEFEAT TURKS IN DESPERATE BATTLE

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The London Telegraph's special correspondent at Petrograd says: A telegram from Tiflis to The Bourse Gazette says the stubborn battles at Kaprikai must be considered historical. Artillery has [illegible] impossible roads, their being neither highways nor railways, and only bare tracks through the hills, in places covered with snow bridges, which it was impossible to take the guns across. All provisions in the district had been removed by the Turks. Day and night the Russian troops advanced on Kaprikai, taking position after position.

The enemy's artillery at Kaprikai was armed with the new German guns. The Turks fought desperately, suffering very heavy losses. Specially severe execution was done by the Russian mountain guns. Each time the enemy was driven back he received reinforcements and returned to the attack. His positions were very strong, and only occupied by the Russians on the evening of the second day of battle.

A brilliant episode was the charge of a squadron of Cossacks up the hill held by the enemy's artillery. Not a single Turk escaped this onslaught. The scouting of the Cossacks is said to have a very demoralizing effect on the Turks, who retaliate barbarously whenever a member of this force falls into their hands. A case is mentioned in which a Cossack prisoner was crucified after his tongue had been cut off and his eyes gouged out. The Turkish army at Kaprikai was composed of six divisions. At a critical juncture the Russians allowed the enemy to advance to within 400 paces before opening fire, which compelled the Turks to make a precipitate flight.

An earlier despatch from Constantinople claimed that this fight resulted in a Turkish victory, with 8,000 Russians killed or wounded.



Found Dead Under His Bed

The following article refers to a former resident of Marmora Village, a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Greensides:—

REGINA, Nov. 3.—Frank Greensides, 23 years old, living with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Clinton, at Pilot Butte, was found dead underneath his bed by his room mate, about five o'clock Sunday afternoon.

A post mortem failed to establish the cause of death. No condition of the organs was found likely to cause death. The coroner has instructed that the contents of the stomach be forwarded to the provincial bacteriologist for examination, as poisoning is suspected

CRAZED BY THE WAR

Duke of Cumberland a Victim of Its Horrors

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 14.—Prince Ernest August, the Duke of Cumberland, and the father of the Duke of Brunswick, son-in-law of the Kaiser, who has been reported missing for several weeks, has been discovered wandering about in a demented condition. It is reported that the horrors of the war have affected the Prince's brain, and he is now confined in an asylum.

One kind of chronic bore is the loafer who acts as if your time was all his own.

Second Interim Report Of The Belleville Patriotic Association

The Executive Committee wish to give the following information to those interested, also to again try to give full publicity of the details of their administration of the Patriotic Fund since the 19th September,—when their first weekly report stated that 22 families had been receiving weekly cheques of $3.60 each, beginning from the 24th of August. It was also then stated that these weekly allowances would be revised later, when it would be definitely known what allowance would be paid by the Government, and also what amount of funds the Committee could count on for this purpose, and having in view the needs of each case.

Since the date of our organization the Militia Department have announced that the wives of volunteers (and widowed mothers who were solely dependent on their sons) would be paid a "separation allowance" of $20 a month. The scale of allowances to be paid from the Patriotic Fund, in the larger towns and cities (in cases where there is no earning power nor other income in the soldiers' families—for of course, families not needing relief are not expected to receive payments from the fund) are as follows:—

Wife (or mother) on her own account, per month	$30 00
Less Separation Allowance paid by Government	20 00
Leaving to be paid by Patriotic Fund per month	10 00
To be increased for each child under 5 years per month	3 00
To be increased for each child from 5 to 10 years per month	4 50
To be increased for each child from 10 to 15 years per month	7 50

Special grants also may be considered in cases of accidents, etc. Families of British Reservists to be paid on a similar basis. Any wages granted and paid to the families by former employers of the volunteers, or any income or earning power in the families would be deducted from these allowances, which may be again revised as circumstances seem to require it.

From 16th November it is intended to make local payments twice a month on the above scale (when the separation allowances from the Government are also being received) in those cases where the above rates of payment have not already been adopted.

In cases of sickness in the families of soldiers at the front, gentlemen of the medical profession have undertaken the patients will have professional attendance without cost, and the druggists have also promised that they would make no charge for their services.

All funds paid to the Treasurer have been acknowledged weekly through the Press each Saturday, and are held in Belleville, and are drawing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. until used. Local cheques are sent to the families of soldiers regularly. In all 271 cheques having been issued to this date, to 34 households—a total of 98 people including children being the beneficiaries.

The books and monthly pay lists etc., of the Association are at all times open for inspection by the public, and those interested are invited to call during business hours at the Bank of Montreal where all available information will be gladly given.

West Belleville Methodist Church Service Yesterday

Sunday, Nov. 15, will long be remembered in West Belleville Methodist Church. In spite of the inclement weather a large congregation assembled and the whole service was inspiring. The choir, assisted by Albert College students, sang several of Gipsy Smith's hymns most effectively, while the Misses Wooten sang a duet "I Know He is Mine", which came home to the hearts of all.

Miss Morton was at her best, and after the pastor had conducted the opening exercises she gave out her text in Act xi:24—"For he was a good man and full of tht Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord."

It was a strong sermon, in which the speaker emphasized goodness, faith, being filled with the Holy Ghost, and the result—much people was added unto the Lord.

At the close of the sermon the Evangelist held a short after service. Here is where Miss Morton excells as the master of the art of conducting an after service.

It was a beautiful sight to see the whole congregation come forward as one man, during which several young men gave themselves to Christ.

The heavy rain at night did not deter many from coming to the meeting, which was a season of blessing. Mrs. Sanderson and Dr. Duprau sang a duet, "Just for Today." The after service was a climax for the day, when several renewed their covenants with God, and others asked for prayer.

ADVERTISE IN THE INTELLIGENCER

Mob Assails The Caillaux

Denounce Ex-Premier as "German Spy" and Threw Mud at His Wife

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Lieut.-Col Caillaux and Mme. Caillaux, who was acquitted of the murder of Gaston Calmette just before the outbreak of the war, were the subject of a hostile demonstration in Paris this afternoon. They were driving in an open cab on the boulevards between Madelaine and the Place de l'Opera, the ex-Minister in the full uniform of his rank as paymaster of the army and his wife wearing the white armlet of the Red Cross. They were recognized by a woman, who called out:

"Voila Caillaux, l'espion allemand" (There goes Caillaux, the German spy!)

A crowd gathered around the cab and hooted the occupants. They were pelted with dirt picked up from the street and some one threw into Mme. Caillaux's face one of those long, filthy bunches of rags used to divert the water to the right or left as it issues to flood the gutters. Both looked very pale and disconcerted as they hastily climbed into a taxicab and drove away.

The manifestation was in great part due to the latest interpretation put upon the celebrated "green document" of which so much was heard during the trial of Mme. Caillaux. According to popular belief, the document was an agreement between M. Caillaux, when he was Premier and the German Government by which the Germans were to be allowed to enter Paris without resistance and there receive 5,000,000,000 francs ($1,000,000,000) for the return of Alsace and Lorraine. There is probably not the least ground for this version of the contents of the "green document," but it struck the people as an explanation of certain of the activities of the former Premier during the Moroccan crisis.

VANEYCK MASTERPIECE SEIZED BY GERMANS

French Say They Have Carried The Brussels "Adam and Eve" to Berlin

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The Figaro says that the famous Van Eyck, "Adam and Eve," which is one of the glories of the Brussels Royal Museum, has been removed to Berlin.

The Figaro comments:

"The theft does not matter greatly. The Allies will retake it later; but Heaven send that Dr. Bode does not attempt to restore it!"

Jan Van Eyck's "Adam and Eve", painted in Bruges about 1439, was in the Gallery of Ancient Paintings in Brussels. It is about the period of "The Virgin and Child by a Fountain," which was, before the German invasion, in the Antwerp gallery.

Dr. Wilhelm Bode, the head of the Berlin Museum, and reputed to be the greatest expert on Leonardo da Vinci in the world, purchased for the Museum in 1909 a wax bust said to be by that artist. The purchase was made in London, and $40,000 was paid. English experts said that the bust was not by Leonardo, but by Richard Cockle Lucas, and examination revealed as a "form" for the base pieces of a Victorian bed quilt and some London newspaper clippings of the early 40's. Dr. Bode, however, has continued to insist that the famous Italian made the bust, and the Kaiser has decreed that Dr. Bode is right.

18,000,000 RESERVES FOR TEUTONIC ALLIES

LONDON, Nov. 14.—According to the Cologne Gazette, the combined strength of German and Austrian reserves is 18,000,000 men.

There are 2,000,000 volunteers in Germany and 240,000 in Austria, and recruits of the 1914 conscription of both countries 1,000,000 each. This makes a total of 4,250,000, but, according to the Rheinish paper, this estimate is altogether incomplete.

In Germany, as in Austria, that portion of the Landsturm which has not yet seen any service is almost as good as untouched and, according to the best authorities, this untouchel Landsturm amounts for Germany to 7,000,000 men. They are between the ages of 20 and 45. Already the vast majority of these men have been registered by the military authorities as suitable. Only a very small percentage may be regarded as hardly fit for the front but they are capable of other military duties.

In Austria this untouched Landsturm is place at 5,000,000, making 12,000,000 for both countries. If we deduct 2,000,000 from this total for volunteers who have already been counted we get a total of 14,250,000 as still available for active military service, and if the age limit is raised from 45 to 50 years and the limit at the other hand be reduced from 20 to 18 years, we obtain an additional 3,750,000, which, added to 14,250,000, makes the grand total of 18,000,000.

The LAPSE of ENOCH WENTWORTH

By ISABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Wolvertons"

ILLUSTRATIONS by ELLSWORTH YOUNG

COPYRIGHT, 1914 BY F. G. BROWNE & CO.

Dorcas and Merry, in a swift motor, reached the Waverly Place home before the ambulance, and a famous surgeon came close at their heels. When the operation was over they laid Wentworth upon his own bed. The surgeon stood looking down on the unconscious face. Blood was welling slowly from the wound on his forehead and made a wide stain upon the snowy bandage. The man turned to look at Dorcas: her make-up lay in smudges upon her face and she wore the blue cotton gown which belonged to "Cordelia" in the last act; her fingers clenched each other, while she turned an imploring gaze to the quiet face of the surgeon.

"I do not know—yet," he whispered, answering the question in her eyes; "it is too soon to tell. He lived through it, and it is one of those operations when the patient does not always live."

Somebody led her away. In a dazed fashion she knew that Alice Volk bathed her face and braided her hair into two long strands and changed her stage gown for a soft kimono. Then Merry took her hand and she followed him to the library. She lay down upon a couch feeling as if every nerve in her body had an ear and it was listening. The house was perfectly still. Once in her mind she used that phrase, "Still as death." Afterwards she fell into a shivering fit; the tears came, and she sobbed so fiercely that the agony seemed to tear at her throat.

From a shadowy corner near the fireside Merry rose and crept across the room. He dropped on his knees beside her and soothed her without a word, as one broods over an unhappy child. The warm grip in which he held her hand between his own gave her courage and hope. She rose to her feet and he led her to the window where she sat down and looked out into the dark, quiet square. Out of her memory rose the thought of an early morning—it was only a year ago—when she had seen Andrew Merry for the first time, stretched listlessly on the park bench, with a gray, thin fog occasionally blotting him from her sight. It was here, too, she had sat watching children scuffle through wind-blown leaves, while she heard her brother read the manuscript of "The House of Esterbrook." Merry sat silent at her side until the nurse entered the room.

"Miss Wentworth," she said, "Dr. Mowbray wants you. Your brother has been conscious for a few minutes. He cannot speak, but he wants something. Will you come?"

They followed the woman swiftly. Enoch's eyes sought hers with piteous pleading which was almost agony. She bent to kiss him. His gaze traveled to Merry and the agony seemed to change to peace.

"You saved his life, Enoch," she whispered.

Andrew laid his fingers gently upon the nerveless hand which rested outside the sheet. The eyes of the two men met: in those of one was a mute prayer for forgiveness, in the other's shone gratitude and the old affection grown steadfast.

Enoch's lips moved. He was trying to speak. Dorcas laid her ear close to his mouth.

"He wants his keys," she said quickly.

The nurse left the bedside and returned with a bunch of small keys strung upon a steel ring. Dorcas laid them in her brother's hand. It was pitifully inert! She lifted them and ran them through her fingers, one by one, as a Catholic tells her beads in a rosary. Her gaze was fixed upon his eager eyes. When she touched a shining brass key a gleam of relief shone in the man's beseeching eyes. She rose to her feet.

"I will go at once, Enoch, and find it. I shall know what you want, whatever it is, and will bring it to you."

The doctor followed Merry and Dorcas to the door. "Don't come back unless I send for you. The exertion has been too much for him."

"This is the key to a small drawer in Enoch's desk," explained the girl. "I can probably guess what he wants. I ought to show it to him. If his mind is set on something he may sleep quietly when he knows I have found it."

"I will call you if he does not sleep," said the doctor.

Merry walked to the window and stared vaguely into the darkness. A little clock on the mantel struck three. Once he looked over his shoulder at Dorcas. He could hear the crackle of stiff paper as she unfolded a few long, narrow sheets which were tied in a thin bundle.

"I have found Enoch's will and a number of business papers. Here are his bankbooks and the contract with Oswald for the play. There are bonds and things of that sort—things I do not understand. I imagine," the girl's voice broke into a sob, "it must be the will he wants."

"Probably, it is, dear," said Andrew gently. She laid the papers on the desk and lifted a yellow envelope. There was no writing upon it; it was unsealed. She took out a slip of paper and stood motionless while she read it. Then her fingers moved in a groping way to turn on a blaze of electricity under the green globe above the desk.

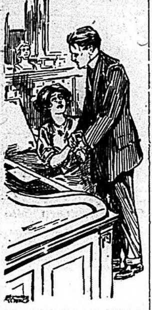
"The room is so dark," she murmured.

She dropped the paper upon the blotter in front of her and leaned upon the desk with he face between her hands.

"Andrew," cried Dorcas with a stifled moan, "come here!"

He crossed the room and stood looking down over the girl's shoulder.

"See," she whispered, "see what I have found! Tell me what is it?" Her fingers pointed to the bond. She stretched out her hand as if searching for protection and help. The man clasped it between his own, then she raised her eyes to his.



"Was It This That Laid Behind Every Thing?"

"Was it this, Andrew, this that lay behind everything—that made you give up your play and—"

Merry's lips parted, but he did not speak. Dorcas glanced at the date. She withdrew her hands from his and put her fingers across her eyes as if trying desperately to remember something.

"Why," she cried suddenly, "the date was May 29, last year; that was two days after I came home from the convent." Her forehead knitted into a puzzled frown. "It must have been that night — that morning — when Enoch had a stag party, and I came in, after you had all gone. It was the first time I saw you. I have told you about it—when you sat out there, waiting for a 'bus."

"Yes," he whispered.

"Then afterwards," she raised her head with a quick gesture, "we went to Juniper Point. There you told me about your play—and you went away to write it?"

She paused, waiting for Merry to answer. She did not raise her eyes. Her head was bent as if she took the shame of her brother upon her own shoulders.

"Yes." The man spoke in a slow whisper.

"Then you came back, with the play finished, and read it to Enoch, and he—he claimed it—because he held this against you?" She laid a trembling finger upon the sheet of paper.

"Yes."

Dorcas sat perfectly still with her arms lying on the desk. Merry bent over and gently touched her cheek.

"Oh!" she shrank away from him with a shuddering cry. "Oh, how could you let him do such a thing! It was so cruel, so inconceivably cruel, so shameful, and so unjust! It was such a mistake! Why did you let my brother do such a thing?"

"I don't know." Merry spoke abruptly.

"Tell me why you let him do it," persisted the girl.

"I don't believe I can explain—to you." There was a hopeless tone in the man's voice. "For a while it seemed to me like a poker debt. Women cannot understand a poker debt."

"No, I cannot understand," confessed Dorcas. Then she went on hurriedly: "Was that your only reason?"

"No, I felt that way at first. Then—it seemed foolish. One night I determined for a minute to set myself free, to get the play back, and to make you understand. It was the night—that night—when you took me home—when you found me in the—when you gave me new courage and a fresh outlook on life—when you made a man of me."

Dorcas rose and stood facing him with her eyes searching him. "Why didn't you do it?" she asked.

"Because," said Merry unsteadily, "do you remember you—no I—I—asked you—when a man had fallen as low as I had if he had anything left that would pull him to his feet. You said, 'Yes, so long as he has honor, there is no end of a chance for him.'"

"COL." FRANCIS FERRIER DIES

Trainer of Wild Animals and One Time Circuis Proprietor

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—"Col." Francis Ferari, the well-known carnival showman and former circus proprietor, died yesterday at his home at 156 West Eighty-fourth Street from a complication of diseases. During the twenty years he spent in this country "Col." Ferari exhibited animal shows and animal vaudeville acts in every State of the Union. He was born in England in 1862, the son of an English showman, and married Miss Emma Warwick, daughter of Walter, who managed shows at many of the English fair grounds before coming to America in 1894.

Until 1902 "Col." Ferari was in partnership with the late Frank C. Bostock, the circus man. After that time he devoted himself to training wild animals and supplying attractions for carnival expositions and country fairs, and kept between 300 and 400 wild animals at his establishment near Trenton, N.J.

Ferari animal shows were familiar to patrons of Coney Island. One of his largest animal shows was exhibting at Dreamland at the time of the Dreamland fire and many valuable animals were burned to death.

"Col." Ferari is survived by his widow and a brother, Joseph G. Ferari, an animal trainer.

CALLS GERMAN NETTED FISH

"Exhausting Itself in Savage Efforts", Says a Swiss Military Critic

PARIS, Nov. 14.——Under the heading, "'Germany's Defensivo War,'" the Temps quotes from The Geneva Journal's Swiss military critic, Col. Feyler, who considers that the war has now definitely entered on a third phase, in which the Germans are on the defensive on both fronts.

The first was the sudden attack upon France, the second the combined Austro-German movement against Russia.

"Russian territory", says Col. Feyler, "has been entirely cleared of Germans, and France is gradually expelling the invader, though the latter struggles furiously. Has the reader ever seen a salmon netted? The fish exhausts itself in savage efforts to escape the inexorable closing meshes. I consider that the salmon typifies Germany to-day."

SECOND CONIINGENT HOW CONSTIUTED

It Will Consist of 15,272 Officers and Men, 4,765 Horses and 74 Guns

OTTAWA, Nov. 14—The muster-roll of the second Canadian contingent which is now being mobolized, will be 15,272 officers and men, with 4,765 horses, 58 field and heavy guns, and 16 machine guns.

The two infantry brigades will total 8,654 officers and men, while the nine field batteries of artillery and one heavy battery with ammunition columns, etc., will have 3,379 men, 3,117 horses and 58 guns. In the two field companies of engineers there will be 474 men and 160 horses, in the cyclist corps 200 men, and in the signal company 171 men and 80 horses. The Army Service Corps of four companies will consist of 451 men and 378 horses. The three field ambulances and the other medical units will total 726 men, with 178 horses. These units are now all being mobilied at divisional centres.

In addition to these there will be mobolized with the contingent a little later 464 men for the divisional ammunition park, 265 for supply column, 289 men and 358 horses for reserve park, 92 men for field battery, 20 men for field butchery, 61 men for railway supply detachment and 26 men for depot units of supply.

Only one of the surplus of several hundred officers who went with the first contingent to Salisbury has so far been appointed to the second contingent being raised here. The rest are all remaining in England, taking a hard training course. It is probable they will all find places with the British volunteer army now in training, which, like the Canadian force, is badly in need of qualified officers.

Not Too Far To Telephone!

THE man you want to reach may not be within your immediate circle, but he's not so far away but that you may reach him by Telephone. From the instrument in your office or your house you can talk with satisfaction either to those within your own talking circle or beyond it to remote interlinking circles.

Consider what this means to your business—the saving in time, labor and travelling expense! We are receiving daily testimony to the value of the long distance telephone as an aid to the economical transaction of business. Men in all lines of business are able to keep things running at normal, and at the same time reduce expense by making methodical and careful use of the long distance telephone. And there is another factor—the buoyancy and optimism resulting from these personal talks between business men is accountable for much of the revival in business.

Are you applying the telephone to your business?

DISASTER TO THE AUDACIOUS

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Sun has a story to-day relative to an earlier report in various papers from a news association that the British super-dreadnought Audacious had been sunk by the Germans off Ireland. The British Admiralty refuses to deny or confirm the reported disaster to the Audacious, which ranked third in the British navy.

"Absolute confirmation that the British super-dreadnought Audacious was sunk 20 miles off the coast of Ireland on Oct. 27 was received in this city yesterday in letters from English correspondents, who had not been permitted to cable the news," says The Sun.

"As the Audacious was going down, she flashed a wireless call, which was caught by the ocean giant Olympic, which was steaming cautiously toward the coast of Ireland, only a few miles away.

"Almost at the moment that the wireless message was caught, the hazy outline of the battleship was seen by all the passengers on the Olympic's deck. Full steam was put on, despite the fact that the captain of the Olympic had been warned to look out for mines, and the race to rescue the crew of the Audacious was begun.

"Half an hour later the Olympic was standing by, and the Audacious was rapidly settling. A very rough sea was running. The work of rescue went on without a hitch, except that several of the small boats were capsized by the heavy seas. Before the crew of the Audacious was transshipped several vessels of the British squadron in th Irish Sea came up and aided in the work. The crew was finally transferred to the Olympic at noon, within three hours after the accident.

"At first it was thought possible to tow the Audacious to the Irish coast, and a hawser was stretched, but it snapped. Late in the afternoon the hope of rescuing the vessel was abandoned, but the Olympic, the cruiser Liverpool and some submarines stood by to wait for the end.

"This came at nine o'clock at night. It was preceded by a terrific explosion, caused, it is thought, by some shells, which were shaken loose. Immediately afterwards the Audacious began to go down, stern first, and at nine in the evening it finally dropped out of sight."

TWO FORTRESSES TAKEN.

British Indian Troops Capture Turkish Strongholds by Storm.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Secretary of the Admiralty announces the success of the operations against the Turkish forts at Sheikh-Said, on the Strait of Babe El Mandeb, at the entrance of the Gulf of Aden, and of the occupation of the Turkish forts at Turba by Indian troops, assisted by the British cruiser Duke of Edinburgh.

The Turkish forts of Turba, says the Admiralty report, is situated on the rocky heights close to the boundary of Turkish territory and the Aden Protectorate. The guns of the fort command the isthmus connecting the peninsula of Sheikh-Said with the mainland.

Three battalions of troops were landed in the face of opposition, but under cover of the Duke of Edinburgh's fire, which had previously disabled the Turba fort. The Indians attacked the enemy's positions, being opposed by well-concealed artillery and infantry fire.

When the hills commanding the forts were taken the defenders weakened and 200 of the enemy escaped over the isthmus on camels or by boats. Six Turks were killed, the remainder being wounded or taken prisoners.

To Protect Arabs.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Britain, it is announced, has no intention of undertaking any military or war operations in Arabia, except for the protection of Arab interests against Turkish or other aggression, or in support of any attempt of the Arabs to free themselves from Turkish rule.

WM. TEMPLEMAN DEAD.

Former Minister of Mines and of Inland Revenue Passes Away.

VICTORIA, Nov. 16.—Hon. William Templeman, former Minister of Mines and of Inland Revenue in the Dominion Government, and proprietor of The Victoria Times, died at three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Hon. William Templeman was born at Packenham Village, Ontario, Sept. 28, 1844. He was, therefore, 70 years of age. He established The Almonte Gazette in 1867, and he moved to Victoria, B.C., in 1884, establishing The Times, which he has since published. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Commons in 1891 and 1896, and was called to the Senate in 1897. He entered the Laurier Cabinet in 1902 without portfolio. He became Minister of Inland Revenue in 1906, and Minister of Mines in 1907. He was elected to the House of Commons for Victoria, B.C., in 1906, and was elected by acclamation in Comox-Atlin in 1909, when he was defeated in Victoria. He was defeated in the Dominion general election of 1911.

Turkey Has Divine Aid Too.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 16.—(Via Berlin and London.) — Enver Pasha, Turkish Minister of War, and leader of the Young Turk party, has published a proclamation to the Turkish army as follows:

"Comrades, I have the honor to announce to you a noble irade from the Sultan. Our army will destroy our enemies with Allah's help and the assistance of the prophet, and by the pious prayer of the sovereign. Forward, always forward. Victory, glory and paradise are before us. Death and disgrace behind. Long live our Padishah."

TOWNS ARE EVACUATED

Breslau and Koenigsberg May Not Be Defended.

Stockholm Has Advices That Germans Will Give Up East Prussian and Silesian Fortresses and Will Not Defend Cracow — Another Correspondent Says Bases Will Be at Thorn and Oppein.

LONDON, Nov. 16. — A despatch to The London Telegraph from Stockholm says:

"A diplomatic despatch from Vienna states that the German army is evacuating both Breslau, in Silesia, and Koenigsberg, in East Prussia.

The Austrian army continues their retreat towards Cracow.

Berlin reports the flight of the population of Cracow. It is expected the railroads will be cut and that Cracow will not be defended.

The following official communication was issued from General Headquarters at Petrograd last night:—

"On the East Prussian front, at Stalluponen, around Angerburg, and near Johannesburg, our troops are making successful progress in the fighting. The action continues in the region of Soldau and Neidenburg, where we have progressed, notwithstanding the desperate resistance of the enemy.

"On the left bank of the Vistula the battle proceeds, developing along a front from Plock (Poland) to the River Warta. On the front between Kalisz and Wielun the enemy has withdrawn. In the neighborhood of Czenstochowa and towards the south the enemy has attempted an offensive, but this has failed.

"Our march on Cracow continues.

"In Galicia the Austrians are seeking to organize a defence on the San river, in the Douaiets region, west of the front comprising Zabno and Tarnow, and on the Wisloka, on the Jaslo front.

"In the region to the south of the Galician front our troops are advancing towards the passes across the Carpathians."

Leaving the defence of Cracow mainly in the hands of the Austrians, and attempting to hold the Russian advance along the Polish frontier only by desultory rearguard action, the Germans, according to the view of the situation held in Petrograd, are to-day withdrawing their main forces into Silesia, whence many are being sent north to the region between Thorp and the River Warthe. In this territory the Germans, taking advantage of the small numbers of Russian troops, are attempting an energetic advance at the same time as they move forward on both banks of the lower Vistula.

The Petrograd correspondent of The Daily News says:

"The German eastern army will conduct the home defence from two bases. They are organizing their northern forces at Thorn, using the back belt railways to maintain towns with their East Prussian army. The new southern base is Oppein, on the Oder, fifty miles southeast of Breslau.

"A quantity of guns are being brought to Oppein from Cracow, and the latter place evidently is to be abandoned to the Austrian garrison.

"In the last stages of the retreat from Poland the Germans covered twenty-five miles daily. Their column, which fell back on Kalisz, lost 80,000 men, of which 20,000 were killed."

The Morning Post correspondent at Petrograd says:—

"Another big battle is developing on the Polish frontier, the Germans having drawn forces from the East Prussian front for these operations. The German object in turning back from its retreat and again advancing on Poland is plainly an attempt to relieve the pressure on East Prussia. The failure of such diversion, however, is a foregone conclusion."

PRO-GERMAN MATTER MAILED.

Canadian Postoffice Is Used To Convey Pamphlets Says Leacock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 16.—Prof. Stephen Leacock of McGill University, the well-known humorist and author, has written to The Montreal Star protesting against the distribution by the postoffices in this country of mail matter calculated to prejudice public opinion against Great Britain and her allies in the war. He states:

"The Canadian postoffice has been, and is still, deliberately handling and distributing news matter posted in Germany, with German post stamps, and intended to influence public opinion against the British cause. German newspapers are folded up, and inside them are placed leaflets, printed in English in Berlin, for Canadian consumption. False accounts of German victories, English piracies and French atrocities, are thus prepared in Germany and despatched. The Canadian postoffice does the rest."

Prof. Leacock states that he has made private protest to the Government and to the Montreal postoffice, but without avail.

Mysterious German Under Probe.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—A mysterious individual known as Horst Von Dergoltz and Bridgman Taylor, described as a major in the Mexican army and suspected of being a German spy, was remanded in the police court on the charge of failing to register as an alien enemy. The prosecution said that although the prisoner was charged with this minor offence he was under the very grave suspicion of the Foreign Office, the Admiralty and the police, and that he might have to answer more serious charges when the inquiry into his career had been completed.

LORD ROBERTS IS DEAD

Famous Soldier Succumbs to Pneumonia in France.

After Visit to the Front to See His Beloved East Indian Troops Hero of Kandahar Contracts a Chill and Is Taken to Headquarters For Treatment — Roberts Was 82 Years of Age.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Field Marshal Earl Roberts died Saturday night in France from pneumonia. A telegram from Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary forces on the continent, apprised Earl Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, of the death of Britain's great soldier. The telegram reads:

"I deeply regret to tell you that Lord Roberts died at eight o'clock Saturday evening."

Field Marshal Roberts, who was colonel-in-chief of the Indian troops, had gone to France to give them his greeting. Soon after his arrival he become seriously ill. He suffered from a severe chill on Thursday, and pneumonia rapidly developed. His great age, 82 years, militated against his recover, the crisis in the disease coming quickly. He was recently given an honorary command in connection with the stay in England of the contingents from the overseas Dominions.

EARL ROBERTS.

The death of Lord Roberts, which occurred Saturday at the headquarters of the British expeditionary force in France, was extremely sudden. He was in his usual good health when he left England on Wednesday with his daughter, Lady Aileen Roberts, and his son-in-law, Major Lewin. The party had a rough trip crossing the Channel, but the aged general felt no ill-effects, and went through with his program on the continent. In fact, he was about to return home when his death occurred.

Earl Roberts had motored to the British bases and camps, had reviewed the Indian troops, and had conferred with the leading officers. It was not until about dinner time Friday evening that he complained of a chill. His condition grew steadily worse and death came Saturday evening while he slept.

The passage of the great warrior has created profound grief throughout the country. At all churches and in the camps where the soldiers are training, touching references were made yesterday to his death and the "Dead March in Saul" was played.

Lord Roberts' devotion to the interests of the army, his hard work in this connection, and his seeming good health had been the subject of comment since the beginning of the war. He was the most popular military figure in Great Britain.

Field Marshal Earl Frederick Sleigh Roberts of Kandahar, Pretoria and Waterford, was born at Cawnpore, India, on Sept. 30, 1832. He was a son of Gen. Sir Abraham Roberts, G.C.B., and Isabella, daughter of Major Abraham Bunbury, of the 62nd Foot. He was educated at Eton and Sandhurst, and entered the Bengal Artillery in 1851. He became a lieutenant just before the Mutiny. He served throughout the siege of Delhi, where he was wounded, and won the Victoria Cross at Hodagunge in 1858. During the campaign he was mentioned seven times in despatches. Ten years later he was made Quartermaster-General of the Abyssinian Expedition and the became Q. M. G. in Bengal, where he attained his full colonelcy. Lord Roberts commanded the column in the Afghan war, and it was he who captured the enemy's positions at Peiwar and who occupied Cabul. He then led the dash on Kandahar, for which exploit he was made a Baron. He rose steadily in rank until he was made commander-in-chief of India, during which time he commanded the Burmese expedition and took Mandalay. For four years he was commander-in-chief in Ireland, and then took command of the British forces in the Boer War. In 1901 he became commander-in-chief of the British army, retiring in 1904.

Canada Expresses Sorrow.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—The Duke of Connaught cabled the following message to Premier Asquith: "In my own name, and that of the Canadian Government, I desire to express our deepest sympathy with the British nation and army at the loss they have sustained by the death of the distinguished field marshal, Lord Roberts, whom we are proud to remember as the colonel of the Royal Canadian Artillery."

Messages were also sent by Sir Robert Borden and Acting Premier Sir George Foster.

A Canadian preacher thinks the time is near at hand when there will be no liars. When that time comes, obituaries will be much shorter than they are now.

U. S. TO WARN REPUBLICS.

Will Use Influence To Make Ecuador and Columbia Stay Neutral.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16. — The American Ministers to Ecuador and Colombia have been instructed by Secretary Bryan to investigate the charges of the French and British Governments of the alleged violations of neutrality in aiding German naval vessels by coaling them and permitting them to communicate with the shore through radio stations on neutral ground.

This action was announced by Secretary Bryan last night. It is stated here that it is in complete compliance with the request of Great Britain and France that the influence of the United States Government be exerted to bring these South American countries to a realization of the responsibilities in permitting breaches of neutrality, and to remind them of the terms of the neutrality proclamations published by both. The matter will not be taken up in any way with the Ministers of these countries in Washington, it was learned at the State Department.

TRIPLE DEFENCE LINE READY.

Germany Prepared For Retreat Into Own Territory Says Swiss Officer.

GENEVA, Nov. 16. — (Via Paris.) —The German army staff has prepared three formidable defence lines from the North Sea to Rhine, to be used in event of a retreat, according to a high Swiss army officer, who recently returned from Germany.

The first line of defences extends from Antwerp southward to Namur and Sedan, he says. The second is on the frontier between Maestrich, Luxemburg and Metz. The third is on the Rhine itself, extending from Basel to Cologne, and even further. The officer didn't visit Alsace or Lorraine.

The Swiss officer predicts that long battles similar to those of the Marne and the Aisne will be repeated on each of these lines unless Russia attacks strongly meantime.

Onoka Has Reached Port.

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 16.—Shortly after the steamer Onoka had signalled Athabasca last Saturday morning, and asked Athabasca to send a wireless message to Port Arthur for a tug, her crew succeeded in temporarily repairing her engines so that she was able to proceed toward Fort William.

This plea of the "inevitableness of war" reminds one of the old fashioned explanation of an automobile accident that it "could not have been avoided."

The Abyssinian wife is the head of the house, says a writer. Well, what is wonderful about that? Ask nine out of ten of our own happily married men.

Revolt Fomented By Germany.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16. — A secret agreement with Generals De Wet and Beyers was secured by the German Government prior to the war that the insurrection in Cape Colony and the Transvaal would take place, according to advices from Berlin. It is hoped in Germany that the revolt in South Africa will compel the British to divert territorial troops from India or Australia to South Africa and keep them from the conflict in

CAPTAIN BADLY INJURED

Report from Sodus Point says that Capt. Vandusen was badly injured the other day when the schooner Bertie Calkins was disabled in a storm after leaving Sodus Point with coal for Picton The vessel was caught in a squall ten miles out of port, and the crew state they were very fortunate in not going to the bottom. Her mainsail was carried away, and the boom struck Capt. Vandusen on the head, inflicting a serious wound and rendering him unconscious for six hours.

THOUGHT THEY WERE GERMANS

A Kingston citizen living on Wellington street, caused a sensation this morning by running from his home with a shotgun and firing it twice in the air after the soldiers had passed by on their way to the Armouries from the cricket field. A call sent in to the police station was responded to by P. C. Barrigan and the man was taken to the police station. He will be examined as to his sanity by Dr. Ryan. It is stated that he thought he soldiers were Germans.

Report of an Address Delivered by Most Worshipful Brother W. D. McPherson, K.C., M.P.P., Grand Master A.F. & A.M. of the Grand Lodge of Canada, in the Province of Ontario, at the Provincial Lodge of Instruction, Held at Toronto, on Wednesday, October 14th 1914 and Action Taken Thereon

Referring to the lamentable war in which Great Britain and her Allies are at present engaged with Germany and Austria the Most Worshipful the Grand Master said, in part:

"Let me take occasion of the struggle of the brave and gallant people of Belgium in the cause of Liberty, to draw your attention to her, contending as she is, against fearful odds, for being, and for the common privileges of human nature.

"With the German Declaration of War a few weeks ago, a new era appears to have arisen in the World, promulging doctrines, and fraught with conequences wholly subversive in their tendency, of the Public Law of Nations, and the general liberties of mankind. This merciless war, which is now shaking the European system to its foundations, originated in a quarrel in which neither Britain nor Belgium had direct concern. No efforts were spared by the Statesmen of either had direct concern. No efforts were spared by the statesmen of either country to avert it, or limit its area. Human liberty may yet, perhaps, be obliged to repose its principal hopes on the intelligence and vigor of the Anglo-Saxon race. As far as depends upon us at least, I trust these hopes will not be disappointed, and that to the extent which subsist with a settled independen British pacific policy, our opinions and sentiments may be brought to act on the right side, and to the right end, on an occasion which is, in truth, nothing less than a momentous question between an intelligent age, full of knowledge, thirsting for improvement, and quickened by a thousand moral impulses, on the one side, and the most arbitrary pretensions, sustained by enormous power, on the other.

"In regard to Belgium, the governing factor for Britain has been the Treaty of 1839, with its accumulated subsequent history, and, particularly, that of 1870 following the war between Germany and France, when the question of the neutrality of Belgium arose. Among other things, Prince Bismark, on behalf of Germany, then gave, in writing, a declaration that the German Confederation and Allies would respect the neutrality of Belgium, it being understood that such neutrality would also be respected by other belligerent Powers. On or about the 3rd of August last, an ultimatum was presented by Germany to Belgium, the object of which was to offer Belgium friendly relations with Germany, if she would facilitate the passing of German troops through Belgium to France. Twelve hours was the time fixed for a reply from Belgium, and she replied that an attack on her neutrality would be a flagrant violation of the rights of Nations; that to accept Germany's proposal would be to sacrifice the honor of the Belgian Nation, and that she was firmly resolved to repel aggression by every means possible.

"King Albert of Belgium telegraphed King George:

"Remembering the numerous proofs of your Majesty's friendship and that of your predecessor, and the friendly attitude of England in 1870, and the proof of friendship which she has just given us again, I make a supreme appeal for the diplomatic intervention of Your Majesty to safeguard the integrity of Belgium."

"Britain's interest in Belgium neutrality has naver at any time ceased to be as strong as it was in 1870, when Mr. Gladstone said:

"We have an interest in the independence of Belgium. It is found in the question whether this country would quietly stand by and witness the perpetration of the direst crime that ever strained the pages of history, and thus become participators in the sin."

"The answers of the French and German Governments, to questions by the British Government, upon the subject of Belgium's neutrality, are as follows: The French Government said they were

"Resolved to respect the neutrality of Belgium, and it would only be in the event of some other Power violating that neutrality that France might find herself under the necessity to act otherwise."

"Germany replied that The Secretary fo Foreign Affairs could not possibly give an answer before consulting the Emperor and the Chancellor."

And the German Minister subsequently informed the British Ambassador that he rather doubted whether they would answer at all, as any reply they might give could not fail in the event of war, to have the undesirable effect of disclosing part of their plan of campaign."

"British acquiescence in German proposals might, conceivably, have prevented our nation from being involved in this war, but such were the porposals that the only answer was "They are infamous, and rather than accept them we will face war with you." and there is not to-day, throughout the Universe, a single right-thinking man, of impartial mind, whose admiration is not greater for Britain, on account of her firm and noble stand.

"The Mother of Parliaments has requested His Most Gracious Majesty King George the Fifth

"To convey to His Majesty the King of the Belgium the sympathy and admiration with which Great Britain regards the heroic resistance offered by his Army and people to the wanton invasion of their territory, coupled with an assurance of the determination of Britain to support in every way the effors of Belgium to vindicate her own independence and the public law of Europe."

"Canada, at the recent session of Parliament, has taken action which has notified the Mother Country, and her friends and her foes, that, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, there is but one mind, and one heart, upon this great issue, and we take our position behind Britain, conscious and proud that she did not engage in war from any selfish motive, or for purposes of aggrandisement, but only to maintain her honor untarnished; to fulfil her treaty obligations, and to save civilization from the uncontrolled lust of world conquest by an ambitious Power.

"The Allied Nations are bravely and heroically fighting day by day, for freedom against oppression, for democracy, for civilization against the reversion for that barbarism in which the only law is that of brute force.

"History reminds us, that time and again, the duty of maintaining the principle of national intergrity and national independence has, at most critical periods, fallen upon States relatively small in area and population, but great in courage and resource:—on Athens, Sparta, the Swiss Cantons, and, not less gloriously, three centuries ago, on the Netherlands. History will record in respect of this war, that never has duty been more clearly and bravely acknowledged, bore courageously or heroically discharged, than during the past few weeks by King Albert and his Belgium soldiers. Without fear or finching, they have faced, against almost incalculable odds, all the horrors of devastation and spoliation by fire, rapine and outrage of the most fiendish nature. And, though Liege has fallen and Antwerp been taken, and the curtain of darkness appears destined to fall upon them, yet we pray God it may not be so, and that in His Great Mercy He will deliver this most gallant people, and cause their enemies to be scattered in defeat.

" 'For Freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeather, by bleeding Sire to Son,
Tho' baffled oft, it ever won.'

"The Belgian record, for centuries, has been virile and strong. In the 16th century their ancestors battled against Spanish aggression, in days when Spain appeared likely to dominate the world. The same virility is gloriously displayed today. The same invincible blood flows in the veins of her gallant sons and daughters, and through the most terrible carnage and miseries, they have proved, notwithstanding the infamous treachery of innumerable spies in the pay of an unscrupulous and perfidious enemy, that they will die, but not surrender.

"I repeat, that the object of my remarks is to draw occasion to the struggles and hardships of this most gallant and much-wronged people, in the earnest hope that you, my Brethren, may unanimously concur with me, in the expression, in some tangible form, of our most heartfelt sympathy in their terrible struggle against outrage and oppression. Their circumstances address the civilized world with a pathos, impossible, I think, to be resisted; they invoke our favor by more moving considerations than can well belong to the condition of any other people. Truly may they stretch forth their arms, raise their eyes, and look to all the Communities of the Earth, beseeching them by a generous recollection of their ancestors, by the consideration of their present desolation and ruined cities and villages, by their wives and children outraged and mutilated, by their blood shed like water, by all the ties that animate humanity, to extend to them compassionate regard and assistance.

"If you feel as I do, that we should help them financially, I shall be pleased to have some formal expression of your feeling to that effect, and will then take all necessary steps to get relief to them at the arliest possible moment."

The remarks of the M.W. the Grand Master were received with much applause, and it was then moved by R. W. Geo. H. Smith, D.D.G.M. of Toronto West District No. 11, Seconded by R. W. Bro. Dr. W. R. Walters, D.D.G.M. of Toronto East District No. 11-A, and unanimously resolved, after the Deputy Grand Master and a number of eminent Members of the Craft had expressed their fulest concurrence in the remarks of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, and in the substance of the motion, that

"This Provincial Lodge of Instruction hereby approves of subscriptions being invited by Members of the Craft in this jurisdiction, to a fund for the relief of distressed Belgians, and that the District Deputy Grand Masters and Worshipful Masters of Lodges throughout the jurisdiction be requested to support as strongly as possible the claim of this fund, to the generosity of the Members of the Craft, of a sum, which in the aggregate, will be not less than One Dollar per Member; all moneys collected to be immediately transmitted to the Grand Secretary to hand and pay over same either to the Belgian Government, through the agency of the Dominion Government, or otherwise, as to the Most Worshipful the Grand Master may appear advisable, so that the intended beneficiaries may receive the contributions as quickly and directly as possible, and that the address of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, in introducing the subject, be printed and distributed through the office of the Grand Secretary, by sending one or more copies, with a copy of this Resolution to each District Deputy Grand Master, and to the Worshipful Master of each Lodge in the jurisdiction, and likewise by publication through the press of the Province."

NEWSPAPER MEN TO THE FRONT

A modern illustration that the pen is not mightier than the sword, is furnished in the provisional school at the Armouries in London, where City Editor William James Baxter and Advertising Solicitor Kenneth D. McKay, of the Windsor Evening Record, are doing their best to make the grade so they can go to the front with the second contingent. They do not want to go as newspaper men, but as soldiers. They are attending the school to qualify as lieutenants.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or an male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Australia Modifies Ban.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16. — Notification has been received by the Government that, although the exportation of wheat, flour, meats and sugar from Australia is prohibited, unless with the consent of the Minister of Trade and Customs, there will be no difficulty in obtaining permission to export Australian and other frozen meats to Canada, provided the Minister is satisfied that the shipments will be used for home consumption in Canada.

Vera Cruz Occupation Cost $5,000,000

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A high official of the War Department last night estimated that the occupation of Vera Cruz by the American Government had cost for the army alone, close to $5,000,000. In addition to this cost, merely for quartering and feeding the army, the protection and feeding of Mexican refugees, who fled to the United States after the battle of Ojinaga, cost in the neighborhood of $800,000, for which there have been no returns. This cost is exclusive of the money required to keep the fleet ready for action on both coasts of Mexico. No attempt has been made to figure the cost of this expenditure.

Educational Value Of Good Books

Few there are who realize the extensive knowledge that can be gained through an occasional reference to what might be termed commonplace books. There is probably not a family in Belleville that does not possess at least one such volume that is seldom referred to, or that is possibly concealed in some hiding place where it is not even seen, except at such times as there is a general housecleaning. Run over in your mind the titles of some of these books in your own home. Doubtless you have a copy of the Bible. Do you ever refer to it as a historical work or as a work of reference? You know Abraham Lincoln said: "No library is complete without two certain books—the Bible and Shakespeare; hardly a quotation used in literature that is not taken from one of these works," and Lincoln was a self-educated man—a man of practical learning, whose words of wisdom will be handed down to posterity.

The Bible thus becomes a work of more than ordinary educational value to the everyday citizen; to men and women, boys and girls; old and young alike. The Intelligencer is now offering the New Illustrated Bible a volume that is unique in that it completely illustrates the subjects which each picture accompanies. The illustrations alone cost $50,000. It is possible to embellish a book without actually illustrating it. This Bible is not merely embellished; it is truly and accurately illustrated. Other Bibles there are containing pictures; none other in which the individual texts are actually illuminated, as though by the touch of inspiration. Comparison is impossible, for this new Bible stands alone—there is no other of its kind. Therefore, praise of this superb new book means no disparagement of the many excellent editions published heretofore. Nor is this superiority surprising; for more than 100 of the world's greatest artists working under the advice of archaeologists and historians of wide renown have contributed the choicest products of their skill and genius to produce this grand triumph of artistic beauty and perfection in historical detail. These pictures are not mere reproductions of mediaeval frescoes and more or less familiar modern photographs, inserted at random; they have been specially made, in the light of exact knowledge, to illustrate selected texts in accordance with the matured beliefs of the greatest living scientists. It must be remembered that this new Bible also contains every essential special feature that gives peculiar value to the best of ordinary Bibles, such as marginal references, descriptive helps, and beautifully colored maps.

Get this Bible by clipping certificates from The Intelligencer. Today's certificate is printed on another page, and the plan is fully explained there.

GERMAN CLUTURE

"Our German culture we must bear to lands benighted everywhere." So say the Germans as excuse for turning howling war dogs loose. Then they, upon some sleeping town, their messengers of death drop down; the dreaming children thus are slain, and German culture scores again. "Our culture", say the German scribes, "will elevate all human tribes; we'll purify their darkened souls, and shoot their churches full of holes; when their cathedrals, storied, grand, are laid in dust at our command, and German shrapnel bursts and whines among their worshipped saints and shrines, they'll bless the culture we have brought, and wonder why they ever fought!" Their culture teaches German knights to overlook all human rights. "The bond that bears our hand and seal mere paper is, when martial zeal inspires us to the bloody fray—a form," the German statesmen say. "Our solemn compact is a fake, and all our oaths we gayly break; all contracts and all vows must yield, when German culture is afield." No wonder that the Germans grieve, since nations simply won't receive the blessing that they would bestow, but look upon them sa a foe!

FIXES 1916 AS WAR LIMIT

But Invasion of England Won't Be Easy, says Austrian General

ROME, Nov. 14.—Field Marshall Evettovich of the Austrian Army has published an articles fixing 1916 as the extreme limit of the war.

Next Spring, he writes, England can put another army into the field and in the Summer and Autumn other belligerents can collect fresh forces, but in 1916 no more can possibly be raised. The entrance of neutral States into the conflict will prolong rather than abbreviate the war.

A great naval battle will be inevitable, and Germany will find the invasion of England most difficult.

TWO
Exceptionally Liberal Dressmaking Offers
For The Month of November

That will insure our large Dressmaking Staff of steady employment.

Your new Suit, Coat or Dress cut and first fitting free.

During the month of November we will cut and give the first fitting free on any suit, coat or dress material bought in the store that sells at $1.00 a yard or upwards. This is an offer that has no precedent in The Ritchie Store. When one considers that in the cutting and first fitting lies the style and success of your garment, you will undoubtedly make haste to take advantage of this very liberal offer, especially when we tell you that the cutting and fitting will be done personally by Miss Peterson, our capable dressmaking artist, one of the best in her line. Although this offer will be good for the entire month of November, we would advise ladies to make the selection of their suit, coat or dress material at once, while there is still a large and varied selection to choose from. Remember, this offer is good on any material that sells at $1.00 and upwards.

Your New Dress Made to Order $10.00

Your New Suit Tailored to Order $12.00

In order that we may be able to give employment to our entire staff of girls in the Dressmaking Department, we have decided to make up any silk or other material from our stock at or over $1.00 per yard, in any fashionable style of dress you may choose, under the personal supervision of Miss Peterson, and charge Only Ten Dollars for the making. To make a suit from any suiting in stock at $1.00 per yard or over we will charge Only Twelve Dollars for the making. These prices will not cover the cost of the labor, but we are willing to lose something in order to give all our hands steady employment.

NO RECOURSE AGAINST HOME WRECKER

Because there is no law on the statute books of Ontario to prevent a man from stealing another man's wife, John O'Keefe, arrested by Windsor immigration inspectors, while enroute to Detroit with the wife and two children of J. Jagin, of Renfrew County, was dismissed by Police Magistrate Legatt, of Windsor. The charge laid against O'Keefe was that of taking possession of another man's children, but the court decided that no evidence was brought to show that he took the children or induced the mother to run away with him. She came voluntarily and took the children, and, according to the court's ruling, the only action that could be brought was a civil suit by the father. "I am sorry there is no law in this country under which I can convict you," said the Magistrate to O'Keefe. "You ran away from your wife and children and took this woman away from her husband, practically breaking up two homes. If I could I would give you a stiff jail sentence. Go back to your family and leave other men's wives alone."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS ARE SHIPPED TO EUROPE

Carries Presents of Germans, but Will Not be Molested.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—A ship left this port yesterday which carried tons of women's clothing and children's clothing, and all sorts of useful and pretty things, which must be in Germany by December 25, and yet this particular ship could walk right up to the British cruiser Suffolk or any other British man of war and not be in the slightest danger of detention or capture.

The vessel also carries similar articles for England, France, Austria, Servia and to Montenegro. It is the Christmas ship, the flagship of Commodora Santa Claus, and carries Christmas gifts for the women and children of the devastated countries of Europe.

The movements was initiated by the Chicago Herald and associated newspapers.

London Paper Severely Raps Lord Kitchener

Daily Chronicle Calls His Policy Detrimental Rather Than Helpful

ADVANTAGE TO GERMANY

As a Result of War Secretary's Policy Pro-German Articles Are Appearing in Anti-German Papers

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Daily Chronicle, in an editorial protesting against the British War Office's treatment of war correspondents, points out that from the very outset the Germans arranged that all their principal newspapers should have officially recognized war correspondents, who, while kept sufficiently in leading strings to prevent their disclosing anything to the prejudice of the army, enjoy the facilities for writing up stirring daily exploits of German leadership, German heroism, and German science and engineering.

"If Germans die in the performance of a heroic exploit, they do not die unheard of, unhonored and unsung, as with rare exceptions their British and French opponents do. In this way the martial enthusiasm of the nation is kept at the highest pitch.

"It is not the French Government or the French War Office whose policy it has been to hunt down British correspondents in France like vermin and treat them as if they were worse than spies. The policy has been that of Lord Kitchener. And though the French authorities have tardily and without zeal participated in it, it has always been the British authorities and the Britsih detectives to whom their countrymen have had to go in terror.

"The British policy has not been uniform or unambiguous throughout. At the beginning the War Office made arrangements with the press to recognise war correspindents. After Lord Kitchener's advent these arrangements were abandoned and a policy of persecution has been substituted and has been steadily increased. In the face of it the correspondents persisted as best they could and it is due almost entirely to them that our public knows what little it does about our men's feats. But the latest form of persecution, which consists in not only imprisoning correspondents but depriving them of their passports so that they cannot move anywhere on the continent again is aimed at their complete extinction and if continued will achieve it.

"The hospitality which Berlin gave to its own correspondent is offered also to those of neutral countries, with, from its point of view the happiest results. Four important journalists, for instance, were so tactfully treated in this way that they not only wrote up the German army at that time, but on returning to the United States, have written pro-German articles even in the Anti-German papers; ever since. The episode forms a striking contrast to the long series of insults and injuries whereby British officialdom did its best, fortunately without success to alienate the German press.

"It now appears that the allied governments have awakened to the claims of neutral journals and representatives of many, including two great American news agencies and the leading newspapers in Holland, Italy, and Scandinavia, are to be taken on a tour through the Franco-British army. We are very glad that they are, but by itself the step is a singular anomaly. These neutral countries are to enjoy a direct news service from the front, and our own people whose blood and money is being poured out, are to be content with the geographical rarities and of the official bulletins and the amiable twaddle of 'eye witnesses.'

"Surely it is almost a final absurdity in a situation which would be utterly farcical were it not so disastrous-tragic."

DOMINION GOVERNMENT DEMONSTRATION CAR HERE

The Right and Wrong Methods of Marketing Eggs Shown and Explained—An Interesting Exhibit of Wool

An extremely interesting and attractive feature of the Demonstration Car, containing the Egg and Wool Exhibits of the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, which was on exhibition in this city yesterday afternoon and today was the educational display illustrating the right and wrong methods of marketing eggs.

This display formed the large part of the Egg Exhibit and was an object lesson that will not soon be forgotten by those who visited the car. It was arranged in two large, electrically lighted show cases. Each case contained a series of models together with appropriate back grounds and descriptions illustrating in the one instance the careless methods too frequently followed in the handling of eggs on many Canadian farms, and in the other the results that may be obtained through the adoption of improved methods on the farm, in the Country Store, and in fact by all those engaged in the Egg Trade.

In each instance the course followed by the egg from the time it was laid until it reached the consumer was mapped out. The cause of the many bad and stale eggs was evident when one noted the unsatisfactory conditions that prevailed on many farms, and in many Country Stores. It was pointed out that even the mongrel, non-descript Poultry found on many farms, refused to use for the greater part of the year, the dirty, undesirable poultry houses provided for them. The eggs were gathered infrequently and from questionable places. They were held until it was convenient to carry them to market, and were usually traded on a flat-rate basis, for merchandise at the Country Store where little or no attention was paid to quality Here they were frequently held indefinitely, in anticipation of a rising market and often were shipped in damp and musty cases to the Wholesale Dealer, who candled and graded them. The result of the candling was indicated and it was evident that but a relatively small proportion of the eggs graded "select." The manner in which the retail grocer permitted eggs to deteriorate was also pointed out, and if by chance a portion of the uncandled eggs went direct to the consumer the result was very evident.

The second series showed a flock of pure bred poultry kept in a clean, well ventilated poultry house provided with clean, dry nests from which the eggs were gathered frequently and regularly. The eggs were kept covered in a clean utensil in the coolest, driest place in the farm house and marketed at least once, better twice a week. In the Country Store they were bought on the basis of quality and packed in clean, dry cases and forwarded with the minimum of delay. The result of this careful management was apparent in the Candling Room of the Wholesale Warehouse where a decidedly large proportion of the eggs graded "select" and if by chance a portion of these eggs went direct to the consum-

British Officers Helping Russia

Experienced Tacticians Sent to the Eastern Front to Sit in the Czar's War Councils

NEW YORK, 16.—The latest instance of co-operation between the Allies, according to a well-informed American, who got here yesterday from the war zone, is the sending of experienced British officers to Russia to assist in meeting developments in the eastern campaign.

Russia is strong in men but weak in tacticians—"book warriors." She discovered this quickly when pitted against von Hindenburg in East Prussia, and with the energy and enterprise which has characterized her in this war, she set about remedying it.

England, while none too well provided with officers for the fighting line and feeling the pinch keenly in supplying the many vacant places caused by her heavy casualty list, has a fair supply of experienced leaders who, while past the age limit permitting their inclusion in the active fighting contingent, are valuable in war councils. It is understood that it is from these that the officers sent to Russia were largely selected.

According to the information reaching here yesterday, they were dispatched to Russia late in October, and arrived at Russian headquarters last week.

FORD ASSETS GROW

Figures Almost Double Last Year's Total--Plenty of Cash on Hand

DETROIT, Nov. 16.—Total assets of $61,632,257.16 and a surplus of $48,827,032.97 are shown in the balance sheet of the Ford Motor Company for the year ended Sept. 30, 1914. Despite complaints of general business depression, these figures are practically double the corresponding figures of last year, when assets amounted to $35,033,919.80 and the surplus was $28,124,178.68.

Cash on hand and in the banks on Sept. 30, 1914 amounted to $27,441,468,79, against $13,225,710.82 at the same time last year. Buildings and building fixtures now reach the total of $10,714,928.45, compared with $4,615,152.82 last year. There are also tremendous increases in the items of factory equipment, office furniture and fixtures, power plant, machinery, tools, patterns and patents.

The surprise to the bankers who received the statement of the company today is the enormous gain of cash on hand despite the distribution of profits among employes under the new profit-sharing system.

Wedding Feast Ended With Riot

Six Guests Went to Hospitals When Remark Annoyed the Bridegroom

BOTTLES AS WEAPONS

Beer, Wine, Vodka and Mixed Nationalities Gave Police a Busy Time--None Seriously Injured

MONTREAL, Nov. 16—Six persons, two of them women, were taken to hospitals last night suffering from wounds sustained when a Polish wedding celebration held in the Auditorium Hall, in Ontario Street West, developed into a small-sized riot as a result of a too liberal mixing of nationalities and liquid refreshments, including vodka.

All went well until shortly after eight o'clock when, it is said, the groom took exception to something one of the guests said to the bride. As the newly arrived benedict used a bottle to drive his words home, retaliation in kind was in order. The row quickly became a general one and when the police from the Chenneville street station arrived upon the scene, it was one of disorder and bloodshed. Few of the guests were unscathed in the general melee, women as well as men, and six of them were so badly cut that their removal to hospitals was necessary.

Inside the hall jugs, bottles glasses and dishes were smashed, while the floor in places was covered with beer. A wholesale round-up of the wedding party being impracticable, the police confined their activities to clearing the hall and caring for the injured. The guests departed, leaving the greater part of the wedding feast untasted and unlimited quantities of beer, wine and vodka still in the kegs. No arrests were made.

SYDNEY'S CREW DETERMINED

Would Not be Taken Alive, Cruiser's Artificer Wrote

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Artificer Turnbull of the Australian warship Sydney, which destroyed the Emden, in a letter written at the beginning of the cruise in search of the elusive German warship says:

"If they capture us, well our orders are 'be British,' and I assure you every one on board is ready not to be taken alive."

Germans Defeated In Air Battle

Eight Aeroplanes in Fight, Two Being French and Two British

LURED OVER TRENCHES

Enemy's Four Machines Were Brought to Earth by Allies' Sharpnel

PARIS, Nov. 16.—A thrilling encounter, in which eight aeroplanes, four German, two French and two British figured, occurred in the vicinity of Ypres. The German machines were destroyed finally by artillery and the eight officers whom they carried killed.

The Germans were seen approaching to reconnoitre the lines of the allies. The French and British airships immediately ascended to meet them. For some time, the aircraft circled about each other, rising and descending, while machine guns spattered bullets among them. The sky was clear and the gunners on the ground had a good view of the aeroplanes, but failed to cripple any of the German machines.

Then suddenly four of the allied aeroplanes made a swift dash toward their own trenches, and were followed by the Germans, who too late discovered the feint, and perceived the perils of the situation only when shrapnel burst about them. In a few minutes the four German aeroplanes crashed to earth.

A detachment of Russian cavalry operating in the vicinity of Plock, 58 miles west of Warsaw, captured two days ago two German aviators and repelled the effort at rescue undertaken by two companies of German infantry, according to a Petrograd despatch.

The aviators are Lieutenant Meres and Lieutenant Poldte. They made a reconnaissance in an aeroplane of Konin, Kutno and Plock. On the last named town they threw down two bombs. Trouble with the motor of their machine made it necessary for them to land to the west of Rypin, where a detachment of Russian cavalrymen found them in the woods and quickly surrounded them. At this moment two companies of German infantry appeared, and attempted to rescue the airmen, but their attack was repulsed by the Russians, and the two aviators and their aeroplane, which had not been damaged, were yesterday brought into Plock.

Sir C. Spring-Rice Visiting At Ottawa

British Ambassador to the United States the Guest of the Governor General

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.— Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British Ambassador at Washington, reached Ottawa today. He was met by Sir Robert Borden, who had himself just returned to Canada after four weeks spent at Hot Springs, Virginia, and was conducted in one of the royal motors to Government House. Others who met the Ambassador were: Hon. Robert Rogers, Hon. T. W. Crothers, Hon. W. T. White, and the Governor-General's Aide-de-camp.

"My usual bi-yearly visit to his Royal Highness," remarked Sir Cecil, in explanation of his presence here. "There is nothing significant attached to my visit. It was my intention to come earlier, but stress of business prevented me. I had to postpone my visit three times when I was just about to leave Washington."

Though the primary object of Sir Cecil is to pay a visit to the Duke, it is certain that he will also confer with the Government on certain topics of importance to Canadians and Americans alike. These will probably include the questions of the purchase of British army supplies, in connection with which it has been claimed the United States has received orders which might have been filled in Canada, and the German-American menace.

TO FIGHT FOR BRITAIN

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 16.—Three hundred United States citizens, the majority of them former Canadians, and all experienced militia men, sail from New York for England tomorrow to join the British army for active service, according to Ed. M. Rigsby of Cleveland, formerly of this city, and one of the party, who passed through London today en route for the point of departure.

FEELING IN BUFFALO AS TO THE WAR

Interview With Mr. Mikel, K. C. With Reference to the Present Struggle--Germans Prepared to Give up Positions to Fight for Their Country

A representative of The Intelligencer learning that W. C. Mikel, K. C., had recently been in Buffalo, obtained from him the following interesting interview:

What did you find the feeling to be in Buffalo as to the war? Everybody with whom I came in contact gave me the impression that the most of the Buffalo people were in favor of the Allies. Those who support the Allies, however, are more or less passive while the supporters of Germany are very active. I noticed from the Buffalo press that an organization called "The German American Alliance", is becoming quite powerful and adding greatly to its membership. The object is stated to be "to develop the German spirit." The difficulty, of course, is that this organization may get into control of reckless German Reservists and Canada might then have something to fear. There are said to be about 300,000 German and about 200,000 Rustrian Reservists in the United States, most of whom would give up their positions and opportunities in the U.S. and risk their lives to go all the way to Germany to fight for their country. Thes men, no doubt, would take the same risk to make war on Canada if a leader arose and an opportunity presented.

I came down in General Hughes' private car last night and the General is aware of the movements of the German American Aliance. General Hughes reviewed the Toronto Home Guards of several thousand on last Saturday, and he is in thorough sympathy with the movement and anxious that it should be encouraged.

WAR BULLETINS

Canadian Press Special Despatches

ALLIES HOLDING THEIR OWN AND PUSHING BACK ENEMY

PARIS, Nov. 17.—1.30 p.m.—An official announcement this afternoon says artillery fire from Nieuport to Dixmude and around Ypres reached a climax in violence yesterday. The allied artillery compelled the Germans to desist from building dykes, and the floods compelled the enemy to evacuate part of their trenches. German infantry attacks south of Bixschoote, and south of Ypres and on the Aisne, at Vailly have failed, the enemy being either driven back or destroyed. The allies have advanced between Bixchoote and the canal, to the south of Verdun and in the region of St. Mihiel.

WHOLE OF NORTH SEA IN MILITARY AREA

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Premier Asquith stated in the House of Commons today that the British Government had decided to declare the whole of the North Sea to be in military area.

All subjects of the enemy found on neutral vessels, the Prime Minister also said, would be liable to detention as prisoners of war.

Mr. Asquith also announced that oil and copper would be declared contraband of war.

RUSSIAN FLEET TO ENGAGE GERMAN BALTIC SQUADRON

LONDON, Nov. 17.—A Copenhagen despatch to The Star says it is learned from German sources that the Russian fleet has sailed from Helsingfors and is steering south east, intending to engage the German Baltic squadron.

BRITISH LINER WITH $1,000,000 CARGO THREE WEEKS OVERDUE

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The British Liner La'Correntina, from Buenos Ayres for Liverpool, October the fifth, is now three weeks overdue. She carried cargo of meat worth one million dollars.

The Liner was armed for defence, and one rumor suggests that she has been inaction with the German armed liner Kron Prinz Wilhelm and both vessels were sunk.

GENERRAL DE'WET THE REBEL IS WOUNDED IN HEAD

LONDON, Nov. 17.—A Pretoria despatch to Rueter Telegraph company states that General De Wet, who headed the rebellion in the Orange Free State and in the Western Transvaal, has been wounded in the head. De Wet's followers are reported to be much dejected, and it is said they are poorly armed, also lacking ammunition.

GERMAN CRUISER APPEARS AT TRONDHJEM, NORWAY

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Despatches stating that the German Auxiliary Cruiser Berlin has appeared at Trondhjem, a seaport of Norway, indicate according to the underwriters that she is endeavoring to escape from the North Sea to act as a commerce raider.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The late Earl Roberts will be buried in St. Paul's Cathedral with public funeral of an elaborate military character.

PRINCESS PATRICIAS GOING TO THE FRONT

Canadian Regiment Under Col. Farquhar Has Joined a British Division at Winchester, which is Under Orders to Leave for the Front Shortly

BUSTARD CAMP, Salisbury, Eng., Nov. 17.—(Special.)—The Princess Patricia's regiment left yesterday for Winchester to join a British division leaving shortly for the front.

The Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry is the corps raised through the munificence of Mr. A. Hamilton Gault, a well-known Montreal business man. A requisite to enrollment in this corps was previous military service, and the result is a body of picked men, many of them British reservists, said to compare well with any corps in the world. Mr. Hamilton Gault has gone to the front with the regiment, with the rank of Major, and will be associated with them in the campaign on which they now embark. In the following list of officers will be recognized the names of several prominent business and professional men of Toronto and other Canadian cities:—

Lieut.-Col. (commanding), Lieut.-Col F. D. Farquhar, D.S.O., late of the Duke of Connaught's household; Major Major A. H. Gault; Adjutant, Capt. H. C. Buller; Quartermaster, Hon. Lieut. C. A. Wake; Paymaster, Hon. Capt. D. H. MacDougall; Medical Officer, Major C. B. Keenan.

Company officers:—

Majors—J. W. H. McKinery, C. Q. Court, J. D. H. Shaw, R. T. Pelly; Captains, J. S. Ward, C. F. Smith, A. S. A. M. Adamson, D. O. C. Newton; Lieutenants, F. Fitzgerald, J. L. Carr, C. E. Crabbe, S. L. Jones, W. G. Colquhoun, C. H. Price, J. P. French, F. F. Minchin, B. F. Bainsmith, H. M. Niven, M. S. DeBay, C. E. T. Stewart, H. E. Sullivan, T. M. Papineau, S. H. Bennett, F. L. Eardley-Wilmot.

Purposes of Lord Roberts' Visit to France

Wanted to See Indian Troops and Have Chat With Sir John French

FELT TOO GREAT SECRECY

French Correspondent Says the Veteran Thought England Should Hear More From Her Brave Soldiers

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Gaston Dru, the London correspondent of l'Echo de Paris, sends the Times an account of his conversation with Lord Roberts on the eve of his departure for France.

Lord Roberts said that, while the primary reason for his visit was to see his dear Indian troops, he intended to speak to Field Marshall Sir John French, about the too great secrecy, which was, to his mind, preserved by the military authorities at the front and at home, concerning the work and brave deeds of English soldiers.

"I naturally approve," said Lord Roberts, "the proposition that all military movements, whatever they may be, should be kept absolutely secret from all war correspondents; but it seems to me that they should be allowed to receive at least a fair modicum of information.

Why not allow them to write, for instance, in detail of the glorious actions fought by our troops—several days, it goes without saying, after these actions have taken place? I am referring, naturally to the English lines. You in France are in a different position from us. You have conscription. Every man is called to the colors, and you do not rely upon public enthusiasm to recruit your army, which can very well afford to be la grande silencieuse.

"In England we want men—many more men—and if we do not let our people at home know in detail of the life of our soldier at the front, of their brave fights and gallant deeds, how shall we awake in soul of our young men the high sentiment of emulation which will strongly contribute to lead them to the recruiting office?

"They are brave, no doubt, and willing to offer their lives for their country if necessary, but they often do not know that it is absolutely necessary, and that every minute they lose now is priceless; maybe a battle is jeopardized in the future.

"They do not know enough—that our men are always fighting against tremendous odds; that we want more men, and still more men, to equalise matters; they are not sufficiently able to follow day by day, as much, at any rate, as military necessities would allow it, the life and fighting of their friends who have enlisted.

"What has been done for the London Scottish might, to my mind, be done with very good results for many of the other units, and I will talk to French about it."

FIGHTING AROUND YPRES—ALLIES PROGRESS—GEGRMANS LOSE 100,000 IN FOUR DAYS

LONDON Nov. 17.—A correspondent to the Daily Mail says:

"There was heavy fighting around Ypres on Monday. The casualties were large, but the battle resulted in excellent progress for the Allies.

"The German casualties are estimated at 100,000 in the past four days."

General Manager Of Imperial Bank Died Suddenly

PICTON'S PATRIOTISM

PICTON, Nov. 16.—Special—Patriotic League collections to date are $5,500, with the canvass still in progress. It is expected the total amount will reach $7,000.

A Home Guard was recently started, with a muster roll of 150, mostly young men, under Drill Instructor Sergt.-Major Robt. Noble. With recruiting from neighboring townships the officers expect a total of 300 before the first of the year.

A squad of twenty-one left here for Kingston to join the second contingent. This makes a total of sixty-three to enlist for the oversea forces from this town and vicinity.

Condensed News Items For Busy Readers.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Elmer Williams and James Wilson, two young men, were this morning before the magsitrate charged with intoxication and taking a new horse blanket from in front of a business place. The accused pleaded guilty. In payment of all costs in the transaction the accused were allowed their liberty upon a suspended sentence of one year in Central Prison.

LOCAL BOYS HONORED

Privates Brown, Mackenzie and Scully, three young men who left here with the first contingent as stretcher bearers in connection with the 15th Regiment of this city, have been promoted since leaving Canada. Private Brown is in charge of the medical ward at Salisbury Plains; Private Mackenzie is in the surgical ward, and Private Scully is over the stores. This is indeed an honor for Belleville boys.

CONSIGNED TO THE TOMB

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of the late Mr. McCurry of Point Ann, took place. Services were held at St. Michael's church, being conducted by Rev. Father Corrigan. Interment took place at St. James cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Thomas Brophy, George Johnson, D. Grass, Wm. Clazie, Jas. Mulrooney and J. R. Huck.

DEATH OF A LADY

Mrs. Robert Milne who resided on College street, died yesterday afternoon after being ill for some time. Deceased, who was 54 years of age, was born at Ogdensburg, N.Y., but had lived here for some years. She was a member of St. Michael's church, and a lady respected by all who knew her. In addition to the husband, three sons and two daughters survive. The sons are Robert J., Fred J., and Augustine, all of this city. The daughters are Misses Margaret and Teressa, at home. Two sisters of the deceased are living, namely Mrs. D. Morehouse of Albany, N. Y., and Mrs. Charles Brasson of Brockville.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Tetley Blackburn announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Selina Blackburn of Belleville, to William Horace Ludington of Vancouver, formerly of Montreal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Ludington, of Montreal. Marriage to take place in December.

ACCUSED OF THEFT

William Keller was last evening placed under arrest by G.T.R. Constable Donovan. The charge preferred against him was that he did during the month of November steal a quantity of brass, the property of the G. T. R. Company. The accused this morning appeared before Magistrate Masson and the case was enlarged until Friday. In the meantime Kellar is out on bail; himself in $500 and two sureties of $250 each. Mr. Carnew was present to defend Kellar.

The Rifle Club

The Belleville Rifle Association met at the indoor range of the Armories last night for a practice shoot. There were a good attendance, several new members being enrolled. Scores were as follows. Conditions 25 shots at 25 yards.

AT THE FRONT

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractor permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractic is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect. (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

80 BRITISH SOLDIERS TOOK 400 GERMANS

PARIS, Nov. 16.—A remarkable incident is narrated by a correspondent of Liberte to-day. He says that during the desperate fighting to the south of Ypres on November 11 a British infantry detachment of 80 men found itself isolated and unable to join its main body and took refuge for the night in the wood. The position seemed hopeless, but the men rested till dawn. They were aroused by a fusilade near at hand, and found that a German column was being driven toward the wood by a force of allies. Holding their fire they waited till the Germans were near and then charged with fixed bayonets. The diversion was so decisive that four hundred prisoners weer taken and the lost Tommies received a doubly wram welcome from their comrades.

Peps What are they?

Peps is the name bestowed upon a new scientific preparation put up into tablet or pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds and lung and throat troubles.

Did it never occur to you as peculiar that when you have a cough or a cold, or any chest trouble, you should apply medicine—not to your lungs, but to your stomach?

Look at it the other way round. Suppose you suffered from some stomach complaint—indigestion or ulceration. How strange you would think it if you were asked to take a medicine which had to be breathed in, and which went—not to your stomach, but to your lungs and breathing passages?

Peps—this newest remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles—go to the lungs and breathing-tubes, direct. Peps are really pine fumes, and certain highly beneficial medicinal extracts specially prepared by a new scientific process and then condensed into tablet form. It is like making a breathable gas solid!

You put a "Pep" on your tongue and let it dissolve. As it does so, the healing essences it contains turn into vapor, and you BREATHE them direct to your lungs and air passages!

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breathing" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peps" treatment for colds and lung troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Peps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, smoker's throat, etc. Best for children, because free from opium, morphine, or any poison.

All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25.

FREE TRIAL

Cut out this article, write across it the name of this paper, and mail it to Peps Co., Toronto, or 52 Princess Street, Winnipeg, enclosing 1 cent stamp to pay for return postage. A free trial packet of Peps will be mailed you by return. If you have a friend suffering from a cough, cold, or any throat or lung trouble, hand this on.

er, the result was in marked contrast to that apparent in the previous instance.

The plans for this display were prepared by officers of the Poultry Division of the Live Stock Branch and the Exhibit was in charge of Mr. W. A. Brown, Chief of the Division, Mr. W. H. Ault and Mr. J. R. Fee.

Another important feature of the Exhabit was the Candling Demonstration given in a large booth erected in the end of the car. This phase of work was of particular interest to consumers, for the reason that but a few persons appreciate the fact that the quality of an egg can be accurately determined without breaking the shell.

The candling of eggs is not a difficult process and the small amount of labor entailed in candling presents no valid reason why the consuming public should not candle their own eggs more frequently than they do and thus safeguard themselves from many unpleasant occurrences at the breakfast table.

WOOL EXHIBIT

Throught the wool display of the Live Stock Branch, the Dominion Department of Agriculture, which was presented here in a Canadian Pacific Railway special car, farmers are given a splendid opportunity for obtaining a thorough knowledge of the sheep and wool industry of Canada. It was prepared by T. Reg Arkell, chief of the Sheep and Goat Division of the Branch assisted by N Stansfield and Horace V Bent who are in charge of the exhibit in the car.

The object of the exhibit is to explain fully the various classifications and grades, and to show how wool may be handled in such a way as to secure the best advantages to both the producer and buyer. In order to command the highest market prices wools should be presented in a carefully rolled and should contain as little foreign matter as possible. Carelessness in the preparation of Canadian wools has resulted in an injury to its reputation upon the markets of the word. Endeavoring to overcome these conditions by aiding the wool growers of Canada to place upon the market a high grade product and also to stimulate an increased interest in Sheep Husbandry, and to further as far as possible this profitable phase of Agriculture the Sheep Division offers this exhibit to the Eastern farmer.

One of the most interesting and instructive features, comprises samples of wool in both the greasy and scoured product, showing the injurious effects of using insoluble paints, which are difficult to remove, rather than the standard dipping fluids for making purposes. This case also contains samples of wool that have been tied with binder twine showing how the sisile fibre becomes incorporated into the wool and the consequent defect in the finished product. The injurious effects of shearing wool while damp or permitting it to become damp while in storage are shown, together with the damage caused by the incorporation of straw and chaff into the fleece.

In the display are shown most of the important classes of Australian, New Zealand, South American and South African wools. Of foreign and domestis wools used in the manufacture of carpets there is a very complete collection. Four large cases contain representative fleece of the most important breeds of Canadian sheep, and the smaller samples of each are shown to distinguish their character and staple. This is supplemented by a most comprehensive display of English wools covering virtually every grade in that country. By these cases beginners are given an opportunity to compare the wools of the different breeds, and thus become acquainted with the average weight of fleece and quality of wool obtained from each. Comparison is also made of the British, American and Canadian methods of classification, but especial emphasis is placed on the domestic product. One large case contains fleeces of Canadian wool representing the different classes as they are graded for the market.

The processes of woollen and worsted manufacture are illustrated by samples representing the intermediate products from the wool in the grease to the finished cloth. This serves to give the public an idea of the types of wool entering into the different classes of fabrics. Although the living specimens are not shown, a number of enlarged photographs of representatives of the different breeds as well as entire flocks are included in the exhibit.

In the propaganda for more and better sheep and their products in Canada the Dominion Department is furnishing valuable assistance to the sheep growers. It is establishing a plan for wool selling through co-operative associations, by furnishing officials who grade the clip, and advise the growers as to the proper methods of handling wool, in order that it may reach the market in the best possible condition. Results thus far have been very gratifying, especially to the small growers as they have been able to obtain much larger prices than the individual selling methods would realize. Besides the furnishing of wool graders the Department is offering assistance to Sheep Breeders Association, by supplying them with pure bred rams.

Your Own Druggist Backs This Laxative

If you only knew as much as we and those who have used them do about Rexall Orderlies, you would be as enthusiastic about recommending them as we are. They taste just like candy and act so easily and pleasantly that taking them is a pleasure.

Rexall Orderlies have a splendid tonic, cleansing and strengthening effect upon the bowels. They help free the system and keep it free from ailments that result from irregular or inactive bowels. They do this quietly, without griping, nausea, purging or excessive looseness. In a short time they usually make unnecessary the continued use of physics. We don't ask you to take our word for this. We want you to make us prove it, and at ou cost to you.

Buy a box of Rexall Orderlies. If not thoroughly satisfied, tell us, and we will return your money without question. In vest pocket tin boxes; 10c. 25c. 50c.

GERMAN TACTICS

(By J. J. B. Flint)

Reading of the atrocities of the German troops one can come to but one conclusion, and that is, while the Kaiser will fail to crush the Allies, he succeeded in establishing himself in the opinion of the world, as the one sovereign who, unworthy of the fame of his illustrious ancestors, has dragged the flag of his country through the mud and slime of dishonor. Assuming to be God's vice-regent, he is the vilest wholesale murderer of little children, defenceless men and women that ever desecrated this earth. Judas Iscariot and Machevelli were angels of light compared to him. He could visit his grandmother (who was our illustrious Queen) and his uncle Edward, under the pretence of a friendly family visit; when he was all the time a low degraded spy, peering about and trying to discover anything that would enable him to send a dagger into the heart of the British Empire. Not content with this infamy, he sent his partner, Krupp, on an apparently friendly visit to our artillery manufactories to glean information in order to destroy our Empire. A man destitute of honor and truth, a traitor to his own country, sacrificing his grand empire upon the altar of his ambition. Upon him let us and posterity pronounce a curse in the words of Moore:

Oh for a tongue to curse the slave
Whose treason like a deadly blight
Comes o'er the councils of the brave
And blasts them in their hour of might!
May life's unblessed cup for him
Be drugg'd with treachery to the brim
With hopes that but allure to fly,
With joys that vanish while he sips
Like Dead Sea fruits which tempt the eye,
But turn to ashes on his lips.
His country's curse, his children's shame,
Outcast of honor, peace and fame,
May he at last with lips of flame
On the parch'd desert throbbing lie,
While lakes which shone in mockery nigh
Are fading off, untouched, untasted,
Like the once glorious hopes he blasted.
And when from earth his spirit flies
Just Prophet let the doomed one dwell
Full in the sight of Paradise—
Beholding heaven, yet feeling hell.

Our brave troops are driving the enemy and the "thin red line" still holds. Our hearts are saddened by the loss of the Craddock squadron. Brave men and noble ships met an awful fate. Could this have been avoided? From a landman's point of view the answer must be yes. Five battleships arrayed against three. The Good Hope in a mountainous sea rolling guns under so that she could not take aim; the Monmouth with guns that could not reach the enemy five miles away, unable to reply to the repeated blows struck by the shells. Why could not the British ships with their superior speed have not joined in battle until the subsidence of the sea, when the Good Hope's guns could have been used? Whose carelessness sent the Craddock squadron without wireless on any of the ships? The Canopus was sent to assist Craddock, and sent frenzied wireless messages around the world to Craddock, but there was no reply. It was not for the brave men now lying at the bottom of the ocean to ask the reason why, not theirs to make reply; it was theirs to do, and die; but dying, they knew some one had blundered.

Three cruisers were torpedoed and sunk by one little submarine. When one of them went down, had the others moved on in obedience to the command of the Admiralty in such cases to save their ships and men the submarine would not (in all probability) have been able to strike the moving target which they would have presented. The captain of the submarine says, "I came to the surface in the centre of the three; immediately sank and fired a tube, destroying one of the three cruisers. To my astonishment, the remaining two played my game for me. They stopped, presenting a dead target which I could not fail to hit. I torpedoed a second ship and I hesitated about destroying the third, because I felt it would be humane to allow them to help the struggling seamen in the water; but I thought, well, war is war, and I destroyed the third ship." Oh, the hundreds of wives and mothers who are mourning the loss of their beloved ones today who might have been saved their sorrow and distress had the two cruisers obeyed the law of the Admiralty.

Good Cellar Waits For the Germans

But They Will be Surprised to Find Belgian Owner Mined It

LONDON, Oct. 15.—A wounded Belgian captain who arrived in London from the front is anticipating with great joy the visit of German soldiers to his wine cellar.

"It is a very good cellar," he said. "It is a cellar to delight the eye of the thirsty. I can see the Germans entering that cellar. I can see them looting the choice bottles, and then, my friend, no human eye will see them again. They will go pouff—bang.' The cellar is mined, and the first touch of the bottles fires the mine and the Germans will drink in eternity."

SPECIALIST EXPLAINS CAUSE OF STOMACH TROUBLE
VALUABLE ADVICE TO SUFFERERS.
"There are many different forms of stomach trouble," said a well-known specialist recently, "but practically all are traceable to excessive acidity and food fermentation. That is why the results obtained from the use of drugs are usually so disappointing. Admitting fermentation and consequent acidity of the food contents to be the underlying cause of most forms of indigestion, it naturally follows that the use of a reliable antacid, such as the pure bisurated magnesia which is so frequently prescribed by physicians, will produce better results than any known drug or combination of drugs. Accordingly I almost invariably advise those who complain of digestive trouble to get some bisurated magnesia (note the name carefully, as other forms are unsuitable for this purpose,) from their druggist, and take from one to two teaspoonfuls of the powder or two 5 grain compressed tablets, with a little water after meals. This by immediately neutralizing the acid and stopping the fermentation, removes the cause of all the trouble and insures normal and healthy digestion."

COUNCIL AUTHORIZES $100,000 FOR DEFENSE

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—Special—An appropriation of $100,000 for "military purposes" in connection with the present war was voted by the City Council last night. A private caucus of the members was held early last evening, but it is not officially known whether the action taken at the public meeting has any connection with any decision arrived at during the session held in camera.

With a view to taking extra precautions, it has been decided to properly guard all public works in the city. Where it has been deemed advisable detachments of the militia have mounted guard. A unit has been stationed for some time at the Island, while the reservoir and other works have been under protection for a considerable period. Guards have also been stationed in and around the City Hall. Asked as to why these steps were being taken, Mayor Hocken declared that they are "purely precautionary."

It was made apparent at a conference between representatives of the rifle clubs of the city and General Lessard, late yesterday, that the purpose for which the vote of $100,000 was taken was to buy munitions of

Lt.-Col. Hulme At Armouries

Colonel Hulme, who is in command of the Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles of Vancouver, B.C., and who has just brought over a large body of specially qualified troops to Montreal from the West, renewing his old associations with former comrades yesterday and last night inspected and addressed Belleville's Corps Reserve, who turned out in good numbers under his old Commanding Officers, Colonels Lazier, Ponton and Stewart. After congratulating Col. Marsh and the officers of the XV. upon their splendidly equipped and comfortable Armouries (such a contrast to the condtiions which existed when he was a Sergeant and Subaltern in Captain Ponton's celebrated No. 1 Company), he spoke feelingly of the inspiration and pathetic memories with which he was filled as he saw again in the ranks of service many who had drilled under his father, Lt. Col. R. Croft Hulme, in the good old days. He promised to carry the message of encouragement and example with him to the West, where many Belleville boys are doing duty. Surely Belleville young men have here and now an incentive and reason for fitting themselves for effective work under the old colors. For once he could get even with his old master, Mr. E. F. Milburn, the right hand man of the rear rank, a position he himself had often occupied in the old High School with Mr. Milburn as Commanding Officer. Colonel Hulme shook hands with all and was deeply touched by the warmth of his reception. 2,200 men are in training at Vancouver. It will be remembered that Colonel Hulme organized a militia company at Dawson City, Yukon, some years ago—known colloquially as "Hulme's Unshaken Infantry."

MET INDIAN WARRIORS

Lord Roberts Also Went to See the Fighting

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Morning Post learns that Lord Roberts after crossing to France on Wednesday met the Indian troops the following day and and had a great welcome. On Friday he went to see the fighting. It was an extremely cold day with heavy rain and bitten winds. In spite of this, however, Lord Roberts insisted on going to the top of a certain hill exposed to the severest effects of the bleak day.

A few minutes after his return to headquarters he was seized with illness. His temperature rose rapidly, but it was hoped the attack would soon pass off. In the course of the evening Lord Roberts became unconscious. He never recovered, and passed away quite peacefully the following evening.

The body is expected to be brought to Folkestone today or tomorrow. It is believed that a service will be conducted in the neighborhood of the battlefield before the body leaves for England.

German Hypocrisy

Order Their Own Civilians to do That for Which They Shot Belgians

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Amsterdam correspondent of the Standard telegraphs: "A German military proclamation circulated in those parts of eastern Prussian provinces now being invaded for the second time by the Russian army reveals the hypocrisy of the German accusations brought against the civilian population of Belgium. While over-running Belgium the Germans shot men, women and children ostensibly by way of retaliation for attacks on their troops by civilians not in uniform. Now it is clear that the Germans themselves are officially urging their own people to commit the acts for which they themselves shot defenceless peasants.

"The proclamation in question contains the following passage: 'When the enemy crosses the frontiers of Imperial Germany there ensues a struggle of national defence in which all methods are permissable. It is the duty of every person capable of bearing arms to stem the invasion and harass the enemy until he retires. The whole population must take up arms to keep the enemy always in a state of unrest, to seize his ammunition, to stop his food supplies, to capture his scouts, to destroy by any means whatever his ambulance and field hospitals and to shoot him down during the night.

"'The men of the Landsturm who perform such duties should not wear uniforms, because by retaining their civilian's dress they are less conspicuous and thus are in a better position to attack the enemy unawares'."

DEATHS.

"TRUE TO PARTY WARFARE"

The Toronto Globe, the Toronto Star, the Hamilton Times, the Winnipeg Free Press, and other Liberal journals of less note, are constantly prating about what they declare to exist, that is, an understanding between parties that no party reciminations should be indulged in during the existence of the present war. Yet scarcely an issue of any of these journals appears that their editorial columns are not filled with recriminations and condemnations of the past naval policy of the Conservative party. The leading editorial of The Globe of the 12th inst. is a fair specimen of the Jesuitical style in which this question is treated by the defenders of the Laurierites who prevented through the Senate the passage of the Borden Navy Bill.

A fair specimen of the way in which the "truce," to which the Grit press constantly refer, is to be found in an article clipped from the Hamilton Times, being but an echo of the Globe's editorials. The Times says:

"Borden's Quebec allies wanted to "give no help to Britain, and when he "proposed that three dreadnoughts "be given Britain some of them re- "signed, although it was made plain "to the Quebec people that none of "them would be made food for powder "in British wars. We believe that "Canadian cruisers in the Pacific "would have been of more help to Bri- "tain than would three Canadian "dreadnoughts in the North Sea. Bri- "tain has more than enough dread- "noughts there, but she was short of "cruisers in the Pacific."

It would be difficult to crowd into one short paragraph a greater number of words strung together for the purpose of misleading the reader, that is, the reader who confines his political knowledge to what he sees and reads in the columns of Grit newspapers.

The authors of such articles as the one from which the extract has been made know that the official documents were laid before Parliament when the question of naval assistance was under discussion show, that "The Prime Minister of the Dominion having inquired in what form any immediate aid that Canada might give would be most effective, the answer of the War Office in England was, we have no hesitation in answering, after a prolonged consideration of all the circumstances, that it is desirable that such aid should include the provision of a certain number of the largest and strongest ships of war which science can build or money supply."

It is also known that one of the conditions of rendering such aid by Canada was that the dreadnoughts furnished by Canada, were if required, to form part of a unit of a Canadian Navy, to act in conjunction with the British Navy whenever required, and could therefore be now utilized in the Pacific Ocean, forming a strong defence force in conjunction with the Australian war vessels.

This wise and practical policy of the Borden Government was, the Times and Globe know, opposed by Mr. Bourassa, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. William Pugsley, Hon. George P. Graham, and with one exception the whole Laurier following in the House of Commons, and defeated in the Senate by the Liberal party in that branch of the Legislature, save one, who refused to be dragged into the Bourassa-Laurier combination.

It is remarkable with these facts on record, with what unblushing cheek and impudence, this question is treated by the Liberal press of the Dominion, which can only be explained on the presumption that the writers fancy they are dealing with readers as ignorant of the facts as they are politically dishonest in their explanation of them.

ECONOMIC EPIGRAMS

There may be in your Sunday School fifty or a hundred kiddies who will have a hard job getting coppers for collection if you don't help their fathers earn wages by buying the things they make.

Flag-waving is all right if you apply the sentiment practically. Some enlist and go to the front. The rest of us can buy "Made in Canada" goods and make the money to keep them there.

It isn't a matter of buying silks and bric-a-brac. What keeps the Canadian factory going nowadays is the main part of what you buy every day and the small items multiplied run into a larger total than the big purchase.

When you agree for sake of argument that it's a good thing to buy goods "Made in Canada," don't forget that it's not merely a matter of argument. Do it.

When seven or eight millions of men armed to the teeth for killing one another and destroying property can get away with fifty million dollars a day outside of the property they destroy remember what eight millions of Canadians using goods made by Canadians can do to keep the old ship head up to the storm.

The man that has a made-in-Canada salary should have made-in-Canada tastes.

CURRENT COMMENT

It's not easy to convince a married woman that man is the noblest work of the Creator.

This is a free country—but you should be ashamed to say some of the things you think.

Wise is the man who appoints himself chairman of the advisory board of his own business.

It is much better for a woman to laugh and cry—unless she has occasion to work her husband for a new hat.

Apples are being distributed among the Canadian troops at Salisbury. Any Spies among them?

A man may have a lot of sense, but the chances are he will not display any of it when he gets into an argument with a pretty woman.

A woman can never understand why her husband has to work so hard in order to make both ends meet when he is so much smarter than other men.

Some rascal put a telephone wire out of commission. Possibly the culprit overheard "Central" saying the line was busy, and he wanted to get even.

The reports of the war correspondents of the different belligerent countries are about as contradictory and misleading as those of the Grit newspapers around election time.

With the weather man giving Calgary ten below zero last night, and a blizzard of snow at the noon hour here, we may well dig down deep and shake out the moth balls from last year's coveralls.

Sir Robert Borden returned to Ottawa on Monday from Hot Springs, Va. The Premier has enjoyed a complete rest while keeping in touch with all important developments in connection with the war and Canada's participation.

Both the pen and the sword have a record for being mighty, but mightier than all seems to be the Railway Commission at Ottawa. When it comes to raising railway bridges to facilitate subways or laying extra tracks the lid is kept on tight in the case of Belleville.

Great Britain has subsidized the Belgian Government to the amount of $14,550,000 and that of Servia to the amount of $4,000,000. The propositions to be laid before Parliament provide for further aid to the same or other Allies. John Bull's pocket book seems to be the biggest thing of its kind in the war, except his heart, which is just as big.

The Rev. Mr. Travers, Rector of fashionable Trinity Episcopal Church, at Pittsburg, has established a suite of rest, lunch and dining-rooms in the Parish House for the use of working girls. His action has created considerable of a sensation among the members of the congregation and in church circles generally. The Rector has told the girls to "dance away, any steps you please."

A Hamilton newspaper remarks that Montreal's home guard has received 500 rifles with full equipment, and that a similar outfit would serve to stimulate the patriotism of the Hamilton body that has already given so much time to the cause. Montreal adds the information that the equipment was purchased by the Montreal Home Guard at $35 each for the rifles and ammunition. All the Home Guard corps in the Dominion can be armed at the same rate.

The new spirit that has arisen in Ireland has never been better expressed than in the pledge adopted with enthusiasm at a large gathering of Nationalists in London. It was proposed by T. P. O'Connor and read: "We will never sheathe the sword until Belgium has got back her freedom; until every inch of her soil is clear; until a treaty is made, not on a scrap of paper, but on a foundation behind which stand the millions of the British race." When the Kaiser read this the special agent who informed him as to what Ireland would do when the war broke out must have had another very uncomfortable half-hour of it.

In several cases in different parts of the United States human beings are reported to have contracted foot and mouth disease from infected cattle. There has been difference of view among medical men as to whether or not this is possible. Generally, it is held, there is no risk to the man caring for the stricken animals; but where the individual is physically weak or predisposed to disease or of tender years there is reason to think that he may contract the distemper. It is a good thing in several ways, therefore, for a country to keep its herds healthy, and prevent unfit men from attending them.

WAR NOTES

The State Department of the United States has been officially notified that the western portion of Broughton Straits, near Vancouver Island, B.C., has been closed to navigation for purposes of defence. Vessels between Johnson Straits and Queen Charlotte Sound must now take the Weynton Passage and Blackfish Sound.

Toronto is dealing with its German employees summarily. Peremptory orders were given by the Board of [illegible] civic officials to immediately discharge any Germans, Austrians or Turks whom they might have employed in their respective departments. This was the outcome of a strong protest made by Ald. McBride against the retention of a German reservist in the Works Department who has been employed as an engineer on drainage work for the past two years.

John Burroughs, the famous United States naturalist, has written a powerful denunciation of the Germans for the New York Tribune. In the course of it he truly says: "War, as now waged by the Kaiser against Belgium and France, is but a high-sounding name for the collective murder and pillage and arson of a vast organized band of outlaws, and for my part I believe it is the last spectacle of its kind and on such a scale that the world will ever see."

The Russian Government has notified the American Embassy in Petrograd of the closing of the entrances and exits of the Finnish and Riga Gulfs as a result of the extension of the Russian mine fields in territorial waters. Mines have been laid now in the zone from 58 degrees 50 minutes north latitude to east of the 21st meridian and also at the entrance of the Gulf of Riga and around the Aland Islands.

A telegram from Vienna of the 13th states that 731 officers and 79,314 men are prisoners of war in the Austrian concentration camps. "The enemy's wounded are being treated like our own soldiers," the telegram goes on to say, "while the officers who are prisoners, are interned in castles, and in great private houses, and the captured men in great barracks."

Buyers for the French Government have opened negotiations in Chicago for the purchase of 10,000 pairs of red trousers of four different shades for the army. In addition contracts are to be made for wire markers to designate the regiment and company for 300,000 French soldiers.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., KNITS

Industriously Works on a Shawl for War Sufferers

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Nov. 15.—John D. Rockefeller Jr., is knitting a shawl of heavy wool. Knitting is a new accomplishment for Mr. Rockefeller. He had never tried it until last night, when he was sitting in the loby of the Homestead Hotel with his wife, W. H. Chesebrough, Mrs. Richard Perkins, and Mrs N. W. Chadwick, the women knitting, as most of them here are constantly doing.

Somebody suggested that inasmuch as the Rockefeller Foundation is giving large sums for relief of the war sufferers, the men might as well help with the work. Needles and yarn were produced and Mr. Cheseborough made a feeble attempt. Mr. Rockefeller, however, went at the work with spirt, soon got the hang of it, and persevered for two hours. To-night he was continuing and has about a yard done.

After the War--What?

When the war is over, what then? Are there good times or hard times in store for us? Will the era of high prices continue, with steady work for all, or will we experience a setback that will keep us poor for years?

The answer to that question is very largely in our own hands. It depends on us Canadians—not on the few in high places, but on every one of us.

Every year we are importing hundreds of millions of dollars worth of goods, much of which could be produced just as well in Canada.

Suppose they were produced here. Think of the number of workmen who would be employed. Think of what it would mean in wages, and money kept in circulation. Think of what it would mean to our farmers, to our shopkeepers—to our builders, to everybody.

Think of what it would mean to you.

They can be produced here, they will be produced here, if you just stop and think every time you make a purchase.

Think, say and see that you get

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd. 1913.

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. One day my eye caught a billboard of "Fruit-a-tives" and I said to myself "if Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it is good enough for me". I bought some. After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself wonderfully improved. In a short time longer, I cured myself entirely. My case was no light one, either, Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear that it would get around my heart and kill me; "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy for Indigestion".

When Men Shaved Spy Was Revealed

Canadian Ladies Have Unpleasant Experiences With Germans Disguised as Women

MONTREAL, Nov. 15.—Of all the stories of German spies found on passenger steamers crossing the Atlantic Ocean, it happens that incidents in which Canadian women were innocently involved are among the most distressing. The cases are authentic and vouched for by people whose word cannot be doubted. The ladies concerned occupy a prominent position in the cities where they live, but from the nature of the cases their names cannot be mentioned.

A married lady of Toronto came from England in a boat to New York. Her cabin was shared by a woman unknown to her, and who seemed rather strange in her actions. After a few days it dawned on the Toronto lady that the occupant of the other berth never rose in the morning until after she had left the stateroom, and that she would always retire before she came to the stateroom at night. Just before reaching New York the lady from Toronto was asked what her companion was like. After her movements and actions were related to the officer, he asked her to point out to him the other occupant of her stateroom. This she did, and to her amazement the officer walked up to the seemingly woman and arrested her. It turned out that it was a man and he was a German spy. The Toronto lady is now laid up with nervous prostration as a result of the disclosure.

A young lady from Ottawa was also crossing by another boat. In her case, her room-mate was a nun. The young lady rushed into her stateroom to get something and found the nun, with her head-dress off, shaving. In this case as well, paper found in the luggage of the man masquerading as a nun showed him to be a spy.

DISOBEYED HIS ORDERS, KILLED 600 GERMANS

French Gunner Refused to Retreat Until He Had Fired His Last Shot

PARIS, Nov. 15.—At the battle of Vailly the French were obliged to fall back and were unable to get away with all their guns. They had time to bury most of them, though, and the only one they did not bury was spiked so that the Germans could not make any use of it.

It was with this gun that a gunner of the battery covered himself with glory. The gun crew had been ordered back, but he declared that he would not abandon the gun while any ammunition was left. He methodically emptied shell after shell into the Germans, who were moving up in serried ranks only a half mole away. Closer and closer they came, firing volleys as they advanced, but the gunner stood his ground and still had a dozen shells left when they were not more than 300 yards away. At this distance he bowled them over like ninepins, but nothing could stop them. He let fly his last shell at only fifty yards and did such awful execution that he was able to remove the breech-block and make good his escape, notwithstanding that he had received a bullet between his ribs.

Hardened as they were to slaughter, some of those who witnessed the deed turned faint at the ghastly sight of the mangled Germans, more than 600 of whom were blown to pieces within 500 yards of the gun.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

"Oh!" cried Dorcas aghast. "Oh, to think that I should have put that in your way!"

"Put what in my way? Dearest, that night I came around the corner—I had been wandering in the desert. Suddenly I found sunshine, I found love and hope, I found you. That night—when you went away—I began to understand that it was the most wonderful chance God ever put in a man's way."

An instant later his arms were about her and she felt his kiss upon her cheek.

"Don't," cried Dorcas. "Don't!" She freed herself from his clasp and held him away from her. "Can't you understand, don't you see, Andrew, after what Enoch did to you, that I cannot be your wife?"

"You cannot—be—my—" He stared at her in bewildered dismay.

"Yes, that is what I mean," she whispered tremulously. "Don't you understand? How could I marry you with the thought of this horrible wrong constantly between us? I could never forget it. Remember it was Enoch, my brother—don't you understand?—my brother—who did this! How could you go on loving me and—"

"Remember—it was your brother who saved my life," said Merry passionately. "How could I go on loving you, dearest? How could I stop loving you? I could go through hell for you, and yet I confess I would rather be with you in heaven." He flushed and his face grew grave. "You are mine—all mine—and I am yours, so wholly and truly yours that I have grown to think of this world as merely one spot—one little spot—where we can make a home and I can have you beside me—for the rest of my life."

CHAPTER XXV.

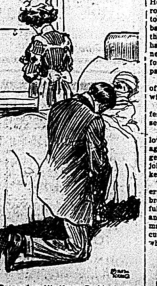
In the Daylight.

Wentworth's chamber was dim as twilight when Merry entered. The outer world lay white and breathless under a dazzling sun, and the sudden change to a darkened sickroom for a moment made Andrew grope vaguely on the threshhold. As his eyes became accustomed to the dusk he saw a white-gowned nurse standing beside the bed. Under the sheet lay the motionless outline of the man's long body, the head wound with snowy bandages. Merry's hands gripped together convulsively. The nails cut into his palms and an ache which hurt tugged at his heart. Wentworth's chamber held memories for him: he thought of nights when he had lain helpless upon that same bed and Enoch had taken care of him in a lumbering fashion. During these days he had seen the rugged face grow wan from want of sleep; still for him a smile always lit the stern features.

Suddenly, as the last remnant of an old scab sloughs off, every fragment of hatred, of resentment at injustice, of pain and rebellion which for ten months had been warping his nature and clouding his life fell away from Merry's heart. The love, the implicit confidence, even the boyish dependence upon the older man, came flooding back into his soul like a high tide. All that had stood between him and Wentworth seemed unimportant compared with the vital fact that they had been and still were friends.

When the nurse beckoned he stole noiselessly across the floor. She pointed to a chair by the bedside. "He has dozed off," she explained in a low whisper. "He asked for you just before he went to sleep. I told him you were coming. Sit here so that he can see you when he wakes up."

Merry dropped into the chair. He began to see perfectly through the gloom. Wentworth's grim, gaunt face had startled him for a minute. The eyelids were closed, with depths of shadow below them. The man's dominating nose stood out like a silhouette against the white pillow. The mustache had been shaved away and lines, chiseled by days and nights of pain, wrinkled about the quiet mouth. Merry sat staring at the haggard face with a dull, tugging hope in his soul, which he could not voice even to Dorcas. He wanted time—time enough to tell Enoch that the old enmity was dead, that the old love was alive, strengthened by new ties. A spasm of pain ran through the sick man's face, wrinkling the pallid forehead and twitching the lips. Merry looked up at the nurse. She read the question in his eyes.



Dropped on His Knees Beside the Bed.

"No," she whispered, "he is going to live. His brain is clear now. He has a great constitution. That was the only thing that saved him."

The woman had a strong, intelligent face and her manner was full of calm conviction. She was not young and must have watched over many a battle between life and death. She knew! Merry sighed with relief and peace of mind, even with a mad throb of joy. The thought of Dorcas and the future came with the conviction that there was still time to take up the old bonds of love and to begin life again.

The face upon the pillow moved and Enoch's eyes opened slowly. Recognition flashed into them, then a smile crept about the lined mouth.

"Enoch!" The young man dropped on his knees beside the bed, his fingers stole under the sheet and caught in a strong grasp the hand which he had thought was slipping from his reach.

Wentworth's eyes held a breathless question. "You were not hurt?" he whispered.

"No, old man; no. I didn't have a scratch. You took it all. You saved my life, as you have done more than once, and, Enoch, you understand—we are back where we stood in the old days, with everything forgotten, everything buried, buried so deep that neither of us will ever give it another thought."

The thrill of warmth over that strongest of all things human—a broken friendship made warm and secure again—ran like the vigor of transfused blood through the veins of the sick man. Happiness flushed into the wan face and his feeble strength returned Merry's grip.

Andrew laughed aloud. "You understand, Enoch, we are friends—friends that nothing can separate again as long as life lasts."

The wistfulness of gratitude dimmed the eyes of the sick man. "As long as life lasts! That won't be a great while, Boy," he whispered huskily; "only now—it is all right—and it seems different. I felt like a coward a little while ago. You remember that writing chap who died lately? He said something just before he went. I thought of it this morning—'I'm afraid to go home in the dark'—wasn't that what he said? I felt lonely—and I know—"

"Listen, Enoch." Merry spoke with a tone of passionate conviction. "Look here, old man, you're not going home in the dark, not yet. You've got thirty or forty years before that homegoing."

He turned imperatively to the nurse. "Push back the curtains, won't you? Push them away back. There's a glorious sun shining—let it in."

The woman understood. She ran up a curtain and flung back the shutters. The room grew suddenly white and radiant.

"There!" cried Merry. "Talk of going home in the dark? See how the sun is shining! Go home in the dark, the idea!"

A pathetic eagerness flushed into the eyes of the man on the bed. The glare of the sunshine showed clearly the wanness and ghastly shadows in the bandaged face.

"She says," the actor pointed over his shoulder at the white-gowned nurse, "she says you are out on the highroad—coming back to stay with us — indefinitely, you understand, Enoch? She knows. Don't you?" He looked into the woman's face with ardent pleading in his eyes.

She smiled and nodded. She was the embodiment of health and vigor. Her stalwart body and her wholesome rosy face were pleasant for sick eyes to look upon. "Yes, you've come back," she said emphatically. "When the doctor left an hour ago he said we had pulled you safely around the corner. Now all the job I have cut out for me is to see you are kept quiet and patient and happy."

"Yes, happy—that's the biggest part of the prescription," repeated Merry with a laugh.

The sick man looked up. The confession in his eyes was pathetic. "It seems ages since I was happy, Boy."

"Well, you're not going to be allowed to think, even to think of past ages. You've only to lie there and get well. It is our business—a sort of job cut out for Dorcas and me—to keep you happy. See?"

"I see," whispered Enoch. The flicker of a smile stole into his face. It brought peace and a pale, eager hopefulness, as if a thought of restitution and atonement was dawning in the man's soul. The nurse lowered the curtain and blotted out the radiance which flooded the room.

"Oh!" cried Dorcas aghast. "Oh, to think that I should have put that in your way!"

"Put what in my way? Dearest, that night I came around the corner—I had been wandering in the desert. Suddenly I found sunshine, I found love and hope, I found you. That night—when you went away—I began to understand that it was the most wonderful chance God ever put in a man's way."

An instant later his arms were about her and she felt his kiss upon her cheek.

"Don't," cried Dorcas. "Don't!" She freed herself from his clasp and held him away from her. "Can't you understand, don't you see, Andrew, after what Enoch did to you, that I cannot be your wife?"

"You cannot—be—my—" He stared at her in bewildered dismay.

"Yes, that is what I mean," she whispered tremuously. "Don't you understand? How could I marry you with the thought of this horrible wrong constantly between us? I could never forget it. Remember it was Enoch, my brother—don't you understand?—my brother—who did this! How could you go on loving me and—"

"Remember—it was your brother who saved my life," said Merry passionately. "How could I go on loving you, dearest? How could I stop loving you? I could go through hell for you, and yet I confess I would rather be with you in heaven." He flushed and his face grew grave. "You are mine—all mine—and I am yours, so wholly and truly yours that I have grown to think of this world as merely one spot—one little spot—where we can make a home and I can have you beside me—for the rest of my life."

CHAPTER XXV.

In the Daylight.

Wentworth's chamber was dim as twilight when Merry entered. The outer world lay white and breathless under a dazzling sun, and the sudden change to a darkened sickroom for a moment made Andrew grope vaguely on the threshhold. As his eyes became accustomed to the dusk he saw a white-gowned nurse standing beside the bed. Under the sheet lay the motionless outline of the man's long body, the head wound with snowy bandages. British Commons Unanimous In Granting War Credit.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The meeting of the House of Commons yesterday was entirely devoted to war measures and without partisan politics.

Premier Asquith requested a vote for $1,125,000,000, and another million soldiers, both of which the House granted without a dissenting voice.

The condition and morals of the soldiers; the inevitable spy system and the press censorship were discussed freely. The Prime Minister characterized the crisis as "the greatest emergency in which the country has ever been placed." He said there were already under arms 1,200,000 men; that the war was costing nearly $5,000,000 per day and that the Government proposed to lend Belgium $50,000,000 and Servia $4,000,000 without interest until the end of the war.

Timothy Healy, the Irish Nationalist, said that the money should be given to them.

John Hodge, the Labor member for Lancashire, endorsed the proposal, with the suggestion: "Later on, we can collect it from the German emperor."

Reginald McKenna, Secretary for Home Affairs, informed the House that there were 14,500 alien enemies in the concentration camps in the British Isles and 29,000 at large.

Walter Hume Long, Mr. Healy and Lord Charles Beresford discussed the question of publicity and urged that the country should be given fuller details of the achievements of the troops in the field.

In his closing speech, Premier Asquith placed the burden of the censorship on France, and said it was necessary to defer to the wishes of the country which was doing the greatest part of the fighting, and where the fighting was being carried on.

He announced that Earl Kitchener, Secretary for War, had prepared a scheme for increased pay. He concluded by declaring that sickness among the troops had not exceeded 10, possibly 15 per cent., and he believed no body of men had ever been brought together who had comported themselves better than the present army.

Breach of Neutrality Alleged In Case of Cruiser Emden.

TOKIO, Nov. 17.—The first allegation that the United States has failed to live up to the standard of neutrality it set, is made in a despatch received from Kobe yesterday.

It declares that the German cruiser Emden was enabled to find and sink the steamer Troylus as the result of a wireless despatch sent from Manilla.

The information contained in the wireless message, it is declared, was secured in Kobe by a German merchant who has been arrested and will be tried as a spy.

What Thin Folks Should Do To Gain Weight

PHYSICIANS'. ADVICE FOR THIN, UNDEVELOPED MEN AND WOMEN.

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who, having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat, but their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered regenerative force makes fat grow after years of thinness, and is also unequalled for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable discovery is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this peerless preparation, which is endorsed by eminent physicians and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A month's systematic use of Sargol should produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are provided. J. S. McKeown, Drug Store and other leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitalizer, it should not be used by nervous people unless they wish to gain at least

CRACOW IS INVESTED BY THE RUSSIANS

Italian Paper Declares That Capital of Galicia Is In Flames and That the Inhabitants Are In Flight—Reports at Petrograd Say Germans Have Taken Charge and Have Ousted Austrian Defenders.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Giornale d'Italia of Rome publishes a despatch from Venice which says that news has been received there that Cracow, the capital of Galicia, is burning and that its inhabitants are fleeing. Cracow is invested on the north, and is expected to fall immediately.

From reports of Russian scouting detachments which had ridden within a few miles of Cracow it appears the Germans have taken command of the forts and defences there, and have substituted German soldier for Austrians in garrisoning the stronghold.

This step has caused further dissentions between the Germans and Austrians, the latter being relegated to the defence of the Carpathians, and not allowed any voice in directing the campaign.

All indications point to a rupture between the two armies.

Petrograd further reports that the Russian campaign is developing favorably in East Prussia.

On the Polish frontier and in Galicia two enormous armies are massing for a battle which may decide the fortunes of the war in the east.

The possibility is being discussed that the Austrians may abandon Cracow without defence rather than submit the city to a destructive bombardment.

The Russian advance in East Prussia, according to advices received at Petrograd from the front, is being assisted materially by cold weather, which enables the troops to move more rapidly. In the swampy region of East Prussia movements of the army have been retarded by soft roads. This condition has now been remedied by the cold weather, which has frozen the roads.

A fall of snow during the last two days is reported over the entire field of operations, but not to a sufficient extent to prove a serious obstacle to the movement of troops.

Fresh troops now being sent to the front are supplied with short coats of tanned sheepskin. Relief societies in Petrograd and other Russian cities are bending every effort to collect woollen garments.

Despatches to Petrograd papers indicate that the Germans are making slow progress along the line which extends from the River Warthe across the Vistula to the southern frontier of East Prussia, fifty miles east of Thorn. The new front extends over a distance of three hundred miles from the Warthe to the extreme northeastern section of East Prussia.

The German right wing now appears to be feeling its way. The centre of the line is stubbornly resisting the determined advance of the Russians. The left wing is protected to some extent by the broken character of the country and by complicated artificial fortifications. In this region the chief German reliance appears to be heavy artillery, since cavalry operations are almost impossible in such a country.

"The Germans are concentrating great armies at Thorn, Posen and Breslau and plan to fight desperately to prevent the Russian occupation of the important parts of Silesia and Posen. Only the utmost need will persuade the Germans to send any troops back to the western front at present."

A word of caution to the allies comes from Petrograd. This is that they must not expect the Russians to sweep on to Berlin over night, as it were, as this may take months and even longer. The Germans occupy the defences they have been preparing for years, and in addition to this they may be able to spare even more men for the operation on their eastern front.

FOUR HUNDRED CAPTURED.

Eighty British Infantrymen Perform a Notable Feat.

PARIS, Nov. 17—A remarkable incident is narrated by a correspondent of Liberte yesterday. He says that during the desperate fighting to the south of Ypres on Nov. 11 a British infantry detachment of 80 men found itself isolated and unable to join its main body and took refuge for the night in a wood. The position seemed hopeless, but the men rested till dawn. They were then aroused by a fusilade near at hand, and found that a German column was being driven toward the wood by a force of allies. Holding their fire they waited till the Germans were near and then charged with fixed bayonets. The diversion was so decisive that 400 prisoners were taken and the lost Tommies received a doubly warm welcome from their comrades.

Search For Survivors Fails.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 17.—The Chilean hospital ship Valdivia, which has been searching the seas for possible survivors of the British cruisers lost in the engagement with the German squadron off the Chilean coast on Nov. 1, arrived yesterday at Talcahuana and reports her search entirely without success. She found nothing in the way of wreckage or boats from the British vessels. The Chilean Admiralty announces that its search is now over.

Officers May Be Interned.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Telegraphing from Christiania, the correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. says that the British steamer Weymar, on her way from Archangel, Russia, to Leith, Scotland, ran ashore on Borre Island, off the coast of Norway. All hands were saved and taken to Torndhejem. Among them are 20 British officers who recently brought over a Canadian icebreaker for the Russian Government.

The question is now being raised as to whether these officers are to be

BATTLE MOVES SOUTH

Main German Attack Yesterday Occurred in Argonne.

French Repulse Onslaught on Their Positions and Also Frustrate the Kaiser's Assault on Town of St. Hubert—Big Force of Germans Are Cut Off by Flood South of Dixmude—Fresh Indians Arrive.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Germans yesterday made a fierce onslaught against the French positions in the forest of Argonne, the attack being met with an unflinching resistance, followed shortly after by a vigorous offensive movement, which forced the Germans to retire. The Kaiser's troops made an attack on the Town of St. Hubert, but were repulsed.

A semi-official explanation of the French position in the forest of Argonne was given out in Paris yesterday afternoon. It said:

"The fighting line has not changed perceptibly in the last two months. The French and German trenches are separated at some points by a distance not exceeding fifty yards. Infantry fire is constantly going on, while all the experience of siege operations are being utilized. This siege resembles greatly that of Sebastopol. Daily engagements occur, resulting sometimes in bending either the French or the German lines back for a distance of 150 yards.

"The casualties have been very heavy for both opposing armies, but here, as elsewhere, the German losses certainly have been superior to those of the French."

This explanation was brought forth by the publication in the German press of a statement to the effect that the French had been completely driven out of the Argonne, while the siege of Verdun was proceeding. Regarding the latter, it is declared that the French are advancing and that they are now from five to ten kilometres (three to six miles) further forward than they were a month ago.

The loss of life in Flanders has been appalling, with the effect that the German offensive in the extreme west has shifted southward toward the French border. Snow and rain have fallen over the battleground in West Flanders until the roads have been turned into channels of mud, where heavy fighting and artillery movements are impossible, and where a big force of Germans is said to have been cut off by a flood. The region from Dixmude to Nieuport is a lapping swamp. Men have been driven out of the trenches, wherein now float the ghastly, mutilated bodies of the dead. Guns and ammunition wagons have been abandoned, and there is recorded thereabouts an increase of sickness, especially lung and throat affection.

Notwithstanding these harrowing conditions, the Germans are pressing, with almost non-human determination, their attempt to jam through to Dunkirk and Calais. An artillery duel is now said to be in progress. The Germans have now completed several new lines of defence through Belgium.

Japanese gunners, skilled in the use of the heaviest types of cannon, are on their way to France to aid the artillerymen of the allies.

Twenty-five thousand fresh Indian troops arrived in Paris yesterday from Marseilles, and started immediately for the front. They reached Marseilles Thursday, after a twenty-three-day voyage from Bombay.

The National Swiss yesterday published a long letter from a Swiss who is doing Red Cross work at Brussels. An extract from the letter says: "The number of German wounded arriving here is unimaginable." Trains—which we call cemetery trains—full of piled-up dead soldiers continue to arrive from the front. They contain bundles of dead; that is, four bodies tied together to facilitate transportation.

"The bodies are burned promptly in special furnaces erected just outside Brussels."

An observer with the British army who furnishes the newspaper reports from the front announces that the German attempts to batter a wedge through the British lines have greatly decreased in force during the past few days and that they bear little semblance to the attacks in great force launched against Ypres at the end of October. They are, he adds, more in the nature of demonstrations in force than serious assaults.

The writer pays high tribute to the bravery of raw German youths and untrained men of middle age who, he says, does not hesitate to march against the trained British troops.

If the Germans have abandoned their repeated furious battering ram efforts, their failure to thrust back the allies' lines and reach Calais will, from the allies' point of view, constitute a distinct victory for the allies, since, it is asserted, they have not tried nor were they expected to accomplish anything more than to hold their own on the defensive.

New German Levies Cannot Stand Strain of Fighting.

Official British Bulletin Says Young Men In Trenches In Belgium Want the Stamina and Older Men Lack Ardor — Hastily Trained Troops March Steadily Up to the Muzzles of Rifles of British.

LONDON, Nov. 17. — The official press bureau has issued an account, dated Nov. 10, of the movements of the British force and the French armies in immediate touch with it. After giving in detail the events from day to day, it continues:

"In describing the operations for the six days from Nov. 4 to 9, it can be said that during that period the Germans have nowhere along our front, made an attack in great force, such as was launched against Ypres at the end of October. What they may be contemplating remains to be seen. Their policy has appeared to be to wear us out by continual bombardment, interspersed with local assaults at different points.

"On the whole there is evidence to show that the Germans are beginning to be affected by their heavy losses. From prisoners it is gathered that the young men of the new corps cannot withstand the fatigues and privations of campaigning, and that the middle-aged men lack ardor. From the same source also, it is learned that the recruits who have not previously served, have only received some eight or nine weeks' training instead of the 12 weeks' course prescribed for them; that they have had practically no instruction in musketry, and that they have not practiced entrenching.

"Whatever deterioration there may be in the material now being drafted into the ranks of our enemy, it must be admitted that the Prussian war machine, acting on a nation previously inured to the sternest discipline, has obtained the most remarkable results.

"It is true that a considerable proportion of the masses recently thrown into the field against the British has consisted of hastily trained and immature men, but the great factor remains that these ill-assorted levies have not hesitated to advance against highly trained troops. In spite of lack of officers, in spite of inexperience, boys of 16 and 17 have faced our guns, have marched steadily up to the muzzles of our rifles and have met death in droves, without flinching."

Letters Must Go By Post.

LONDON, Nov. 17. — An Amsterdam despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. states that a German official communication announces that the general commander of the seventh army corps at Munster, Westphalia, has issued an order prohibiting the transport to Holland, and vice versa, of letters or other written communications other than through the post.

NATURAL GAS EXPLOSION CAUSES $2,000 LOSS

WINDOR, Ont., Nov. 15.—Natural gas exploding in the basement of the Commercial Motor Truck Company, Goyeau street, caused a fire which resisted the efforts of the firemen for more than two hours last evening and caused damage to the extent of $2,000. Three times the firemen were driven from the basement by clouds of choking smoke. The blaze was finally conquered after the firemen chopped their way through the resment floor and fought it from above.

BELLEVILLE STACCATOS

BY "A MAJOR"

There is one thing that the war has done for us and that is to cause a tremendous revival of every variety of patriotic music. Just whether or not such an abnormal bringing to light of various aged pro-British strains is to be considered a blessing unadorned or one disguised, rests to a lareg extent with the success of its presentation to the stunned but loyal ear. We have had a plethora of concerts this fall, all with a worthy object in view, and it is safe to say that they have uniformly been of more than average artistic merit. To the ladies and gentlemen who have so readily contributed their gifted and cultured services, the thanks of our music loving and loyally supporting public are due, and have been already extended in signifiant and hearty manner. We are glad to say that the members of the Philharmonic Society are pursuing their work this year with every indication of surpassing their very excellent standard of last year. Gounod's "Redemption" will be presented some time in February, in all probability, and a treat may be confidently expected as the solo voices are well represented and the choruses are among the most beautiful ever penned. Mr. Cameron, the conductor, is putting forth every effort towards not only carrying on the society's work successfully but also in the amalgamation of an orchestra to be ultimately combined with the singing body in what will without a doubt be an epoch making presentation in Belleville. There is no doubt that there is the talent in our city simply requiring organization and a definite aim, and the hope is expressed that such an effort will receive the unanimous support of those capable of assisting, and eventually, of our music loving citizens, when the perfected results are presented to the public in concert form. The orchestra expects to appear as a musical unit at as early a date as is compatible with the completion of the work in hand and will have the assistance of our most prominent vocalists. As was proposed last year, a strong association of leading citizens is being organized by Mr. T. P. Blackburn in support of the Philharmonic as a Belleville institution, and their enterprise is worthy of all praise.

Mr. Hinchey, the gifted band master of the 15th Regiment, is to be congratulated, along with his capable support, on the inauguration of the Sunday evening recitals, and his season was most favorably opened recently to a crowded and appreciative house. The programme was reverent and fitting in character, giving every indication of a discriminating and artistic power of selection and the Belleville public can feel assured of a delightful and fitting hour after church whenever the concerts are announced.

Commencing November 1st Miss Stork has joined the Bridge Street ranks (these military terms come readily) and her beautiful voice is a great addition to the musical portion of the services. Mr. Cameron has secured a considerable amount of new and effective music and is looking forward to the presentation from time to time of some of the more pretentious compositions suitable for church use, including a complete work on a Christmas subject, and a Bach New Year motet. The arrival of to superb new organ, expected during December, is looked forward to with keen interest. At present Mrs. R. Lewis is adding to the service with her exquisitely judged accompaniments.

Mrs. Grant is making rapid strides with the Tabernacle choir and promises us a concert in the near future which should be one of high standard as she has a capable choir and most reliable backing in Mrs. Duff's sympathetic organ work. Accompaniments skilfully played are more than half the battle, as many nerve-wrecked conductors realize, murmuring forgetful even of the placement, "How long, O Lord, how long?"

We are glad to know that Mr. Riggs has now at his command a completely equipped new organ which, under the deft fingers of Miss Wanda Riggs, should add greatly to the Baptist Church services and make this progressive congregation justly proud of their enterprise, which has resulted in their now having a perfectly appointed and beautifully toned place of worship.

The St. Andrew's Church congregation are more than satisfied with the development of their large and effective choir, under Mrs. Allen's painstaking leadership. We understand that there is a prospect of us hearing them in conjunction with an instrumental organization in the near future. It is to be hoped that the rumor is well founded and that a more generally constituted audience may have the privilege of enjoying what she has up to now reserved for our "auld kirk" friends.

John Street Church is to be congratulated on securing Mrs. Connell's services as choir leader. Mr. and Mrs. Connell are recent arrivals in Belleville from Erin's Isle and have come armed with exquisite violin duets and broad musical experience in many lines and will form a most to be desired acquisition to our musical circles.

Speaking generally we consider that Belleville audiences are presented regularly with what is probably a more to be commended type of musical expression than they are aware of, for the simple reason that the best grows almost common from regular and close association. Is it amiss just here to breathe a faint suggestion that the beauties, not the faults, be at all times sought for, and the encouragement and feeling of support engendered in the proverbially temperamentally responsible ones is unquestionably bound to result in an even higher degree of attainment. Let us all try it, from the big first day of the week to the end of the seventh.

May Care For Belgian Orphans In This City

Mr. W. H. Wrightmyer of the local Children's Aid Society, is in receipt of a communication relative to a concentrated effort being made by the Societies, with the aid of the Provincial Government, in providing accommodation and eventually homes for some Belgian orphans. An executive meeting will be held in the near future to deal with the matter. Undoubtedly there are many families in Belleville who would care for one of these children, whose parents have been torn from them by England's arch-enemy.

Letters From The Front

Salisbury Plain,
Oct. 28th, 1914.

Dear Father and Mother,—

I thought I would write and let you know how I am getting along. We have a good time now. I have been transferred from the Battery over to the Ammunition Column. We have to take ammunition to the batteries. We are about a mile from the firing line all the time when we are in action; so I don't think I will get killed quite so quickly. I hope that I will be able to come back again some time. They are allowing us three days' leave to see the sights. I intend going to London when I get mine. Mrs. Howe's two grandsons and I are going together—the two Cousins boys. Tell Mrs. Howe that they are getting along fine. Tell her Hubert is sporting a very fine moustache; she won't know him when he comes back. Well, the army is not so bad as you tried to make out it is. I have not began to smoke or drink yet, and there are a good many like myself. There are a good many Christian men in our bunch and those men are as good as can be. It is not a hard life. Well, I think I will close now, with love to all, I remain your loving son,

TALLASSE TO-NIGHT

There are three reasons why Griffin's Opera House should be packed to the doors this evening, when Charles A. Macfarlane's three-act drama, "Tallasse, The Indian Princess," is to be presented. First, it is given for the benefit of the Patriotic Fund. Second, the play itself will afford one of the most pleasing of evenings. Third, with Mr. William L. Doyle, an expert theatrical man at the helm, there will be no occasion for other than a perfect presentation. There are practically no delays between scenes; continuous action is a predominating feature of the play. The finding of Talasse in the Wigwam Village, for which special lights have been arranged, will be a scene never to be forgotten, while her escape and later arrival at the home of paleface friends, to whom she was directed by her rescuer, is beyond description. This portion of the play alone is worth the price of admission. Be there, with your friends.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY.
Deputy Minister of the Interior

Educational Value Of Good Books

Few there are who realize the extensive knowledge that can be gained through an occasional reference to what might be termed commonplace books. There is probably not a family in Belleville that does not possess at least one such volume that is seldom referred to, or that is possibly concealed in some hiding place where it is not even seen, except at such times as there is a general housecleaning. Run over in your mind the titles of some of these books in your own home. Doubtless you have a copy of the Bible. Do you ever refer to it as a historical work or as a work of reference? You know Abraham Lincoln said: "No library is complete without two certain books—the Bible and Shakespeare; hardly a quotation used in literature that is not taken from one of these works," and Lincoln was a self-educated man—a man of practical learning, whose words of wisdom will be handed down to posterity.

The Bible thus becomes a work of more than ordinary educational value to the everyday citizen; to men and women, boys and girls; old and young alike. The Intelligencer is now offering the New Illustrated Bible a volume that is unique in that it completely illustrates the subjects which each picture accompanies. The illustrations alone cost $50,000. It is possible to embellish a book without actually illustrating it. This Bible is not merely embellished; it is truly and accurately illustrated. Other Bibles there are containing pictures; none other in which the individual texts are actually illuminated, as though by the touch of inspiration. Comparison is impossible, for this new Bible stands alone—there is no other of its kind. Therefore, praise of this superb new book means no disparagement of the many excellent editions published heretofore. Nor is this superiority surprising; for more than 100 of the world's greatest artists working under the advice of archaeologists and historians of wide renown have contributed the choicest products of their skill and genius to produce this grand triumph of artistic beauty and perfection in historical detail. These pictures are not mere reproductions of mediaeval frescoes and more or less familiar modern photographs, inserted at random; they have been specially made, in the light of exact knowledge, to illustrate selected texts in accordance with the matured beliefs of the greatest living scientists. It must be remembered that this new Bible also contains every essential special feature that gives peculiar value to the best of ordinary Bibles, such as marginal references, descriptive helps, and beautifully colored maps.

Get this Bible by clipping certificates from The Intelligencer. Today's certificate is printed on another page, and the plan is fully explained there.

STIRLING

Chapped Hands
AND Cold-Sores

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

Zam-Buk also cures chafing, rashes, winter eczema, piles, ulcers, festering sores, sore heads and backs, abscesses, pimples, ring-worm, etc., cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, sprains. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c a box.

OFFICIAL BULLETINS.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—The night bulletin issued by the War Office said:—

"The situation is without modification."

The afternoon bulletin was as follows:—

"During all of yesterday on the Yser Canal, from Nieuport to the point on the river opposite Dixmude, the fighting was limited to artillery exchanges, the country having been further inundated. The submerged territory now stretches to the south of Dixmude to a point five kilometres to the north of Bixschoote.

"The forces of the enemy which endeavored to cross the canal in the region between Dixmude and Bixschoote all were driven back beyond the bridges. A German regiment was completely destroyed at a point to the south of Bixschoote."

"At the southeast of Ypres two other German attacks were repulsed.

"On our part we have taken the offensive and reconquered certain points of support which the enemy some days ago succeeded in capturing.

"For the last few days, between the River Lys and the River Oise, there have been only small minor operations by small units, and we have made slight progress in our works of approach.

"In the region on the River Aisne, in the district of Champaigne, only cannonades, without result, have occurred. In the Argonne district the Germans have made another attack upon St. Hubert without success.

"In the region of St. Mihiel the enemy has failed in a surprise attack in the forest of Apremont, and the Vosges there is little activity."

FIRST V. C. LIST.

Nine British Soldiers Honored—Three of Them Have Died.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The first list of Victoria Cross awards to be published during the present war, contains the names of five officers and four non-commissioned officers, of which two recipients have since been given commissions and three have died of wounds.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Douglas Haig has been promoted to general for distinguished service in the war.

Those on whom the crosses were conferred are Capt. Francisco Grenfell of the Ninth Lancers for aiding and saving the guns of the British in Belgium, Aug. 24; on Capt. Douglas Reynolds of the artillery, who was wounded in a similar exploit; on Capt. Theodore Wright of the engineers, who was mortally wounded while rescuing a wounded man; on Surgeon Harry Sherwood Ranken for attending men under fire after he had received wounds from which he died later; on Lieut. Maurice Dease and on four non-commissioned officers.

TURKS ARE DEFEATED.

East Indian Troops Capture Prisoners and Guns In Engagement.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—It is officially announced that since the occupation of Fao, at the head of the Persian Gulf, by a British Indian force, on Nov. 8, two actions have been fought with the Turkish forces, who "on both occasions have been severely handled and defeated after stubborn resistance."

The announcement continues: "The first of these attacks occurred early in the morning of Nov. 11, when the Turks made a determined attack on the British outposts. On the fourteenth further reinforcements arrived from India, and the following day the Indians, commanded by Gen. Delamain, sortied and attacked the Turks, occupying a post about four miles distant, assisted by the sloops Espiegle and Odin.

"The enemy's camp was captured and many prisoners and guns were taken. The British casualties were two officers wounded and eight men killed and fifty-one wounded."

TWO
Exceptionally Liberal Dressmaking Offers
For The Month of November

That will insure our large Dressmaking Staff of steady employment.

Your new Suit, Coat or Dress cut and first fitting free.

During the month of November we will cut and give the first fitting free on any suit, coat or dress material bought in the store that sells at $1.00 a yard or upwards. This is an offer that has no precedent in The Ritchie Store. When one considers that in the cutting and first fitting lies the style and success of your garment, you will undoubtedly make haste to take advantage of this very liberal offer, especially when we tell you that the cutting and fitting will be done personally by Miss Peterson, our capable dressmaking artist, one of the best in her line. Although this offer will be good for the entire month of November, we would advise ladies to make the selection of their suit, coat or dress material at once, while there is still a large and varied selection to choose from. Remember, this offer is good on any material that sells at $1.00 and upwards.

Your New Dress Made to Order $10.00

Your New Suit Tailored to Order $12.00

In order that we may be able to give employment to our entire staff of girls in the Dressmaking Department, we have decided to make up any silk or other material from our stock at or over $1.00 per yard, in any fashionable style of dress you may choose, under the personal supervision of Miss Peterson, and charge Only Ten Dollars for the making. To make a suit from any suiting in stock at $1.00 per yard or over we will charge Only Twelve Dollars for the making. These prices will not cover the cost of the labor, but we are willing to lose something in order to give all our hands steady employment.

Dressmaking Parlors, 2nd Floor.

CHARGED WITH TREASON.

Members of Snyder Family Accused of Helping Austrians to Escape.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., 17.—Joseph Snyder, 60 years old, his son Richard, 24 years old, and his brother, Arthur, 37 years old, are prisoners at the Armory, on a charge of treason. Joseph Snyder and his son live on a farm near Slater's Point, about a mile above Chippewa, and has a wife and family.

The Snyders were arrested by men of the 44th Regiment stationed at the Armory, who, it is said, had laid a trap for them. It is said the militiamen caught the Snyders in the act of starting out for the American shore in a motor-boat with four Austrian reservists. The foreigners claimed they paid Snyder to ferry them across the river. The three Snyders and the Austrians found at the Snyder place were brought to this city and lodged at the Armory.

It is alleged the Snyders have conveyed a number of reservists across, receiving $10 for every one they succeeded in landing on the American side.

EMBATTLED ARMIES' HOMAGE TO "BOBS"

Prince of Wales at Army Headquarters in France to Represent the King--He Will Stay With General French at the Front

NORTH OF FRANCE, Nov. 16.—Special.—Tonight, within the battle area, an army pays homage to the great dead. Where the guns boom faintly in the stormy weather lies the body of Lord Roberts, the idol of the British army. The Prince of Wales arrived today from London to pay homage in the name of the King. It is understood that the Prince will stay at the front as a member of General French's staff. His arrival at Boulogne was the occasion of a great popular demonstration. He spoke to a number of wounded troops, French and British. Prince Arthur of Connaught also spends many hours at the bier. British Generals, staff officers and subalterns, whose duties are not vitally pressing elsewhere, watch the coffin clad with the Union Jack and listen to the prayers which punctuated by the music of the guns, marks this most glorious and impressive of lyings-in-state. At daybreak tomorrow our guns will fire a farewell salute, and the last journey will commence. In simplest grandeur the road to the coast will be taken, and along that road the armies guarding the allies' lines of communication will be drawn up and an endless guard of honor to that sea upon which the allies base their power, from this war-stricken land, where all is clash and destruction, and where the reservoirs of human misery are unfathomable, the remains of the grand old man of the British army will pass to the peace and quiet of sea-girt Britain.

London, Nov. 17.—It has been decided that Lord Roberts will be buried at Ascot, either in All Saints' Church or on his Englemere estate. The funeral service will probably be held in London in deference to the national demand. Lady Roberts declined the offer to have the remains interred in Westminster Abbey.

ANNUAL MEETING OF CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Goodly Number of Citizens Present--Excellent Address by Mr. Ferrier, of Mimico--Reports of an Encouraging Nature Presented--Officers Elected

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society of this city was held last evening in the Y.M.C.A. lecture room. There was a fair attendance of citizens.

Dr. Farley, President of the Society, occupied the chair.

After the singing of a hymn the scripture lesson was read by the Rev. A. L. Geen, followed by an appropriate prayer being offered by Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrew's Church.

The President in his annual address referred to the Society and the present shelter. This building, he said, had been condemned by the government inspector as being unsanitary and in other respects not suitable as a shelter. The Society had appointed committees to look over the city to see if a suitable building or land could be secured for the erection of a new building. The Society did select, or partially select, a residence in West Belleville, but the action of the committee was denounced by several of the ratepayers in that section of the city. The result was that the proposal to procure that property was abandoned.

The shelter was not a permanent home for the children, but a temporary home until foster homes can be secured. At present there are twenty-seven children in the home, which is all that can be accommodated. The children were from 4 to 10 years of age. The mode of procuring a child from the shelter was explained by the speaker. He hoped all citizens would take an interest in the work of the Society.

A nominating committee was appointed by the President to draft the list of officers for the ensuing year.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, Treasurer of the Society, presented the following report:—

I have the honor to present the Treasurer's annual report of the Children's Aid Society of Belleville and the County of Hastings. A detailed statement of receipts and expenditures for the current month has been submitted at each of the monthly meetings and I do not think it necessary to repeat the same in this report, so am only giving a summary. Copies of the detailed monthly reports can be seen either at the office of the secretary, or at my office.

Receipts—

Balance, October 31, 1913	$	4 95
Donations and memberships		650 12
Maintenance from municipalities		2811 30
Quinte Chapter Daughters of the Empire		416 50
		$3891 86

Expenditures—

Maintenance of Shelter	$1,673.27
Salaries and Help	1,688.45
		3361 72
Balance on hand		$ 530 14

A number of donations have been made to the Society during the past year, and the following is a list of those that, I think, deserve special mention in this report:

H. Corby	$100 00
Thos. Ritchie	50 00
J. W. Johnson	5 00
Misses Hatt	20 00
A. E. Bailey	10 00
E. B. Harris	5 00
Dr. Farley	25 00
Moira Lodge A. F. & A. M.	20 00
Belleville Lodge A. F. & A. M.	10 00
H. W. Ackerman	10 00
Miss A. I. Sutherland	7 75
G. A. Bonisteel	8 00
Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Campion	5 00
Women's Institute, Stirling	10 00
Women's Inst., Chatterton	10 00
Women's Inst., Ivanhoe	10 00
Women's Inst., Wellman's	10 00
Junior Epworth League, Shannonville	1 00
Mrs. John Lewis	5 00
Victoria Avenue Baptist Church	10 20
Bell Telephone Co.	7 50

There has been a considerable falling off in membership during this past year. At present there are only about forty-five members who have contributed one dollar or over as a membership fee to the Society. I have always contended that this Society should have a membership of at least 1,000.

The Quinte Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire have been very generous to our Society this past year, contributing in all $416.50, all of which has been applied to the payment of the salary for the teacher at the shelter.

We are still occupying the old shelter which the city authorities have been kind enough to place at our disposal and which for various reasons is not considered by the Society as suitable for the carrying on of the work owing to want of sewerage, bad heating arrangements, bad repair, etc. The Society recently made a determined effort to procure a more suitable building, but owing to the situation of the proposed new shelter it was opposed by a number of prominent citizens and the project has been abandoned by the Society. I trust that many who have recently taken a very active part in the affairs of this Society will continue to do so throughout the coming year and assist financially and otherwise in enabling the Society to obtain a more suitable home to carry on the work.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. F. Ketcheson, Treas.

Mr. A. E. Bailey, in moving the adoption of the report, eulogized Mr. Ketcheson for the work he was doing for the Society as treasurer.

Rev. A. L. Geen seconded the motion for the reception of the report, which was unanimously adopted and referred to the auditors.

Mr. Chester Ferrier, Superintendent of the Boys' Industrial School at Mimico, gave an address which dealt chiefly with the boy problem. The speaker in his opening remarks stated that Mr. Kelso, who is at the head of the Children's Aid Society of this province, had delegated to the speaker to tender his sympathy with the Society in every respect. The Society was doing a grand work all over this province. The agents of the various societies were men who were willing to do the work and often did it at a sacrifice. Officers selected were whole-souled man. In the school over which he presided there were no girls, but all boys. The boys were unfortunate and come from homes which were not what they should be. God has placed these unfortunate children that we may train them aright. The Industrial School was for this purpose. Sometimes the work of regenerating a boy is slow. There are in the school today 300 boys, and out of 21 which he recently questioned as to why they were sent to the school, 17 said for theft, and 13 admitted they were users of cigarettes. Boys being allowed out at night away from parental restraint is a great cause for boys going astray. The greatest cause for delinquency among boys is the home surroundings and unless the parents are shown how to bring up their boys, any society that does this is getting at the root of the evil. Sometimes homes are broken up on account of drunkenness. Many boys are in the Industrial School because parents desert the home. Every boy should have a chance at home. There comes a time when a boy needs his father's advice and does not receive it. The father should teach the boy the sacred truths. It is important that the father should discipline his boys in a proper manner. Teaching boys how to spend money properly will be one of the means to accomplish good for them. If the love that never fails had been exerted over many of the boys who are in the school today they would never have been sent there. Have faith in and love the boy and go out after him.

Thrilling Airship Raid By French

Heavy Damage Inflicted on German Station; Narrow Escape For Airmen

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 18.—(Special.)—The story of a thrilling airship raid by French officers comes from Arras.

The Captain in command of the airship had received orders to made an incursion into the enemy's country and try to destroy a railway junction where the Germans were conveying troops. The line was well-guarded, and it was necessary to cross the enemy's position for a considerable distance.

The airship started at dusk, with all lights out, and succeeded in crossing the enemy's lines without being seen. It soon located the junction, and dropped in rapid succession three dynamite charges upon the doomed station, with considerable damage to the tracks.

Sky Ablaze with Shells.

The airship by that time had been discovered by the enemy's searchlights, and all the field guns and mortars in the neighborhood were aimed at it. The sky was ablaze with bursting shells, some coming dangerously near.

By throwing over all the available ballast the airship's crew was enabled to rise rapidly. As a departing salute it attempted to drop a fourth charge of dynamite.

Just then something went wrong which threatened the airship with instant destruction. The dynamite charge got stuck in the tube.

Germans Are Deluded.

The automatic detonator already had been set in motion. Rapidly the Captain seized a hatchet and climbed over the rigging. He struck a few desperate blows at the tube, at the risk of his life, and released the charge, saving the airship. The dynamite exploded with a terrific detonation long before it reached the ground, and burst into flames. The Germans evidently thought the airship itself had been destroyed, for the firing ceased, and the French dirigible quietly headed back to its station, and in the morning reported the success of its expedition.

TIDE HAS TURNED YPRES IMPREGNABLE

NORTH FRANCE, Nov. 17.—The tide has turned. The bastion of Ypres is impregnable, that is the main fact of this struggle in Flanders. There were critical days, however. No one knows how anxiously the khaki line watched to see if it could stand the strain.

Let me warn against the generally accepted statements that the Germans have lost heart. They still have faith in their own invincibility. It is regrettable that the public cannot know all there is to be known of the supreme valor of the allies during the past fortnight.

The trenches have changed hands over and over again, and every yard of ground has been fought and strewn with the bodies of fallen heroes. In the midst of the struggle, when the operations were balanced as delicately as the mainspring of a watch, the Indians, whose trenches are now hardly ever attacked by the bayonet, adopted a novel if somewhat disconcerting method of coming in close touch with the enemy. The Indian troops had come to grips at nightfall. They abandoned their trenches to the enemy, and the unsuspecting Germans occupied them, but during the night the Indians crept steadily over the lost ground, moving like cats in the darkness. They fell upon the German trenches with awful fury, completely surprising them. Few escaped. This is the kind of warfare which delights the heart of the Indian soldier, but gives anxious moments for those directing operations.

FIERCE STORM RAGING ON THE UPPER LAKES

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 17.—One of the fiercest storms that has raged in this section since the fatal storms of November last has prevailed here and on the Great Lakes during the past twenty-four hours, with little signs of abating.

A large number of boats are anchored in Mud Lake, seeking shelter from the storm. The Assiniboia arrived here at 2 p.m., after being anchored in Mud Lake for fourteen hours, and being delayed on Lake Huron for five hours. Other boats are seeking shelter at Whitefish, where the C. P. R. steamer Alberta is said to be in shelter. The manitoba is reported to be at Port Arthur. No boats have passed through the Soo Canal since 5 p.m. yesterday.

NUMEROUS ARTILLERY DUELS—ZOUAVES MAKE BRILLIANT CHARGE—ENGLISH ARMY MAINTAINS THE FRONT

PARIS, Nov. 18.—An official statement this afternoon says:

Yesterday saw numerous artillery duels and some isolated infantry attacks, all of which were repulsed.

From the North Sea to Lys the front has been subjected to fairly active bombardment, particularly at Nieuport and to the east and south of Ypres.

Near Bixschoote the Zouaves, charging with the bayonet, brilliantly took possession of a forest, which had been disputed between the enemy and ourselves for three days.

To the south of Ypres an offensive movement on the part of the enemy's infantry was repulsed by our troops. The English army also maintained its front.

"DON'T SHOOT THEY ARE FEEDING OUT OF MY HAND

PARIS, Nov. 18.—As a heavy London Motor omnibus dashed towards British camp in the second line yesterday, a sentry fired and the guard turned out with loaded rifles and fixed bayonets, for in the vehicle were twelve Prussian soldiers with packs and rifles as the bus approached, the driver, a typical London busman, cried out:

"Don't shoot, they are feeding out of my hand They are hungry."

The Prussians had been on outpost duty. When they saw the omnibus returning from advanced British trenches, where it had delivered a load of ammunition, they stood in the middle of the road, threw up their hands and surrendered, declaring that they were starving.

FIRST LORD OF ADMIRALTY MAKES STATEMENT

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The First Lord of the Admiralty stated in the House today, in reply to a question that the total British naval casualties to date were: Officers killed, 222; wounded, 37; missing, 5; Men killed 2,468; wounded, 428; missing, 1.

This list he said, did not include missing officers and men in the Royal Naval Division at Antwerp and on the British Cruiser Good Hope, sunk off Chilean Coast, which totalled 1,000 respectively.

42 CANADIANS BEING RETURNED TO CANADA

LONDON, Nov. 18.—A squad of "misfits" from the Canadian contingent, numbering 42, are being shipped back from Salisbury Plain to Canada, in the interets of discipline. They left the camp under a strong escort in charge of Captain Grover, and will be embarked at Glasgow after deprivation of their rank and uniform.

BRITISH FLEET BOMBARD TWO BELGIAN TOWNS

LONDON, Nov. 18.—A Rotterdam despatch says that the British fleet on Monday vigorously bombarded Belgian towns of Knocke and Zeebrugge, destroying German Troop train and causing much damage to stores and supplies.

UNITED STATES CRUISER TENNESSEE FIRED ON

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 18.—Captain Decker, of the American Cruiser Tennessee, has cabled the Navy Department that while proceeding from Vourlah to Smyrna yesterday to make an official call his vessel was fired upon.

RUSSIANS VICTORIOUS, AUSTRIANS FLEEING

PETROGRAD, Nov. 18.—Furious fighting is reported from the northern part of Bukowina, where the Russians are proving victorious and the Austrians are fleeing in disorder before their advance.

ANOTHER $30,000 FOR JACK JOHNSON

Willard and the Champion Sign Articles in London Yesterday

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Articles were signed to-day for a boxing contest of from 20 to 45 rounds between Jack Johnson, the heavyweight champion and Jesse Willard an American "white hope." The fight will take place during the last two weeks in March at some place to be chosen February. It is said that the battleground probably will be Mexico.

Each of the boxers deposited $1,000 to guarantee his appearance at the ringside. Johnson is to receive $30,000 for fighting.

Mysterious Tragedy At Cherrywood

Farmer Found in Well With Stone Tied Round His Waist

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Considerable excitement was evoked in Ontario county when it became known that the body of George Hollinger, a Cherrywood farmer had been found in a well near his farm by a neighboring farmer. The cause of death is not known with certainty, though in official circles the theory is advanced that the affair was one of suicide.

Hollinger had been missing from his farm for three days, and when the tragic discovery was made it was observed that he had a stone tied around his waist. The deceased was a widower, and is survived by a son. He had passed a somewhat isolated existence for years. On Friday a neighboring farmer, Robert Gilmour, desiring to see Hollinger, paid a call at the homestead, but found no one there. The visitor searched the house and barn, and then looked into the well, where he saw the body. The feet of the man were observable above the surface of the water.

Cherrywood is a village about 30 miles east of Toronto, and near Whitby.

Thought Young Man Was German Spy

LINDSAY Nov. 17.—Mr. A. W. Allin, of J. Sutcliffe & Sons store, who is also one of the assistant superintendents of the Cambridge St. Methodist Sunday School, last week attended the Provincial Sunday School convention at Kingston, and while there secured a number of fine views of the historic Limestone City, including views of the fort and surrounding barracks, etc.

It was while Mr. Allin was taking a picture of the military towers and the fort that he was spied by some soldiers and was about to be arrested as a German spy. Mr. Allin fortunately was able to give a proper account of himself and was not molested further, although he was warned that he was following a dangerous practice in taking pictures of the fortifications.

TEN MORE ALIENS ARRESTED

SARNIA, Nov. 17.—(Special.)—Five Austrians and five Turks were taken from an incoming Grand Trunk train to-day and are now being held by the military guard at the Armories. The men will be taken to Kingston to-morrow.

TALLASSE WINS HER WAY AT GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE

A Large and Delighted Audience Witnessed the Production of This Prettily Staged Comedy-Drama--A Cast Which Wouldo Credit to Professionals--Belleville Talent Highly Commended--The Personnel

The common expression when one is pleased with an amateur production is "As good as professionals." In most cases this is an extreme exaggeration. It is a very difficult thing for "the butcher, the baker, the candle-stick maker" to leave his occupation and woo the histrionic muse. But last night at Griffin's Opera House, one could well be pardoned for using that hackneyed expression "as good as professionals," and for even going farther, and saying better than a great many professionals we have seen.

"Tallasse, the Indian Princess," a three act comedy-drama, by Chas. A. Macfarlane, tells a beautiful, clean story of the triumph of right, and the happiness of true love. But it is not the story, entirely, which brings Tallasse near to the heart, but the wholesome atmosphere of the home which runs through from the rise of the first to the fall of the last curtain.

The play tells the story of a rich lumber merchant, Mr. Robert Grant, cleverly played by the author, Mr. Chas. A. Macfarlane, who is so absolutely engrossed in the pursuit of the almighty dollar that he sacrifices all his home ties to further the persecution of his down-trodden working men. His own son turns against him, and is cast out to seek his own fortune in the world, which brings him to the home of his father's old school chum, Wm. Wheeler, in Grand Forks, N.D. He is brought into the home and lives the lives of the Wheeler's with the result that he falls in love with the beautiful daughter, only to be forced to leave again because of the search that his father institutes for him.

After being deserted by all his family and friends, Robert Grant is brought to a realization of his consumate meanness through the clever manipulation of his niece, Miss Ethel Grant; and right here we pay tribute to Miss Eleanor Smith, whose grace and ease on the stage stamps her as an actress of great histrionic possibilities. It was extremely difficult to reconcile the work of Miss Smith with that of an amateur, as she has a knowledge of technique which takes years to acquire.

Robert Grant relents through his niece's influence, gives in to the demands of the men, makes everyone happy, and sends his nephew Alex. in search of John. That search is successful only after many adventures, chief of which is his fight with the Indians in the north woods, and the finding of Tallasse, the Indian Princess. This delightful character was so charmingly portrayed by Miss Bessie Duckworth, that one could well understand why Alex. should risk all to bring this little Indian girl to a life of happiness as Mrs. Alex. Grant. Miss Duckworth shows careful training and a rare intelligence in the portrayal of this most difficult role.

The rest of the story is plain. John, a real hero, and really played as such in a clever manner by Mr. V. Doolittle, marries the "beautiful daughter," goes home, and brings all his breezy western friends with him to make a happy reunion under the old roof-tree, and the ultimate discovery that Tallasse is no more, and for the future must be known as Mrs. Alex. Grant.

The comedy department of the production was handled delightfully by Miss Lela Weese, as Bernice Wheeler, and served out laughs with each line she spoke. Mr. A. Ferguson, as Clifford Scott, didn't seem to care though, and wore that spirit of devil-may-care which made him a scream.

The character of Alice Wheeler by Miss Gladys Ibey showed an attention to detail, and an intelligence in conception.

One of the most difficult parts in the play is that of Alex. Grant. Mr. F. Morrison, in this role, displayed a fine speaking voice, fine stage presence and clever conception.

Mrs. Wm. Wheeler was charmingly portrayed by Mrs. S. McGuire, whose beauty and ease lent, in a great measure, to the success of the play. Her husband, Wm. Wheeler, a big hearted and big voiced westerner, as played by Mr. J. E. McKitterick, was excellently done.

The Indians, J. E. McCorkell and C. Marston, gave a real thrill to the play. This scene was most beautifully staged.

Mr. J. E. Walmsley played Stephen Warden in his usual dignified and easy manner.

Miss Ida Bateman, as Carrie Pearce, and Annie Ashley as Norah Chambers, were extremely clever in their respective parts, and Mr. J. M. Phelan as Manning, a whole-souled Irishman, and D. Montgomery as James Watson, deserve great credit for their work.

The success of the entire play was due to the hard work and clever stage direction of Mr. Wm. L. Doyle, whose fine "Italian" hand was perceptible from start to finish; also to Mrs. Doyle, who gave her usual painstaking attention to details.

NEW U. S. GUN SHOOTS 10 MILES

Fires a Projectile Capable of Piercing 11.2 Inches of Steel--A Shortage of Ammunition in United States

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Projectiles capable of piercing 11.2 inches of steel armor at a distance of more than ten miles can be fired from new coast defence guns to be installed by the United States army in the defences at the Panama Canal and Manila Bay, according to the annual report of Brigadier-General Crozier, chief of the Bureau of Ordinance, made public here to-day.

These are new 14-inch guns, of greater calibre than those heretofore installed in American defences and of greater power. They will discharge shells weighing 1,660 pounds with a maximum effective range of 18,000 yards or a little more than ten miles. The guns of this type already made have been thoroughly tested and found wholly satisfactory, General Crozier asserts. In the manufacture of these and other guns for the army the arsenal at Watervliet has been working on a day and night for more than a year.

Twenty-three of the latest type of 12 inch mortars were made during the last year and all were sent to the Panama Canal. These have a maximum range of about 11 miles. A new two-inch field gun, and a new type of 3.8-inch field howitzer have been developed by the Ordinance Bureau. Another howitzer of still larger size has been also constructed for use at the Panama fortifications. It is a wire-wound gun firing a 60-pound projectile.

General Crozier in his report calls his attention once more to the shortage of ammunition in the United States army.

"The amount of ammunition on hand for field pieces," he says, "is far short of that considered advisable although appropriations for this purpose have been materially increased."

The supply of small arms ammunition is considered fairly adequate to the first needs of the United States in case of a war This supply could be very rapidly increased by the manufacturing facilities in this country after the outbreak of war.

General Crozier thinks proposals that the War Department shall be prohibited from purchasing any smokeless powder from private manufacturers would be unwise.

"The wisest policy", says General Crozier, "is for Congress to fix, as it has done, what it considers a reasonable price to be paid for smokeless powder and with that restriction to authorize the Department to give private manufacturers a fair share of the work of manufacture."

General Crozier defends the system of scientific shop management in operation at some of the army arsenals. He declares much of the oppostion to what has been done in the arsenals is unwise as he contends both the employes and the government have profited by the system. He says there is no undue crowding of the workmen or driving them to too great a speed under the system as installed in the Wars Departments' shops. The General recommends that no legislation be enacted until the Commission on Industrial Relations which is including scientific shop management system in its investigations, has made a report.

ADEQUATE STEPS WILL BE TAKEN TO DEFEND COAST

So Says Sir Richard McBride After Consulting Government and Admiralty

OTTAWA, Nov. 17.—Special—Sir Richard McBride arrived in the capital to-day on his way back to British Columbia after a month's visit to England. Sir Richard said to-night that he had discussed with the Government here and with the Admiralty the question of naval defence on the Pacific coast, and he was satisfied that "adequate steps would be taken." Sir Richard said he had no intention at present of coming to Ottawa as a Minister, as press reports had rumored. He spoke of the warm feeling in Britain at the action of all the overseas Dominions in coming so promptly to the defence of the motherland.

The King, said Sir Richard, had told him that the Canadian troops were of splendid appearance and had every indication of being first-class fighting men.

The motor goggles mother wore
Last summer, now are cook's—
She wears them peeling onions and
They're not at all for looks.

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractor permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractic is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect, (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

We can prove Chriopractic is right and applicable to your case. Think it over. Consultation free.

TURNER'S SETTLEMENT

Quite a number of local Orangemen attended the celebration at Cannifton on the occasion of the dedication of the new Orange Hall, Nov. 5th.

Mr. A. E. Richmond of the Baptist Church is giving a series of Sunday evening sermons on the war, and good congregations are following them with much interest.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Green visited his brother Mr. Lewis Green at Rawdon on Wedneday last. Mr. Lewis Green was taken with sudden illness, but is recovering.

The Baptist Young People's Society conducted a Patriotic Service in the Church on Wednesday, which proved a great success. An excellent paper was given by Mrs. L. Prest, entitled, "The Present International War." This was followed by a short address from Mr. W. B. Tufts, and Mr. Richmond. A duet was given by Miss Lizzie Hamilton, and Miss Violet Stewart; also a recitation by Miss M. Hamilton. The proceeds were in aid of the Church Renovation Fund.

The Chatterton Women's Institute will meet at the home of Mrs. Nathan Reid on Thursday the 19th. A good programme is being prepared.

Our Soldiers' Needs At Salisbury Plains

The Following Letter Tells In Detail of the Shortness of Actual Necessities Required at Present

The Ladies' Empire Club.
69 Grosvenor Street,
London, W.
(Personal address).

Dear Madam,—

We are addressing this appeal to you in that hope that you will interest your Association on our work and also make it known as widely as possible among those women in your locality who are working for our soldiers. When the Canadian Expeditionary Force left Canada Miss Arnoldi and I were appointed by the Minister of Militia to accompany them and continue the work we had begun at Valcartier, namely, the distribution of field comforts. This work has been approved by the British War Office. It was realized in Canada, as it is here, that it is very necessary and important. The women of Canada are working so hard and so enthusiastically that we feel that they will appreciate to the full a direct demand for their supplies, and also the personal touch which it gives. Very careful enquiries will be made and detailed lists obtained from each regiment, as to their exact requirements.

The Canadian War Contingent Association, which has been formed here to further the interests of our force in every way has among its objects the collection and distribution of field supplies. The Hon. Geo. Perley, M.P., is the President. It may be interesting to note that each colony has a War Contingent Association. The Canadian Association has elected us to their executive and has appointed us their distributing agents. In this way overlapping or wasted effort will be prevented.

We shall need vast quantities of comforts and also money for an emergency fund. The men already here still require things in large numbers. Whole regiments have no cholera belts, and many others are only partly supplied, with these and other warm necessities.

The English papers are full of appeals for comforts for the British Tommies, and it behooves us Canadian women to look after our own men. When once they are at the front there will be much replenishing to do, and it is proposed to have a distributing depot at the base, wherever that may be. We shall be at Salisbury Plain for the present and supplies will be received and acknowledged from there. Free transport is promised and arrangements are being made for a receiving and forwarding depot at Montreal as the November sailings are all from there. Notices as to this will appear shortly in the Canadian Press.

To give you some idea of how necessary they consider comforts over here I may say that the Queen has appealed for 300,000 belts and 300,000 socks, and Field Marshal Sir John French has made a special and urgent appeal for the immediate despatch of belts. The demand is so great that it is very hard to get these supplies here, and we fell also that Canadian industries should benefit by the supplies for Canadians. We beg therefore that you will come to our aid and make this work the big and complete thing it should be. We shall be pelased to give any further information desired. All packages should be clearly addressed to Miss Plummer, in care of Montreal Depot, and very plainly marked "Field Comforts." All money should be sent to Miss Arnoldi, "Field Comforts Fund," 69 Grosvenor Street, London, W.

Money for Emergency Fund $50,000.

Socks—we cannot have enough; the more hand-knit the better. (These are the first and most important needs).

Handkerchiefs, colored, khaki preferred.

Sleeping caps.

Mufflers.

Wristlets.

Underwear.

Flannel Shirts.

All outside articles of clothing should be khaki or grey in color.

In sending large quantities it is strongly recommended that they be put in cotton bags of 50 or 100 and packed in small packing cases. A complete list of contents with name and address of sender securely fastened inside the box.

We hope very much to have your support in this work and we shall anxiously await your answer as to how you can help us.

Yours sincerely,
MARY PLUMMER.

Pipes, cigarettes and other Xmas presents will be very welcome.

Which is Your Class?

Just Three Classes of Canadians During Coming Months

There will be just three classes of Canadians during the coming months.

First—and all honor to them—those who serve the Dominion and the Emprie on the firing-line.

Second, those who through conditions directly traceable to war or otherwise, will not themselves be able to obtain fully the necessaries and decencies of life.

Third, those of us at home who ARE so able.

And among the last—and vastly larger class—there is not an individual of us upon whom the duty does not rest of making some sacrifice for the other fellow, and more particularly for the other fellow's mother, wife or child.

Through the Canadian Patriotic Fund and through regular channels of organized relief, opportunities for fulfilling this duty are given to everyone.

In addition to these, chances for good, old-fashioned, personal neighborliness are going to be more frequent this year than for many a long day.

Be on the look-out for them—"Canadian Finance."

DEATH ROLL

The death occurred this morning of Mrs. Sarah McDavitt. Deceased was in her 96th year. She was born in Foxboro and lived the greater part of her life in Thurlow. She was the wife of the late Wm. McDavitt and is survived by two daughters, Miss Ida McDavitt and Mrs. Mary Hudgins and one son, Chas. McDavitt.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. W. A. Hall and Mrs. S. M. Gilbert of the second line of Thurlow, have returned home from Toronto, where they have had a very pleasant time at the home of Mrs. Hall's daughter, Mrs. C. B. M. Allen.

Major Lumb of Brockville, was in town yesterday afternoon and informed The Intelligencer that he had passed the medical examination at Kingston. He expects to sail en-route to England to join his regiment on the 28th inst., per S.S. Alaunia. Mrs. Lumb will accompany the major and enter into Red Cross work with Lady Lumb in England.

FIGHTING ALONG MEUSE

French Advance Results in the Clearing of Left Bank

Germans Hold Only One Position on Allies' Side of River and That Has Been Partially Occupied—Operations Are Reported Between Bixschoote and Armentieres But Artillery Duels Are Order of Day.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The feature of the bulletin issued yesterday afternoon by the French War Office, is the report that the Germans have been driven from strongholds long held by them along the River Meuse, which stream they crossed shortly after the war on their dash to Paris. The French troops near St. Mihiel, have taken possession of the outskirts of the Village Chauvancour, the only point remaining in German hands on the left bank of the Meuse. The successes of the French forces, as given in the bulletin, indicate renewed activity by this section of the French line.

The correspondent of The Times in Flanders telegraphs that the Germans have completely evacuated the left bank of the Yser Canal and that the floods are seriously jeopardizing the Germans' position at Dixmude. The French are nominally holding the south end of the town of Dixmude and the Germans the north side. There is much hand-to-hand fighting.

"Recent days have been entirely favorable," the allies' correspondent says, "and it may be taken as certain that the retreat of the enemy is simply a question of time. Between our forces and the enemy, the whole way from Nieuport to Dixmude, there is a protective sheet of water and all hopes of a German advance have been frustrated."

The country between Bixschoote and Armentieres and the heights of the Meuse appear to be the centres of activity, but elsewhere the combat is confined to artillery duels. Severe losses were inflicted on the invaders in western Belgium and north of the River Aisne and in the Argonne forest district in France. Along the centre of the battle line on the Aisne, near Soissons, there have been some sharp infantry engagements resulting in slight gains for the allies. In the Argonne the French have succeeded in mining and blowing up some of the Greman trenches.

A detachment of Germans was killed when French mines blew up their trenches. Entire detachments, which tried to capture French fortifications near Vailly, were destroyed by artillery fire. The Germans have been washed out of their trenches at many points in the flooded section about Dixmude. Many have been drowned. commands, separated by the waters have been wiped out by the allied artillery fire. The Kaiser's soldiers made desperate efforts to gain control of the canal dykes, but each assault was repulsed.

An extended movement of troops or guns is now virtually impossible in Eastern Belgium. The trenches occupied by the Germans are half filled with water and in many places the Franco-British are in water up to their knees, but bravely hold their positions in the face of heavy German artillery fire. On account of the danger of electrocution to their own men, both the Germans and the allies have shut off the electric current with which the wire entanglements before the trenches were charged. Numerous fatalities have resulted from the water rising above the entanglements, greatly increasing the deadly power in the charged wires.

It is reported that many thousands of soldiers from the western battle field are passing through Cologne en route to East Prussia. Eight thousand infantry have arrived at Aix-la-Chapelle and are proceeding in the direction of Brussels. From Thielt, two of the big German 40 centimeter guns have passed through Aix-la-Chapelle on their way to Dixmude.

A correspondent in Dunkirk telegraphs that the German losses during the last four days of fighting in western Belgium are estimated at 100,000. The casualties in the allied ranks were heavy, but favorable progress was made. There is no question that the German forces who have made their repeated attacks in the Dixmude-Ypres are utterly exhausted. Beyond doubt their losses have been staggering.

ADVICE TO IRELAND.

Irishmen Must Help or Say Good-bye to Home Rule Says Nationalist.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—"We have got either to bid good-bye to Home Rule or help England honestly in this war," said Wm. O'Brien, member of the House of Commons from Cork, and leader of the Independent Nationalists, in writing yesterday a reply to constituents who had protested against the suggestion of conscription.

Irishmen, he said, were being cruelly led astray and their attitude towards the Government was "inexplicable."

This, he continued, "was furnishing to certain English politicians their only excuse for deserting the cause of Home Rule.

"Pat" Yeomans Writes Home From Camp

Salisbury Plains, Oct 31, 1914.

Dear Mamma.—It is still raining some and has been for the last two days. The couple of days before that were beautiful, but all the time before that it rained, rained, rained.

The horse lines are in an awful condition—mud ankle deep. Imagine tying and untying heel and head ropes in that slime and walking around grooming the poor horses.

My horse has been changed again; and the one I have now is about the best horse in the battery, I think. (There are one or two other better horses than mine, but they belong to the officers.) It is very affectionate and sensible, and is called "Mouse", because of its color. Yesterday the battery were galloping out to action when one of the men dropped his hat. I nearly went over it, so I rode back, dismounted, picked up the hat and started to catch up to the battery, which, of course, had gone on. That horse just laid his ears back and flew. Why, I caught up to the battery in such short time that nobody thought I had left it.

This is Hallowe'en night, and I have whistled all the music I could think of from "Concordea", because they are to play it at the Armouries at home (or at least part of it. The whole thing was as good as a concert to me, and I could almost imagine I was there.

I have put in my application for leave for three days, and so will likely be in London in a few days' time. Ted put his in at the same time, of course, and we are going to put up at the Central Y.M.C.A. if possible. We were talking to Lieut. Graham in the Y.M.C.A. work here, and he told us to go there and tell them he sent us, and they would probably put us up for a couple of nights.

I think the first thing we will do will be to take a sight-seeing trip and buy a map of London. Then we will be able to get some idea of the place. However, we can arranged that when we get there. The fare from London and return is 7/3, not too bad for eighty-five miles. We will have lots to tell you when we get back.

We got your leaves all right. Thanks very much. They arrived in good shape, just as you sent them. It certainly is good to see a maple leaf again. It isn't until a person gets somewhere like this that he realizes how much he thinks of such things. We were not the only ones either, for everybody wanted some of them.

We were inspected yesterday by the Imperial Director of Artillery. He is a big chap, with brown eyes and moustache. His eyes appeared to me very sharp. He thought the whole Artillery Contingent to be in pretty good condition. I was quite close to him as he inspected every gun and limber.

There is one way in which I think Valcartier is much ahead of this place. There is not a place in the camp where we can get a swim or a bath of any king, (unless we want to strip and wash ourselves at the tap), and that is decidedly unpleasant in the cold wind and mud and rain, to say the least of it. The have not any kind of facility for washing except the one pipe-tap to each battery.

There is no sign yet of our going to the front. They are putting up shacks here, and, from all I can see, are making preparations for our staying here some time. There are all kinds of rumors flying around about our going to Turkey and South Africa and Egypt, but, of course, there is nothing official.

From now on I don't think I will get much time to write, but will write as often as I can, you may be sure. We do not have a half-second to ourselves as it is.

The whole signalling staff has been equipped with field telephones, and that just suits me; for the others don't know much about it. I have had the whole outfit to get running.

Well, I have no more time now. So good-bye, and love to all.

PAT.

GILEAD

Owing to bad weather there was no service in the Methodist Church on Sunday.

Mr. McInnes of Kingston preached in St. Andrew's Church.

Mr. W. G. Huffman returned on Saturday from a week's hunting in the northern part of the County. Game does not seem to have been very plentiful.

Mr. Jas. Balcanquel is spending a few weeks with his daughter, Mrs. W. Snider in Belleville.

Miss Cole of Big Island arrived on Saturday for a month's visit with her cousin, Miss Huffman.

The W. M. S. of Gilead had a sewing-bee at the home of Mrs. A. Lawrence on Wednesday last and, completed their sewing preparatory to packing their box of clothing to be distributed among the poor. A number of the ladies have also been knitting for the soldiers, who go with the next contingent.

Gilead Sunday School have decided to hold their annual Christmas entertainment on Dec. 23rd.

Mr. E. Carter has purchased Mr. Walter Embury's farm, near Thomasburg and will be moving soon.

Mr. Robertson of Belleville Creamery made some calls on his patrons here last week.

FOURTH CON. AMELIASBURG

The husking bee at Mr. Wm. Reddick's on Wednesday evening last was well attended. The two barns were well filled with men, and after husking about two hundred bushels of corn all retired to the house where a fitting lunch was served. The fair sex was also well represented.

The question of how to spend the long winter evenings so soon upon us, was solved when Mr. and Mrs. Roy Vancott, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dolan, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Parliament met on Wednesday evening, the 11th inst., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Brown, where after doing justice to a tastefully prepared supper they formed a progressive pedro club known as the "Jolly Eight," consisting of the host and hostess and visiting friends.

After appointing Mrs. Brown president and Roy Parliament secretary-treasurer, the club decided to hold weekly meetings at homes of those interested and to give prizes to winners at the end of the season. When the business of the meeting was finished a very enjoyable series of five games were played, Mrs. Roy Vancott being the winner, who was presented by the hostess with a cut glass fruit dish. Mrs. Chas. Dolan, being the lowest winner, was also presented with a handkerchief. After short discussions the club disbursed, to meet again on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Parliament.

A number of our young folks attended the house warming at Mr. Elgin Belyou's on Friday night, and though the weather looked very unfavorable a good crowd assembled and all report an A1 time.

BIG ISLAND

Mrs. I. Mills, Northport is spending a few days in this vicinity.

Miss Pearl McBride of Belleville is visiting at Mrs. J. S. Wardner's this week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Wager spent Wednesday evening with Mr. J. N. Kerr and family.

S. D. Kerr and his sister Mary spent the week end in Milford.

How to Properly Address Mail so Men Will Get it Promptly

There is now a big pile of mail lying in the orderly room at the armories that the owners should have had a day or so ago. This is no fault of the staff handling of the mail but of the absence of complete addresses on the parcels. They are nearly all addressed to John Jones, "21st battalion," with no company data on them. This is so common that the staff finds it impossible to sort or make a pretence of quick delivery to the persons addressed. In the usual case, the company is mentioned, and the parcel is then put into a large box containing that company's mail. A collector then distributes it to the company officer. If the parcel is only partly addressed, it has to be thrown in a pile and await sorting. The soldier doing this has to look over the roll and place the parcel into the proper box. If this oversight is not remedied, several soldiers will receive Christmas mail much too late to be valued as a gift. The rule that all parcels must be marked with the number of the addressed person's company came out in militia orders some time ago, but the mistake is still being made. The address to be complete should have the number of the company, or if the man is in the depot staff, signalling section or machine gun section that should be stated. Great quantities of mail come daily to the thousand odd men in the battalion. The great bulk is papers from home.

Lieut.-Col. E. W. Rathbun, on Monday, returned to Deseronto. He has been in charge of the new overseas artillery battery being formed here. Capt. C. P. Fee, C.F.A., assumes temporary command of the battery and, therefore, severs his connections with the 21st battalion.

Capt. I. C. E. Beroard, A.M.C., has been detained as medical officer to the two companies of the Canadian Engineers and the Signalling corps attached to the Engineers. The two companies of the Engineers referred to are the overseas volunteers and the home service men.

This is one of the incidents in connection with the minister of militia's late visit to the city: Walking along the lines in one of the squads of men he stopped before an officer and inquired his name. The answer was given and the general immediately gave him a severe lecture for being drunk in Ottawa a short time ago. He threatened the officer with instant discharge if the thing came to his notice again.

Sergt.-Major-Inst. of Musketry Edwards, W. O., is daily conducting lessons in musketry in the armories. The .22 Ross rifle is being used for the instructing of the men in trigger pulling and aiming. The ammunition used is inexpensive and the men are given a thorough grounding in these things before being given more advanced instruction.

Practically all of the officers and men have been inoculated against typhoid and are now in condition and taking the regular drills. The final inoculating was at three o'clock on Tuesday when a few of those not inoculated were attended to by the medical officers. The men will also be vaccinated before being taken overseas. This will be against smallpox.

The machine gun section is now up to strength. It is expected that in the near future a machine gun will arrive that can be used for instruction. There are nineteen men in the machine gun section.

The ambulance part of the 21st battalion is now as extensive as it was expected to be. Only two stretcher-bearers accompany each company. The Scotch band of the 42nd regiment from Renfrew will be taken overseas. These men were organied by George Carruth and the instruments were purchased by public spirited citizens. The men will act as stretcher-bearers when on the field.

LITTLE KINGSTON

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Calnan of Victoria spent a recent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Murphy.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Murphy and Mrs. Lewis Murphy spent Wednesday at Hillier guests of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Tripp.

Mr. Samuel McLean of, Trenton spent a few days with his sister, Mrs. Angeline Murphy.

Several from here attended a party at Mr. Horace Calnan's, one evening last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Murphy spent Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Mac. France, Melville.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kemp of the 5th Concession, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. David May spent Saturday in Trenton.

Canadian volunteers will be particularly interested in the news that General Cronje, who surrendered at Paardeburg, at which fight they took a leading part, is in command of the loyal South African forces against General De Wet.

SERIOUS NAVAL LOSS

The British Government hitherto has apparently made little effort to conceal its disasters, such as the loss of the Aboukir, the Cressy and the Hogue, says the Buffalo Express. For that reason there will be some disposition among British sympathizers, at least, to doubt the story of the loss two weeks ago of the super-dreadnought Audacious, pending official confirmation. The story, however, comes on authority which, to news-judging minds, is rather more trustworthy than the average government statement in these days. Nevertheless the report is not more direct or positive than were the stories early in the war about the bringing of a large force of Russian troops from Archangel through Great Britain to fight in the north of France. Those statements were published on the authority of persons who claimed actually to have seen the Russian troops in England, and there can be no doubt that they fully believed what they said. But events have demonstrated that no Russians were sent into France.

The account of the wreck of the Audacious, however, is inherently more probable than was the story about the Russian troops. It is known that the Germans had been able in some manner to scatter mines off the Irish coast. It is known that a super-dreadnought or any other type of ship must be wrecked if she struck such a mine. The only improbable thing about the story is the presence of such a ship as the Audacious off the north coast of Ireland. The proper place for all British line ships of the home squadron at this time is in the North Sea, or in the harbors thereof, since it is known that all the German line ships are in the German harbors of the North Sea. Great Britain has plenty of cruisers and torpedo craft to do the work of protecting the North Atlantic commerce, and sending the Audacious on such service would have weakened the British battle line in the event of the German fleet coming out.

In the Russo-German war, the Japanese lost two first-class battleships as a result of striking mines. One of these losses was kept from the world till after the battle of the Sea of Japan. There was good reason for this, however, for the loss of these two ships reduced the strength of the Japanese fleet below that of the Russians. Rojesventsky was actually defeated by an inferior squadron. It can be only a false pride or the fear of a political attack on the admiralty which leads the British government to conceal the news of the loss of the Audacious, for Great Britain has still 22 ships, at least, of the super-dreadnought type, and it is probable that two or three more may have been completed, while Germany probably has not more than 23 of these line ships. Consequently it would rather be for Great Britain's advantage to publish than to conceal the news of the loss of a dreadnought, since it is for the British interest to have the German fleet come out and fight as soon as possible. Except for the moral depression among the British public which it would cause, it might be good strategy to cause the report to be spread that several dreadnoughts have been wrecked by mines for the purpose of tempting the Germans to come out. But the British naval administration already has suffered considerable criticism and it probably dreads a popular outburst if it should admit the loss of such a ship as the Audacious, particularly in so surprising a place as the north coast of Ireland.

LORD ROBERTS

The death of Lord Roberts, which came with startling suddenness on Saturday, leaves a gap in the British Empire which will be hard to fill. "Bobs," as he was known to millions of Britishers, throughout the world, held an unusually warm place in the affections of the people. There was universal satisfaction expressed over the fact that while he was unable to go to the front in the present great struggle his advices and counsel were available. During the three months of the war he has been in constant touch with the British War Office, where his lengthy experience, his ripe judgment and sound counsel were of the utmost value.

Lord Roberts was born at Cawnpore, India, in 1832. He was the son of the soldier, and has spent his entire life as a soldier in the service of his country. His experience in a score of wars has made his name a household world throughout the Empire. It is tragic that Lord Roberts should have died in the midst of a struggle with the great German Empire, against whose encroachments he endeavored to rouse the British people, and have them adopt conscription. "Bobs" died as he lived—on the firing line within sound of the big guns.—Journal of Commerce.

THE MONEY COST

It is estimated that the war in Europe is costing $40,000,000 every day. Of this amount Great Britain is said to be spending $5,000,000; France and Germany about $7,00,000 each, and Russia not less than $14,000,000. On this basis the cost for a single year to Great Britain would be $1,825,000,000 and to France over $2,500,000,000. Under peace conditions the annual expenditure of Great Britain in 1913 was about $925,000,000. Thus the war expense of the British Government is double that of its peace administrative expense. Consequently the British people must be spending about three times the amount which their governmental organization cost them in peace times.

In France last year the estimated expense is almost the same—about $975,000,000. The per capita cost of war in France is about 17 cents per day, or five dollars a month. This is to be added to the 6 1-2 cents per day, the former cost to run the French Government in peace times.—New York Commercial.

GERMAM PRESS ON ENGLISH JOURNALISM

The German Press has not a very exalted opinion of English journalism, nor of Englishmen generally. Here is a speciman, taken from the columns of the Vossiche Zeitung. Speaking of the English Press it says:—

"Really what passes in London for excellent journalism, as dished up daily by the most responsible organs of public opinion, would be hooted and hissed out of existence by the veriest lout in a German rural village. But, after all, the British papers know their audience; they are obliged to write down to the level of their intelligence—such intelligence as one may reasonably expect to find among a people which wages war by means of a hireling army and with methods which would not discredit a comic opera of the old school; a people which in these days of strife, on the very eve of its doom, seeks and finds in its newspapers column-long articles about horse racing and football."

Not to be outdone in vituperation and slander, the Kolnische Zeitung says:—

"John Bull, as is his wont, is making capital out of the open-handedness of the French. He eats to repletion of the products of the French soil, and rubs his chest in smug contentment, not caring one iota about the hunger and misery which he is well aware is prevailing in all the French ports from Dunkirk to St. Malo.

"The French enthusiasm for the British, as may be imagined, is now a thing of the past. The feeling that is now inspired by these beefy gluttons, these bragging, voracious swash-bucklers, is one of constantly growing disgust and aversion. Indeed, on several occasions French soldiers have refused to travel in the same railway compartment with the mercenaries from Albion because of their filthy habits and unclean condition."

This is the choice literature that is dished up for the palate of German readers to inflame their appetites for vengeance against the foe they most dread.

Buffalo News:—"Lord Kitchener makes public announcement that he is bringing troops from even the antipodes to battle in Europe. The war does tip up the earth itself."

In consequence of the heavy week-end rains, says the Rotterdam correspondent of the Star, it is rumored that a big force of Germans around Dixmude has been cut off by floods.

One dollar is the sum charged for calling anybody a German in Toronto, as Reggie Webster found to his cost when he appeared in the police court the other day. Reggie had so far forgotten himself as to call a woman a German on the street. Magistrate Ellis fined him a dollar. The man paid.

IS HE COMING THIS WAY?

It is said that W. Graham, son of the Hon. George Graham, has been in Kingston and district lately, telling the Liberals to prepare for a general election in the spring.

Young Mr. Graham was, it is said, recently appointed one of the Liberal organizers and is very anxious to make a showing.

A despatch from Petrograd to the London Times says "Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, has overridden the decision of the Council of Ministers favoring the sale of beer and light wines and has now ordered that wherever martial law prevails the sale of alcoholic drinks of any kind shall be forbidden. This decision was taken because drinking among officers quartered at remote places had not ceased."

Toronto News: "The Toronto Star says: 'The ships that were planned under the Laurier naval policy would have been completed in 1914, in time to take part in the present war.' Then, why did not the Laurier Government order the cruisers when the tenders were submitted on May 1st, instead of going out of office six months later without taking action? The Star also says: 'The dreadnoughts which were proposed under the policy which was substituted for the Laurier policy would not have been completed until 1916.' The Globe admitted the other day that a British Dreadnought laid down in 1911 was completed this autumn." Yes, News, but you forget that the Globe when it made its statement was not defending the Laurier policy; hence it could afford to be correct in its statement.

Decision will be made in a few days by Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, Postmaster General, as to the exclusion from the Canadian mails of certain American publications on account of pro-German sentiments. Some pressure has even been bought to bear on the Government to exclude such publications as the Literary Digest, Review of Reviews and Saturday Evening Post. It is safe to say that the Government is extremely unlikely to take action against these magazines. Four German-American papers have already been excluded from the mails, and it is likely several other German papers—very anti-British in character—will be prohibited. It is pointed out that it is absurd to exclude papers which merely state fairly the German view of the situation, and the only papers which should be barred the mails are those so anti-British in tone that they are likely to inflame those of German and Austrian nationality in Canada.

HEARING IS RESTORED TO DEAF

Without Mechanical or Artificial Hearing Devices. Deaf hear With Their Own Ears. A Wonderful English Discovery.

Thousands of people suffer from catarrhal deafness or poor hearing, who having tried specialists, advertised treatments, artificial ear drums, ear phones, electric vibrators and various mechanical appliances without success have at last resigned themselves to a "world of silence thinking that nothing can ever restore to them their normal hearing. Yet their case is not hopeless. A remarkable scientific treatment discovered a little more than a year ago in England is making people hear after years of deafness and is also unequalled for quickly stopping the distressing head noises that are so often the companions of defective hearing. This discovery is called Parmint and has attracted widespread interest throughout Europe where reports of the remarkable results it has given to deaf people have come in by the hundred.

The effect of Parmint it seems is by tonic action to reduce all inflammation, swelling, enlargement or thickening of the organs of hearing and to stimulate the entire auditory tract.

Parmint is now being sold by many leading druggists in Belleville and vicinity and a speedy trial is urged upon all who suffer from catarrhal deafness or headnoises in any degree. Ask the druggist for 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength) and take it home and mix with ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day and you should soon find a remarkable improvement in your hearing.

Important.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St. Montreal, P.Q., who make a speciality of it.

Charge Raising Cheque to $3,500

Detectives Arrest Man They Allege Convicted Woman Tried to Shield

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—Adolphe Charron, who members of the Thiel Detective Service had been shadowing for months, was taken into custody on Saturday. He is wanted on a charge of having raised an accepted cheque for $1.15 on the Bank of Hochelaga to $3,500, which was cashed for the larger amount at Varennes. Charron was arraigned Saturday morning before Judge Lanctot by Superintendent Garand, of the Thiel Detective Service. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was locked up without bail pending the enquete in the case, which was fixed for today.

According to Superintendent Garand, Evelyn Thibeault, alias Alice Canton, alias Mrs. Chadburn, who was sentenced a few months ago by Judge Choquet to three years in the Kingston penitentiary for having passed a raised cheque on the branch of the Merchants' Bank of Canada of Vaudreuil, was connected with Charron. When the young woman was found guilty, Judge Choquet offered to allow her to go on suspended sentence if she would tell who was behind her in passing forged and raised cheque. His Honor was satisfied, he told her, when she appeared for sentence, that she was only being used as a cat's paw to cover the operations of others.

Sent To The Penitentiary

The men who had been working on the case for the Thiel Detective Service knew the men who were behind the deal, but they lacked the evidence that would have secured their conviction had they taken them into custody. They knew also that Mrs. Chadburn could supply the evidence they needed, by simply mentioning the name of the man who had given her the cheque, but she chose to go to the penitentiary for three years rather than reveal the name of the man she was shielding. She claimed that she did not know him, but as Judge Choquet was convinced that she was not telling the truth, he told her so, when he sent her to the penitentiary at Kingston, where she is now serving her sentence.

The evidence that finally enabled the detective to take Charron into custody is said to have been secured through the arrest of three men who are now behind the bars and who were connected with the counterfeiting gang that were rounded up at Lavaltrie some months ago. They may be called to give evidence.

The cheque that was presented by Mrs. Chadburn at the branch of the Bank of Hochelaga at Varennes was signed by Adolphe Charron. He had an account at the Bank of Hochelaga here for $1.50, and the cheque had been made out for $1.15, for which it had been accepted. It was afterwards raised to $3,500 and cashed for that amount at Varennes.

RUSSIA NOT FORGOTTEN

Germany Had Prepared for Invasion Ten Years Ago

PETROGRAD, Nov. 17.—From a report by General Rennenkampf on his dash to Konigsberg at the opening of the Russian campaign in order to block the Germans from a swoop upon Paris, it is established that the German preparations for possible war with Russia were just as numerous and thorough as those they made for the invasion of Belgium and France.

The report says that throughout all the border regions of Eastern Prussia there is not a building, not even a peasant's hut, that has not the side facing Russia constructed of solid masonry as a cover for rifle pits. Moreover, this wall sometimes has rifle holes. In the same way the basement is so arranged that the basement could be transformed almost instantly into first class trenches. All the villages have innocent looking earth-works at suitable points which are nothing less than fortifications on an organised scale, while at regular intervals throughout the country side irrigation canals have been built to serve as trenches.

Every locality has a perfectly organized system of underground telephones and telegraph. All this has been standing for at least ten years back.

Attacked by A Bear

Finally Shot the Animal After a Lively Encounter—The Bear Succumbed to a Shot

KINGSTON, Nov. 17.—Many of the deer hunters returned home on Friday. A reporter gathered from some of them thrilling stories. On one occasion Michael Amodeo, a member of one of the local parties, almost lost his life by coming into contact with a huge black bear. The party with which this well-known Italian fruit man was a member, left the city twelve days ago, and after being four days on the hunt, this experience befell Mr. Amodeo. The other members were further ahead in the woods and the Italian encountered the animal. The first thing that drew his attention to the danger that confronted him was the cracking of the bushes not far distant.

Mr. Amodeo leveleld his rifle, and, to his astonishment, he saw the black bear emerge and start straight towards him. He shot and grazed the animal's head, which only infuriated the beast. Being then at too close range to shoot, the hunter struck the bear a blow over the head with the butt end of his rifle. This was not sufficient to stem the animal and a lively encounter followed, the man and the animal dodging from tree to tree. At last Mr. Amodeo gained a tree with a large trunk. He poised himself with a deliberate aim and pulled the trigger. The bullet passed through the bear's head and it fell to the ground. Some time afterwards the other members of the party returned and were startled to see Mr. Amodeo skinning the bear.

BOY FIGHTERS TAKEN

Many of Them Captured are Sobbing Like Women

A TOWN IN FRANCE, Nov. 17.—In spite of the desperate efforts that the Germans are making to break through the allied lines the signs are not wanting that the Germans are, to use the expression of an officer, "cracking up a bit."

Boys of 15 and 16 years are being taken prisoners, and at a town in France where several hundred prisoners of war were located for a day or two many of these youths were seen sobbing like women.

From an intercepted wireless message it seems that the German ammunition is running short, and there are other indications that when the present furious effort has spent itself a general advance of the allied forces will result.

The British officers and men exhibit indifference to the German shells. An officers who has been to the fighting line and back describes his journey thus:—

"All the way the wounded men were coming back, hit in every way. Some were walking slowly; some were being helped along. There was a terrific noise going on. Our guns and some of the French were shooting hard, and the infantry and machine guns were making a fearful racket, but that was a detail. What made the noise was the big German shells falling everywhere except in the right place. While I was there I don't think they touched a feather.

"I saw two or three "Black Marias" drop among a lot of teams and wagons, which hastily moved on, but the shells were on the wrong side of the hedge. They come in fours, and these quarters are being impartially dumped about, but none fell on the road where our party was.

"The exciting thing was having the great things whizzing along and wondering where the next explosion would be. They all detonated with a terrific crash, but the ground being soft from the rain, there were no splinters about, and so there was really not much danger.

"I thought the country very much like Essex. It is a bad country for a battle, as one cannot see anything for the trees and woods. Then we reached ——, and they shelled that with shrapnel, which accomplished nothing.

"The road was an amazing sight, just like the Epsom Road on Derby Day. The sides were lined with Belgians, partly to see the fun and partly as they had nothing to do or nowhere to go."

ABOUT CONSUMPTION

Every day we are receiving letters from users of this medicine telling us of the benefit they have had by its use.

Mrs. Martyn, of 46 Garden Avenue, Toronto, who before taking "Copeland's Cure for Consumption" had been treated by different doctors for several years without benefit, writes to say:

Mr. Copeland:

Dear Sir,—After taking several bottles of your Consumption Cure, I would like to make known to others the benefit I derived from its use.

I was very much run down when I commenced taking your medicine, but now I have fully recovered, and in four months have gained 17 pounds. I cannot speak too highly of it, and will be pleased to recommend it to any who enquire as to its merits. You may publish this letter if you wish, and, if so, I trust that it will reach the eyes of some poor sufferers and save them from the dreadful disease of consumption.

Yours respectfully,
(Sgd.) MRS. MARTYN,
46 Garden Ave, Toronto.
Nov. 27, 1912.

That was written two years ago, since when Mrs. Martyn has enjoyed excellent health and has taken every opportunity to tell others what this medicine did for her.

Records are on file of some extreme cases of consumption, one of which, now a well-known case of a man given up as hopeless by his doctor and a specialist, who said that he could not live more than 8 or 10 days. To-day he is alive and well and it was "Copeland's Cure for Consumption" that pulled him through.

Letters have been received and are on file from individuals who have suffered from chronic bronchitis for over 30 years and never obtained any permanent benefit until they took this medicine. These letters were written by well-known people and copies will gladly be sent to any person desiring to know what "Copeland's Cure for Consumption" can do for cases of chronic bronchitis.

Those suffering only from weakened lungs and throats to the "down and out" consumptive all testify to the benefit obtained by taking this medicine.

If you are one of these, don't allow another day to pass without getting a bottle to try. It cannot possibly do you harm, but will do you, as it has others, much good.

Sold at drug stores, $1.00 a bottle. Ask your druggist or sent direct in a plain wrapper by Copeland Medicine Company, Limited, 511 Pape Avenue, Toronto. 3-14

LITTLE BOY WEAK AND SICKLY

Mother Tells How Her Little Son Was Made a Strong, Healthy Boy by Vinol After a Severe Sickness.

New York City.—"About five years ago my little boy, then seven years old, was very ill with gastritis, then he contracted measles from the other children, pneumonia soon followed, and there seemed no hope of saving his life. However, we fought off the disease and he recovered, but was in a very weak and delicate condition.

"The doctor prescribed cod liver oil, but his little stomach swelled up like a drum, and the doctor said there was no cure for him. I decided to try Vinol, as I had used it myself with splendid results, and it seemed to agree with him. That bloated condition soon disappeared, and now he is a strong, healthy boy, thanks to Vinol."—Mrs. THOMAS FITZGERALD, 1090 Park Ave., New York City.

In all cases where the healing, curative, tissue building influence of cod liver oil, or the strength-creating, blood-making properties of tonic iron are needed, Vinol gives immediate benefit, for it is easily assimilated and acceptable to the weakest stomach, because it contains no oil or grease, and tastes delicious.

MUST GO BACK TO FRANCE

LONDON, Nov. 17.—After a long series of diplomatic negotiations, no word of which has ever appeared in the newspapers, Great Britain and France at last have settled the vexing problem of what to do with the thousands of French refugees who followed the Belgians to England from the zone of war. The exact number of fugitives from northern France within the last two months is known only to the British port authorities, but it approximates forty thousand.

Practically all the individuals of this mighty host have been sent back to their own country, which is quite able and eager to care for them. England was wholly unprepared for this influx and while funds for the relief of the Belgian refugees were plentiful, there were none for the French. The French Government would not provide money on a large scale for its citizens in England, insisting that there was no necessity for them to leave France. Nevertheless every Channel boat from Calais carried hundreds of panic-stricken peasants.

The situation became daily more acute until within the last few days the British and French Governments have completed an arrangement by which French fugitives landed at an English port are detained there until they can be shipped to Havre, where they are met and transferred to receiving depots in various parts of France.

BRITISH EXPECT LONG WAR

European Manager of Canadian Railway Says People are Prepared

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Scott Griffin European manager of the Canadian Northern Railroad company, who arrived last night from Liverpool on the Baltic, said that the people of England were prepared for a long struggle, and he expected that the income tax would go up to 3 shillings in the pound.

He said that the company's steamship Royal Edward had been chartered by the Government to care for 1,500 Germans and Austrians, who had been rounded up by the police. There were 25,000 aliens now in the concentration camps and more were being sent there every day.

T. R. McMechen, President of the Aeronautical Society, was another passenger on the Baltic. He said that he had large contracts for airships for the allied armies, but declined to give any particulars.

"The doctor has ordered quiet," she whispered, "and sleep—as much sleep as possible."

Merry rose and laid his hand on Wentworth's forehead. "You hear her orders, old man?" He laughed gaily. "It's no use running full tilt against the nursing profession. Each one of them thinks she knows it all! But I'm not going to say 'Good-by.' I mean to hang around here from dawn to dark and drop in every time I can sneak past her—or the doctor!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

A Moral Lesion.

Occasionally during Enoch's convalescence Dorcas found him listening to common noises about the house with a feverish anxiety which was half-terror.

"I don't know what he wants," said the nurse one day. "I wish I could find out. The doctor orders me not to bring up any subject that might disturb him. There's something on his mind, something that harasses him. Yesterday I stood on the stair speaking to Mrs. Volk and I left him asleep. When I went back he was leaning on his elbow and his eyes were fixed on the door as if he dreaded seeing some one come in. He asked who the woman was I had been talking to. His temperature had gone up. I wish I knew what he is worrying about."

"I think I understand," said Dorcas.

She returned to the sickroom carrying a bit of needlework. An eager smile came into her brother's eyes when she opened the door. He lay propped up with pillows. She sat down beside his bed. "Shall I read?" she asked.

"No; go on with your sewing. I like to see your hands fly with that bright silk between your fingers. Men have an idea that women are one-sided creatures. They are mistaken. You sew beautifully, and yet, while you stitch, I think of your 'Cordelia.'"

It was the first time since his accident that Wentworth had mentioned the theater or business of any sort. Dorcas began to trace out the pattern she was embroidering with the point of her needle. Her fingers trembled. She spoke without looking up.

"You haven't cared to hear about business, Enoch. There are some things you may want to know, since you are strong again. Mr. Oswald sailed for England a fortnight ago. He hated to go, leaving you before the critical point was passed, but the Strand Theater offered open time for August and it had to be attended to. He is rehearsing an English company now for 'The House.'"

"Didn't he want you for it?" asked Wentworth.

"Yes; but I should not have gone even if you had been well. He has given 'Cordelia' to Miss Embury, an English girl. He says she will play it beautifully. We are to open here on the twentieth of October. The whole company has been re-engaged. Mr. Oswald said he did not believe you would care to make any changes. There is only one new member—Helen Capron will play 'Mrs. Esterbrook.' Miss Paget went to London three weeks ago."

Dorcas did not raise her eyes while she spoke. The silk thread had knotted and she sat disentangling it with her needle.

"As soon as you are able to travel we are going to take you away somewhere. The city is hot."

Enoch stared out at the window. "Who is 'we'?" he questioned.

A wave of scarlet crept across the girl's face.

"Andrew Merry has offered to help care for you until you are quite strong again," she answered without raising her eyes.

There still were gray shadows in his face and wan hollows and wrinkles about his mouth. His hair had whitened at the temples. Physically the man had changed, but a new tranquility had begun to smooth away lines of worry and care in the colorless face.

"And begin life over again?" he asked.

"Yes," said the girl gently.

A pathetic eagerness came into his face; then it grew still with the gravity of a man who had almost touched hands with death. Into the wrinkles about his mouth crept the old dogged determination, tempered by a humility which Dorcas had never seen before. She flung her work aside, dropped on her knees, and drew her brother's face close against her own.

"Dorry," he said after a long silence, "when Andrew comes I want to see him alone."

"He is downstairs now," she answered.

"Send him up, won't you—and do you mind if he comes alone? Afterwards I want you."

The girl hesitated. "Of course. But do you think you are strong enough to visit much?"

"I spoke to the doctor this morning and he said talking would not hurt unless I got excited. Andrew isn't an exciting fellow."

"You're looking uncommonly well for a sick man," said Merry when he entered the room a few moments later.

"So do you, Boy!" Enoch's eyes crinkled with a smile. "You look happy—tremendously happy."

"Of course, I am tremendously happy. Why shouldn't I be tremendously happy? I never saw a more glorious day; I have you back, well and strong, the same stanch old friend you always were; I've signed a contract for next season in figures which would have given me dizzy spells five years ago, and—"

"And—" A pathetic eagerness came into Enoch's face.

"Why, bless my soul, isn't that enough to set the average human on transcendental stilts?"

"Andrew, you're half angel!" cried Wentworth. There was a quaver in his voice.

"Half angel, you ridiculous old muddle head!" Merry smiled in his engaging way. "There's no surplus of angel fiber in any man—angels are feminine." The comedian's eyes became grave for a moment. "Still, I might have been gadding about on wings today if it hadn't been for you. Your courage—"

"Courage!" Wentworth started as if he had been struck. "Andrew, never use that word about me again! It wasn't courage that made me snatch you from death. Oftentimes men who in cold blood are utter cowards leap forward and rescue some one from death. That isn't courage!" He paused, as if a word had escaped him. "It is blind, instinctive impulse—the natural impulse you find even in a savage."

"You're too weak yet to argue." Merry's voice was conclusive. "Only—one thing is certain," he turned his thumb toward the floor; "I am here instead of—there."

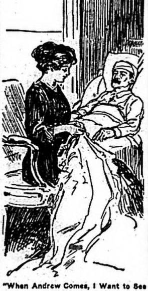
"Andrew," the sick man's face flushed, "take these." He pulled a bunch of small keys, threaded upon a steel ring, from under his pillow. "Won't you unlock the little drawer at the left of my desk and bring it to me?"

"Don't go in for any sort of work now, Enoch. Your duty at present is to lie there and get well."

"I want that drawer, now."

Merry stared at him for a moment, then he obeyed, and returned to the room with the drawer in his hand. "Do you think," the actor paused again and asked anxiously, "do you think that you are strong enough yet to attend to business?"

"This isn't business." Enoch's face grew peremptory. "I'm strong enough for this. I'm not a praying man, Andrew, but I lay in the dark last night thanking God that he had let me live long enough to—make restitution. I can't make full restitution. It seems to me as if I had been living on the brink of hell for half a lifetime. Let me come back," he pleaded, "back—so I can look decent people in the face again."



"When Andrew Comes, I Want to See Him Alone."

Merry did not speak. He sat watching Enoch's wasted fingers search through a mass of papers in the little drawer. He lifted out a bankbook and a yellow envelope, then he set the drawer aside and laid the leather-covered booklet upon Merry's knee.

"That is yours," he explained. "You will find there every cent of royalties from 'The House.' It was banked apart from my private account. It grew amazingly during the spring. You are a wealthy man."

Andrew opened it and glanced through the pages. He looked bewildered for a moment.

"Jehu! What can I do with so much money? I swear, Enoch, I don't care a picayune for being a wealthy man except—"

Wentworth did not answer. He was staring at a slip of paper he had drawn from the yellow envelope. "You remember this, Andrew?" he asked abruptly.

Camera Man in 26 Battles Tells His Experiences

With French, British and Germans Until Shell Shattered His Jaw

"PRINCESS" HELD HIM UP

Entrusted His Films With Her and She Demanded 1,000 Francs Before She Would Return Them

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Donald C. Thompson, staff photographer of the New York World, who has been in the Belgium war zone during the last few months, returned today on the New York for a week's stay. Several reasons compelled him to come back for a few days—one of the principal ones being the need of giving his injured face a chance to recover.

Mr. Thompson was dining in Dixmude two weeks ago with some German officers when a shell from the British fell in the party. He escaped with a nicked nose and a face that was badly cut by flying bits of shells, but four of the officers were killed or mortally wounded.

After a few days in a German field hospital he went on to London, where surgeons told him that he had better wait a few days before going back to the battlefront, where there would be danger of infecting the wound. He decided to improve the interval by coming home to his family. "For," as he phrased it, "when I go back on Saturday I am going to stay as long as the war lasts; and that may be one shell of a while."

In his steamer trunk and hand bags he brought with his sixty odd passes, permits and official O.K.'s, and a number of trophies and souvenirs, a medal from the Belgian war office and a mass of cheerful recollections of the twenty-six battles in which he has been engaged. When the war began he was sent to Paris, and when the Germans started through Belgium he managed to get out of Paris in a train full of American refugees which took him as far as Amiens.

He transplanted himself at two o'clock in the morning to a train of British ammunition that was going to the front, being helped to find lodgment among the ammunition cases by British soldiers who were so pleased at the honor of being photographed that they would do anything for him. When he got off in the grey of dawn at the last stop the train made, he had a busy five minutes explaining to British soldiers, but finally was allowed to go forward into the trenches.

"As soon as I got there," he said, "the Germans began to open up on us. For eighteen hours they pounded us with the biggest part of their artillery and I don't want to see anything hotter. You see, without knowing it, I walked right into the battle of Mons. Well, after a couple of days, I saw that the Germans were concentrating most of their fire on the British army, so I moved over to visit the French for a while. I had not been with the French very long, though, before I ran into a lieutenant who had arrested me in Paris. That was nothing out of the way for me, for I was arrested eight times while I was there, and spent nearly every night in jail, but this fellow remembered me and said I would have to be shipped back to Amiens."

Experience with a Princess.

At Amiens, Thompson was transferred to a train bound for England, with the polite intimation that he might find the country more healthy than France. The train was crowded, and he presently found it was more comfortable to get a seat in the compartment which had been reserved for a Russian woman. Who she was he did not know, but she was treated with the highest consideration and received ceremonial visits from officers at every stop. Just outside of Boulogne the train was halted, while a search was made of all alien passengers, and Mr. Thompson, realizing that the officials would doubtless confiscate his films begged the woman, who he felt sure would be immune, to hide them on her person.

It was quite a shock when the princess—he was sure by that time that she must have been a princess—demanded one thousand francs as the price for aiding him. Mr. Thompson paid her all the French money he had about 250 francs and then asked her if American bank notes would do the rest. She assented, and he took out a formidable roll of greenbacks and handed her a sum which was quite satisfactory.

He hid his films just in time, for he was seized by the soldiers, tumbled out on the station platform at Boulogne and stripped in full view of several hundred persons who were convinced that he was a German spy and pressed as closely around as they could to look for the cloven hoof. He was released, however, and was allowed to proceed to England on the same boat with the Russian princess, from whom he recovered his films at the earliest possible opportunity.

At Siege of Antwerp.

Thompson went from London to Antwerp and then on to the Belgian field army. He was at the front with another correspondent when the Belgian officers told him that they would have some good pictures that afternoon—they were going to storm the German entrenchments. Mr. Thompson was on hand with the camera, but the Belgians had overlooked a masked battery of German machine guns hidden in a country house on their flank.

Then came the siege of Antwerp. Mr. Thompson was in Waelhen, one of outposts, when the Germans bombarded it. The shelling started as he was dining with three Belgian officers on the ground floor of a house, in the upper storeys of which 80 Belgian soldiers were quartered. A shell hit the roof of the house and destroyed the upper part of the building.

"The ceiling went to pieces," he said, "and through the holes in it, dead bodies fell down on the dinner table. All that night they kept firing forty-two centimetre shells at the ports and waterworks and the town in between, and when about midnight I sat down on the curbstone and saw shells dropping all around I decided it was time to write a farewell note to my wife. But just as I had finished it a Belgian officer came along and said that he had found a boat in which we could get across the river.

Thompson followed the Germans on their march to the coast, and sat in a hotel on the Ostend waterfront while the British fleet was shelling the city, and finally progressed as far as Dixmude, where he was wounded by a British shell

BILLIONS ARE NEEDED

Britain Requires $2,500,000 by End of Fiscal Year.

Lloyd George Proposes to Pay Immense Expenditures of the War and Repair Deficiencies In Revenue By Taxes on Incomes, Tea and Beer — Unearned Incomes Will Pay About Double.

LONDON, Nov. 18. — Proposals by Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, to increase the revenue of Britain by $1,697,855 were approved by the House of Commons last night with an outburst of enthusiasm.

The measures adopted include doubling the income tax and the imposition of an extra duty of three pence per pound on tea and one-half penny on the half pint of beer.

In presenting his financial statement, he said that he was making proposals not merely to meet the increased expenditure up to the end of March next, but to meet also the deficiency in the revenue. The total sum for which provision had been made already was £535,000,000, covering ordinary and war expenditure. The additional money which had to be found was £339,571,000. A full year of the war would cost £450,000,000.

He proposed that the income tax should be doubled, but that this year it would only be collected in respect of one-third of income.

The tea duty, he said, would produce £950,000 this year and £3,200,000 next year. The beer duty would yield £2,000,000 this year and £17,000,000 in the year following. The new taxation this year would realize £15,500,000 and suspension of the sinking fund would give £2,750,000.

The additional income tax would amount to a shilling in the pound on earned and one shilling eight pence on unearned income. Next year, he said, the tax would be one shilling six pence and half a crown respectively, with the same rate for the super-tax. The amount collectable for the present year is £12,500,000 and next year £44,750,000.

COL. D. R. WILKIE DEAD.

President of the Imperial Bank Succumbs To Apoplexy.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—One of Canada's foremost bankers died yesterday in the person of Col. D. R. Wilkie. The news of the sudden death came as a great shock to his many friends and associates. Apoplexy was the cause. The statement given by the officials of the Imperial Bank, of which the late Mr. Wilkie was president, was: "Mr. Wilkie died at 11 o'clock at his house on Sherbourne street of apoplexy."

Two sons survive. They are both captains in the regular army—Arthur and Stewart.

The late colonel was born in Quebec on Dec. 17, 1846. He entered the service of the Quebec Bank in 1862, and was promoted to the position of accountant of the Montreal branch in 1867. The same year he went to St. Catharines as local manager. In 1872 he was promoted to Toronto as manager, and held this position until he was appointed cashier of the newly-organized Imperial Bank. At the time of his death Col. Wilkie was president of the Imperial Bank. Col. Wilkie was also active in artistic and literary movements.

CANADIANS FOR EGYPT?

Col. Shillington Writes That Contingent May Fight Turkey.

OTTAWA, Nov. 18. — Col. A. T. Shillington, Ottawa, who recently left Salisbury Plain to take charge of a field hospital in France, has written from the War Office to a friend here as follows:

"The War Office is considering the question of sending the Canadian contingent to Egypt since the Turks have thrown in their lot with the Germans. A Canadian contingent went with the Nile expedition in 1885 and they acquitted themselves most creditably. The climate also agreed well with them. Col. John Currie, M.P., of Toronto, has been called to the War Office for consultation and Col. Victor Williams and Col. Harry McLeod, M.P., of New Brunswick, are also being asked for their views and are in London to-day."

Condemned for Treason.

CHALONS-SUR-MARNE, Nov. 18. —A Frenchman, Alfred Durot by name, has been sentenced to death by court-martial for treason.

During the battle which raged around Rheims on Sept. 9, the French artillery operating near the village of Puiseulx was subjected to a terrific bombardment by the Germans, no matter how often they changed their position. A careful watch was kept and it was discovered that a mile in front of the French batteries a shepherd was feeding his flock, among which were five snow white goats.

FUNERAL OF LORD ROBERTS THURSDAY

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The funeral of Lord Roberts will be public and will be held at St. Paul's Thursday, it was announced yesterday.

It has also been decided that interment will also be at St. Paul's. Lady Robert declined the offer to have the remains interred in Westminster Abbey.

Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War; Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, and other Cabinet Ministers, as well as members of both Houses of Parliament, will attend the funeral services.

Lord Roberts will be given a public funeral of an elaborate military character.

Premier Asquith formally moved before the House of Commons yesterday the adoption of the resolution for the erection of a national monument to Lord Roberts. His tribute was offered to the late field marshal as the most illustrious British soldier."

The body of Lord Roberts arrived at Folkestone last night from Boulogne and was received by a large contingent of officers from the Shorncliffe camp, the Mayor of Folkestone and other officials.

The official press bureau gives a touching account of the funeral service for Field Marshal Lord Roberts at the headquarters of the British army in France.

"To the wail of 'Flowers o' the Forest,' from the pipers, the cortege moved slowly through double ranks of soldiers with arms reversed. General officers acted as pall-bearers. Those following the casket included representatives of the family of Lord Roberts and of King Albert and President Poincare, the Prince of Wales, Prince Arthur of Connaught and Gen. French.

"The simple funeral service was conducted by Chaplain Anderson of the British forces."

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Among the Russian prisoners captured by the Germans at the battle of Kutno were the Governor of Warsaw and his staff, according to a Berlin telegram.

A news agency despatch from Amsterdam says thousands of German soldiers from the western battle front are passing through Cologne en route to Koenigsburg and the East Prussian front.

It was officially announced at Christiania, Norway, yesterday that the disarmament of the German cruiser Berlin, which has put in at Trondhjem, a seaport of Norway, has been commenced.

The Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Baron Sonnino, has requested the Italian Ambassadors in the European capitals to come to Rome to confer with him regarding Italy's international policy.

The British cruiser Glasgow, which reached Rio Janeiro Monday after a trip from the Chilean coast, where on Nov. 1, she was damaged in an encounter with the German squadron, is to undergo repairs.

As a result of the fall of Kiao-Chau into the hands of the Anglo-Japanese forces, martial law now no longer prevails at Vladivostok. A telegram from there yesterday states that the decree of martial law has been cancelled.

The aeroplane has made its appearance in fighting in Southwest Africa for the first time. The British reported yesterday that the Germans are using an aeroplane for scouting purposes, and that it is flying over the British camp at intervals.

BIG FLANDERS BATTLE ENDS.

Second German Effort to Break Lines Has Failed.

BORDEAUX, Nov. 18. — (Via Paris.)—The bulletin of the armies of the republic thus sums up the military situation:

"The second battle in Flanders seems to be drawing to a close. At the present date, Nov. 17, after a fierce struggle lasting seven days, the German effort appears to be broken.

"It has been, as with the preceding attempts, a massacre of dense columns of infantry led to the assault by newly-appointed officers whose bravery does not compensate for inexperience. In the presence of such results it may be affirmed that the superior instruction and preparation of which the German infantry gave proof at the beginning of hostilities—qualities which greatly contributed to their successes in the month of August—have disappeared and that today, as far as direction and fighting, fire control and maintenance of contact between infantry and artillery are concerned, superiority has passed to our side."

Offers Howitzer Brigade.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 18.—Lt.-Col. A. B. Petrie of Guelph, offers to organize a howitzer brigade of three batteries, 536 officers and men all told, for overseas service. Ottawa has notified local headquarters that no action will be taken at present as the Imperial authorities have not yet asked for a howitzer brigade. In the event of acceptance the offer stipulates that the full equipment could be drawn from the Guelph howitzer corps.

May March on Belgrade.

VIENNA, Nov. 18.—It is reported that the German and Austrian armies are ready to resume the offensive. Valjevo and Obrenovac, captured by the Austrians, removing two big obstacles for the march on Belgrade, capital of Servia.

De Wet Wounded In Head.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—A Pretoria despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. states that Gen. Christian Rudolf De Wet, who headed the recent rebellion in the Orange Free State, and the Western Transvaal, has been wounded in the head. De Wet's followers are reported as much dejected.

It is said that they are poorly armed and lack ammunition.

He Specialised In River Plans.

QUEBEC, Nov. 18.—Hoffman, the alleged German spy, arrested some days ago by the Winnipeg police and in whose possession were found plans of the Hudson Bay Railway, worked in Quebec for a few months up to recently. He was on the draftsman's staff of the Harbor Commission.

It was soon learned that he had been a regular customer of a local photographic studio, where he had blue prints copied. It is said he paid particular attention to charts of the River St. Lawrence, of the harbor and of the various points along the route.

Believes Canopus Is Safe.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Reports that the British battleship Canopus had met with disaster were scouted by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in replying to questions put to him in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Churchill declared he believed the Canopus to be safe.

At the time of the recent British defeat off the Chilian coast many enquiries were made as to why the Canopus had not been with the Good Hope and Monmouth.

GERMANS USE DUM-DUMS.

British War Office Denies Allegations and Makes Counter Charge.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The War Office last night issued a statement denying German allegations that the British troops have used dum-dum or soft-nosed bullets, but maintaining that these kinds of missiles have been used by the Germans.

The statement describes the British and German ammunition as very similar, the bullets being pointed with steel and the envelope coated with cupro-nickel, covering the core, except at the base, and conforming with the provisions of The Hague conference.

In the opinion of Sir Victor Horsley, a well-known surgeon, this bullet is "probable the most humane projectile yet devised," for the reason that "the long, solid point, consisting almost entirely of a hard nickel sheath, precludes as far as possible, any tendency toward deformation of shape, while the strength of the sheath prevents the bullet breaking up into fragments, except in very exceptional circumstances."

The statement concludes: "There is, however, clear evidence that Germany has not confined herself solely to the use of this unobjectionable ammunition. Her troops in both Togoland and France, prove to have used bullets with soft core and envelope not entirely covering the core, which type of bullet is expanding and is expressly prohibited by The Hague."

GERMAN PRESTIGE DAMAGED.

London Is Amused at Waldeck's Reward for Losing Tsingtau.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The news that the Kaiser has decorated Meyer Waldeck, late Governor of Tsingtau, with the Iron Cross and praised the conduct of the defenders of the fort, is received here with amusement.

It is being pointed out that more than 5,000 able-bodied men surrendered while they still had plenty of ammunition and supplies.

Some critics declare that the surrender of Tsingtau was a worse case of "lying down" than Gen. Stoessel's surrender of Port Arthur in the Russo-Japanese war.

The Chinese express surprise that the Germans did not put up a better fight while defending the fort. It looks as though much damage had been done by this surrender, to the prestige of Germany in the far east.

Free Lance Squadron.

OTTAWA, Nov. 18. — Officials at the Militia Department, when asked about the 80 men connected with Elliot's Horse, a Winnipeg squadron reported to be stranded in London, said that nothing is known of the regiment officially. The first the Department heard of them was when they landed in Montreal. The men required a place to sleep there for the night prior to embarking for Great Britain, so the use of an armory was granted and beyond that Elliot's Horse is unknown to the militia officials here. Application was not even made for official recognition.

German Losses Are 549,247.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 18.—The official list of German casualties, as announced here, give a total of 549,247 killed, wounded and missing.

This list does not include the Bavarian, Saxon and Wurtemburg armies, the losses of which are estimated at more than 400,000 men.

Gen. von Blankensee Dead.

BERLIN, Nov. 18. — (Via The Hague to London.)—Major-Gen. von Blankensee died Nov. 14 of wounds received in action, according to a statement issued here yesterday.

ASSERTION IS DENIED.

No Footwear Orders Placed by British War Office Outside United Kingdom.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The War Office yesterday assured the High Commissioner's secretary that no orders for boots or shoes had been given outside the United Kingdom, which disposes of the assertion in Canada that such order had been extensively placed in the United States.

The War Office further said they were anxious to place such orders in Canada, whenever the opportunity offered. Ten thousand saddles were yesterday ordered by the Government through the High Commissioner. Orders also for clothing will probably follow.

The War Office has arranged for frequent interviews with Secretary Griffiths in relation to placing commissions for goods in Canada.

French War Office Announces Progress After Every Attack.

PARIS, Nov. 18. — The following bulletin was issued by the War Office last night:

"According to the latest advices, the enemy has renewed his attacks to the east and the south of Ypres, but they have not altered the situation. The impression is satisfactory.

"During the last two days we have registered progress more or less pronounced everywhere we have attacked; at Heias, on the Yser, between Armentieres and Arras; in the region of Vailly, in the Argonne, and on the heights of the Meuse."

The afternoon communique says:

"From Nieuport to Dixmude, and in the region of Ypres, cannonading has been resumed with greater violence than on the preceding days. On the canal to the south of Dixmude the action of our artillery checked the work that the Germans were endeavoring to carry out to keep down the inundations. The enemy was compelled to evacuate a portion of his trenches which had been filled by the waters.

"Two attacks of German infantry, one to the south of Bixschoote and the other to the south of Ypres, resulted in failure. On our side we have made progress between Bixschoote and the canal.

"Between Armentieres and La Bassen there has been an artillery duel conducted with great spirit.

"On the Aisne certain German detachments which endeavored to cross the river in the vicinity of Vailly were either driven back or destroyed.

"On our positions on the right bank of the Aisne, upstream from Vailly, there has been violent cannonading. This applies also to the Rheims region, and several shells have fallen on the City of Rheims.

"In the Argonne there have not been any infantry engagements. We blew up with mines a certain number of German trenches. On the heights of the Meuse, to the south of Verdun, we have made advances at several points.

"In the region of St. Mihiel we have taken possession of the first houses of the Village of Chauvoncourt. These houses served as barracks for the St. Mihiel garrison. This village of Chauvencourt is the only point of support still held by the Germans on the left bank of the River Meuse in this locality.

"On the rest of the front there has been nothing of importance to report."

Sifton Battery To the Front.

TORONTO, Nov. 18. — A Toronto chauffeur has received a letter from a member of the automobile corps forming part of the Sifton Machine Gun Battery, which was mailed twelve days ago from Salisbury Plain. The writer says that the Machine Gun Battery has received orders to prepare to go to the front with the Princess Patricia Regiment. It is probable that the battery and the Princess Patricia Regiment are in France and close to the battlefield by this time.

Prince Appointed Aide-de-Camp.

LONDON, Nov. 18. — It was officially announced in London yesterday afternoon that the Prince of Wales had been appointed aide-de-camp to Field Marshal Sir John French, the commander of the British expeditionary force on the continent.

A Satisfactory Store

Lowndes
Toronto

A sale epidemic has corrupted the Clothing Business. Coats, Suits and Trousers are marked double their worth and then reduced to half; If some advertisers were compelled to establish the truth of their statements, it would ruin them---since it would force them to be honest.

Honest Value!

The wonderful success of this business has been caused by giving honest value.

People buy at this store because they know they get value for their money here and are certain of satisfaction.

The success of a store Depends Upon What It Does, Not On What It Promises To Do.

DIED IN THURLOW

Mr. George Ayers passed away yesterday in the Township of Thurlow at the age of 80 years. Deceased was born n England and, when a young man came out to this country and made his home in this section of the county, where he had since resided. He was a widower and is survived by one son, who lives in England. A grandson, Wm. Ayres, resides at Trenton. The funeral today took place from Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment, after the burial services of the Anglican Church had taken place. Interment at Belleville Cemetery.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

At the home of Mrs. A. Abraham, Elmer Street, Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Ostrom, formerly of this city, who lately arrived here from Montreal, with members of the family yesterday celebrated the 39th anniversary of their wedding. Guests representing four generations of the family were present. It might be interesting to note that the affair took place in the same house Mr. and Mrs. Ostrom were united in marriage. Their many friends in this city will unite with The Intelligencer in congratulations.

GERMANS IN FORT DON'T LIKE TURKS

There are now just an even four hundred prisoners of war at Fort Henry, Kingston. As a result of the large number the guard has again increased, as it is just like guarding a village. It is understood that the Germans in the fort do not take very well to the Turks, who were recently brought here from Brantford. There has been no trouble between the two classes of prisoners, but from remarks passed by the Germans it is known that they do not like their war allies. However, they do not have to mix while at the fort. The Germans occupy the quarters in the upper part of the fort and the Turks the lower part. There has been no serious illness among the prisoners.

Notes From Melville

The solicitation on behalf of the unfortunate Belgians met with a hearty and liberal response from the residents of this locality. Over sixty barrels, containing potatoes, apples and grain, beside quantities of warm clothing formed the bulk of the donation. Several wagons were required to convey the goods to Hillier Station on Thursday, those assisting with wagons and teams being, W. H. Anderson, J. Kinnear, T. Kinnear, T. Turvey and W. H. Morton.

Several from this locality attended the County Epworth League Convention in Consecon on Thursday. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Farewell, Toronto, Rev. W. Harrison, Picton and Rev. E. Harston, Hallowell. Miss Cora Pettengill, Wellington, read an interesting paper on "What a League can do in a Twelvemonth," and Mrs. Fred Ackerman, Fairmount, gave an address on "The Difficulties of a Country League." The evening's vocalists were Rev. Mr. Archer, Wellington and Mr. Clayton Burr, Bloomfield.

The November meeting of Melville W. M. S., held at the home of Mrs. J. Cross, on Wednesday afternoon, and was conducted by the president, Mrs. J. Kinnear. During the afternoon, a solo by Mrs. C. H. French was much enjoyed. At the close, refreshments were served by the hostess.

Miss Lois Locklin, who is engaged as teacher in Trenton, spent the week-end at her home near Melville.

Mrs. J. H. Chase and Miss Gladys spent Tuesday at Mount Pleasant, the guest of Mrs. M. Johnson, and Mrs. Morris Huff.

Owing to the inconvenience caused by the extent and irregular boundaries of the circuits of Ameliasburg, Consecon, Rednersville and Hallowell a commission was oppointed to make any change deemed necessary in the boundaries of these circuits. This commission met at Consecon pasonage on Thursday, Nov. 12, Rev. H. S. Spence, M.A., B.D. in the chair. It was decided not to re-arrange Hallowell circuit, and regarding the others, the decision of the commission we be considered by the official boards of these circuits for approval or rejection. Mr. Jas. Locklin represented Melville on the commission.

Mr. William Davern motored to Picton on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ackerman, Fairmount, attended the Epworth League Convention in Consecon last week and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Anderson on Friday.

Mr. Percy Chase and Miss Annie spent the week-end in Picton and Bloomfield.

A number of our young people attended the dance at Mr. E. Belyon's, Ameliasburg on Friday evening.

Mr. Edgar Anderson, who has been suffering from a fractured leg, sustained in a motorcycle accident, near Hamilton, several weeks ago, returned home on Saturday, apparently recovered from the effects of the painful injury. His many friends will be pleased to hear of his recovery

Miss Lida Weeks, Treasurer and Corresponding Secretary of Melville W.M.S. will leave in the near future to spend the winter with relatives in Oregon. These offices, so capably managed by Miss Weeks, will be held during the absence by Mrs. G. Osborne and Mrs. C. H. French, both of whom, we are confident, will fill the positions, as did their predecessor, with credit to themselves and with profit to the society.

Husking bees in this locality are becoming quite a social event, parties of ladies also attending to spend a social evening with the hostess. Twelve of these old-fashioned gatherings have already been held and more are expected for the coming week.

Melville Sunday School observed Rally Day, on Sunday last and, in spite of the rain the attendance was good. The prepared programme, which was carried out by the pupils, reflected no little credit on these young entertainers and was of much interest to all. A chorus by the tots, with Miss Gladys Chase, organist, is worthy of special mention.

TO A MOTHER

You have known it, this truth beyond others,
Since first the babe breathed at your side;
No yearning so deep as the Mother's,
No guerdon so great as her pride.

You still see his look as he left you—
You still feel his clasp and his kiss—
More kindly a sword would have cleft you
Than the fear that has ended in this.

My dear, dare a word that is human
Intrude on Love's desolate cry?
Dare Pity itself ask a woman
What death she would have her son die?

Yet lovelier than life is the beauty
Of death upon him who doth give
The uttermost homage to Duty,
Who dies that a nation may live.

Oh, fail not, though love could not save him,
Be proud, though the sorrow endures—
The life he has given you gave him,
His honors and glory are yours.

—J. J. Bell, in The Glasgow Herald

BOY RIPPED BY A BAND SAW MADE WONDERFUL RECOVERY DESPITE SEVERE INJURIES

Joseph Longtin Refused to Believe That He Could Die and Survived Effects of Accident at St. Marguerite--Envelope of Heart Was Slit, But Notre Dame Surgeons Performed Difficult Operation

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—Fourteen-year-old Joseph Longtin was sent to Montreal from St. Marguerite, Quebec, on August 21st in a dying condition. He had fallen on a revolving saw in a mill, with the result that his collar-bone and all his ribs were cut through, his stomach and abdomen were ripped, and the envelope of his heart had been slit. No hope at all was held out for his life at that time. The boy has just left the Notre Dame hospital to return to his home, apparently in perfect health.

He had retained consciousness from the time of his fall until he was placed on the operating table and refused to believe that he was going to die. His courage in never complaining surprised all the doctors, and after a difficult operation had been performed on him, he continued to improve daily in health. The surgeons who attended him state that they have never heard of such a wonderful recovery, and that Longtin was saved only by his youth and his strong constitution.

LOOKED PROMISING, BUT HAD FALSE FOOT

Would-be Recruit Furnished Surprise at Army Service Corps Headquarters

MONTREAL, Nov 18—They are very proud of their recruits for the Army Service Corps that will go from Montreal for the Second contingent, but they missed one who would have been quite an addition. He appeared to be a well-built specimen, and to the eye suggested that here was likely timber. He was of good heighth, good physique, and answered questions put to him very intelligently. The surprise was to come later when he was given his physical examination, and then it was found that he possessed only one of the feet given by nature—the other was entirely artificial.

It's quite true that he could drive a transport wagon with the best of them, but was deficient according to the standard established and, in consequence, his application was rejected. The would-be recruit was much disappointed and the examining officer was very sympathetic, but there was no alternative.

CAPT. O'FLYNN WRITES TO HIS PARENTS

Letters have been received from Capt, O'Flynn this week by his mother that were written immediately after the review of the troops by King George accompanied by Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener. The day was an ideal one and the Canadian troops were in splendid form. Capt. O'Flynn said that after the review they lined up the sides of the road and gave hearty Candian cheers to the King, Lord Roberts, and Lord Kitchener as they passed in their motor cars. He describes Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener and the apparent differences between the two men, and said that anyone seeing the veteran Lord Roberts could understand his success. He said that the soldiers felt that it was a fortunate thing for England that a man of the splendid qualities of Lord Kitchener was at the head of affairs and that the soldiers could go forward with confidence to the battle, feeling that with such a director victory must ultimately ensue. The Captain also referred to his recent visit to London and to the tower and other places of interest he had the opportunity of visiting. While the boys of the 15th are not in his company he sees them every day and reported that all of them were well and in splendid condition. He writes with cheerfulness; has no complaints to make and seems desirous of doing the best for his King and country.

Train Strikes Automobile Killing Four Occupants

(Canadian Press Special)

FORT WAYNE, Nov. 19.—Thirty miles east of Convoy, Ohio, early this morning, a Pennsylvania flyer struck an automobile containing Duran Leslie Mayor of Convoy, his wife and wife's parents, killing all four.

The general impression is that the bear will make faster progress towards Berlin because he is riding on the water wagon.

ARRAS NOW A GRAVE SHELLED TO PIECES

Clergymen from There Tell Devastation Caused by the the Germans

BOULOGNE, Nov. 18.—A clergyman who remained in Arras through every bombardment, has given this description of the town as it exists today:

"I have stayed and I am going to continue to stay at my post in this ruined town. Yesterday the place had another bombardment, the fourth. Arras is now a grave. The churches and the cathedral are all gone. Four hundred houses have been burned. The roads are disappearing and leaving enormous cavities. Yesterday the civil and military hospital at St. Jean was shelled for the tenth time. The wounded and sick were placed in the cellars. One of them was the Chief Magistrate, who was badly wounded by a shell.

The Hospice is also a victim of the explosion of shells, 30 people being killed and 17 injured. The dead and wounded are all huddled together in cellars. The only people still seen in the streets are priests and soldiers. For over a month we have heard a constant cannonade, and the enemy have been within two miles of our town for nearly four weeks."

Lodge Rose of England No. 23

The Daughters and Maids of England gave their first concert last night, which proved a complete success. Mr. H. Sneyd occupied the chair in his usual capable mannner.

The following artists kindly gave their services:

Mr. and Mrs. Robbins, Miss Cocunet and Miss P. Lewis in "O Canada."

Miss McPherson—Recitation.

Mr. Tom Bowie—Sailors' Hornpipe.

Miss Davis—Pianforte Solo.

Miss Coccunet —Song— "Sunshine and Rain."

Mr. F. Burke—Song—"Out in the Deep." Encore, "The Armourer."

Miss M. Biggs—Song—"And Now I Have to call him Father." Encore, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

Miss McDowall — Song — "Jessie's Dream. Encore, "Where The River Shannon Flows."

Mr. F. Scriven—Piccolo Solo.

Miss P. Lewis—Song—"Sympathy."

Mr. Stallworthy—Song—"The Deathles Army." Encore, "Hearts of Oak."

Mr. H. Lennox—Address.

Mr. Ridley—Song—"Tale of My Dreams." Encore, "The Maple Leaf Forever."

Rev. Mrs Clarke—Address.

Mr. J. Douch—Song—"I'm Not Particular." Encore, "I Wonder Why."

Mrs. Elaims—Song—"Come Sing to Me."

Mr. J. Savage—Song—"Sons of The Sea."

Mr. Robbins—"Asleep in The Deep."

Miss M. Biggs—Song—"Thora."

Mr. F. Rolls—Song—"The Death of Nelson."

An enjoyable evening was brought to a close by all singing "God Save The King."

Although there is an apparent eagerness on the part of all the European rulers to tell who started it none them seems to be inclined to even hint at who's going to finish it.

DETECTIVE SAYS SUICIDE OF CHERRYWOOD TRAGEDY

Inspector Reburn Considers The Cause Despondency Due to Loneliness

WHITBY, Nov. 18.—Special—Provincial Inspector Reburn of Toronto, who has been working on the Hollinger death mystery at Cherrywood, was in town to-day on his return from the scene of the tragedy. Inspector Reburn regards the case as purely one of suicide. He could find no marks on the body of Hollinger which would lead to the belief that he had been struck unconscious before being thrown innto the well. He also stated that the stories about the dead man having a large sum of money on him, which he was taking to Toronto to invest, were untrue.

The Inspector thinks Hollinger became despondent through loneliness and took his own life. The Coroner's jury has not yet given a verdict.

The remains of George Hollinger were interred this afternoon in the cemetery at Cherrywood.

NEW TELEGRAPH SYSTEM INAUGURATED TO SERVE CITIES OF WESTERN CANADA

The announcement is made this morning that the work of wiring the new territory opened up by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has now been completed, and a number of young cities in British Columbia are enjoying for the first time a commercial telegraph service with the East.

Winnipeg and Prince Rupert are by this means placed in direct telegraphic touch. The first message carried over the wires was sent by the Mayor of the Pacific Coast to the Mayor of Winnipeg, and expressed the satisfaction felt in the West at the inauguration of complete telegraphic facilities which are expected to give a new impetus to business.

Mayor Newton's message was as follows:

"His Worship the Mayor.
Winnipeg, Man.

The City of Prince Rupert, B.C., through me as Mayor, sends greetings on the inauguration of the Grand Trunk Pacific telegraph service from this City to Winnipeg. Prince Rupert views this connection as the most important step towards more closely binding this Province with this Northern Part of the Dominion, more particularly coming as it does, at such an important crisis in the history of our Empire, when it is so important that all Canada should act as a unit.

S. M. Newton, Mayor."

This message was filed at Prince Rupert at 10.10 a.m. central time was received at Winnipeg at 10.15 a.m. central time, and was delivered to the Mayor at 10.25 a.m.

Mayor Deacon's reply was as follows:

"S. M. Newton, Mayor.
Prince Rupert, B.C.

The City of Winnipeg heartily reciprocates your kind greeting on the inauguration of the Grand Trunk Pacific Telegraph service and trust that this may lead to the opening of a great volume of new traffic between the Pacific Coast and the Orient and our own city, and that the completion of this new great highway of commerce may lead to the early development, not only of the interior of Northern British Columbia, but to the prosperity of all Canada and to the advantage of the Empire at large.

T. R. Deacon, Mayor."

This acknowledgment was filed at Winnipeg at 11.03 a.m. and was delivered in Prince Rupert, 1279 miles distant, twelve minutes later—an indication of the quality of the service given on Canada's new telegraphic system.

MARRIED MAN ARRESTED FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

Found in Company With a Young Girl at Hotel--She Sent Home

SARNIA, Nov. 18.—Special—Blake Weaver, a commercial traveller for a London, Ontario, piano firm, is under arrest here. Weaver, it is alleged, secured a horse and rig from a local livery barn here Saturday night and in company with the eighteen-year-old daughter of a Sarnia business man drove out into the country. He was arrested with the girl at a hotel in Wyoming on Monday night by Provincial Detective Acton, who was sent out after him when the girl failed to return home Saturday night or Sunday. It is said that the man and the girl stopped at two different hotels in their travels around the country. Weaver was brought back to the Police Station and locked up. The girl was sent home to her parents.

Weaver, it is said, is a married man with a wife and two children. Crown Attorney Bucke refused bail last night until Weaver has had a hearing, and as one Magistrate refuses to handle the case he may be taken to Petrolea for examination. Weaver says he will fight the case.

Canadians Not Likely To Be Sent To Egypt

Militia Department Expects Them to go to France--All Officers With First Expeditionary Force Safe and Well--Lieut. Miller of Napanee Twice Honorably Mentioned in Despatches

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—(Special.)—At the Militia Department to-day it was stated that there was no reason to believe the reported stories which have come across Atlantic in letters from Canadians now at Salisbury, to the effect that the Canadian troops would likely be sent to Egypt, instead of to the firing line in France. So far as is known in official circles here, there has been no change in the original plan to send to the Canadians to reinforce the British troops now in France as soon as the necessary preliminary training at Salisbury has been completed. No advices have yet been received by the department with regard to the despatch of any of the Canadian troops to the front, beyond the announcement already made as to the departure of the First Field Hospital for service in France.

Lieut. Milse Miller "Mentioned."

A private cable received to-day reports that all the Canadian officers who went to France with the first British expeditionary force are still safe and well. One of these officers, Lieut. Miles Miller of Napanee, Ont., who is on General French's staff, and has charge of a cyclist intelligence corps, has been twice mentioned in despatches for special services. Lieut. Miller is an honor graduate of the Royal Military College, and at the outbreak of war was, with several other young Canadian officers, taking the staff course at Chatham, England.

ARTILLLERY VERY ACTIVE YESTERDAY—GERMANS ATTEMPT CAPTURE OF VILLAGE

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Nov. 19.—An official statement this afternoon says, the enemy's artillery was very active yesterday, particularly between Lys and the sea coast. In the district between Oise and Aisne, an attempt was made by the Germans to recapture the village of Tracy Le Val and resulted in their being repulsed with very heavy losses. Elsewhere there is nothing reported.

JAPS TO HAND OVER PACIFIC TERRITORIES

Says Australia Can Have Them When Troops are Sent to Take Them

SYDNEY, Nov. 18.—The following official statement was issued by the Australian Government to-day: "The Japanese Government has intimated to the British Government that it is ready to hand over Marshall and other German islands in the Pacific temporarily occupied by the Japanese, to an Australian force. The British Government has informed the Japanese Government of its intention to act accordingly. A special Australian force will be despatched to the islands and will remain in occupation until the termination of the war, when the matter of the ultimate disposal of the islands will be a question for consideration by the allied powers. It is necessary, as the Federal Government will have responsibility for the occupation of the islands, that not only the military occupation, but such matters as trade, food supply, postal and commercial affairs be investigated and organized. Commander Pethebridge will accompany the force with which to make necessary arrangements."

WAR BULLETINS

Canadian Press Special Despatches

LETTER WRITTEN BY GERMAN PROFESSOR THROWS ALL OTHERS IN THE SHADE

BORDEAUX, Nov. 19.—An unsigned letter printed in an Amsterdam review on the situation in Germany having caused a sensation, the editor was challenged to prove the authenticity of the letter and now reprints it over the signature of Adolf Larson, a privy councilor and a professor in the University of Berlin.

"Nobody," the letter says, "can remain neutral as regards Germany. One must either consider her the most perfect political creation known to history or approve of her complete extermination. A man who is not a German knows nothing of Germany. We are morally and intellectually superior to all beyond competition. The same holds true of our institutions.

"The Kaiser, 'deliciae generis humanis,' has always protected peace, right and honor. The greater his success the more modest he is. His Chancellor, Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, is the most eminent man living. He has no higher care than truth, loyalty and right. Our army is, so as to speak, a reduced image of the intelligence and morality of the German people. We do good to all. Louvain was not destroyed. We only burned the houses of murderers. Rheims cathedral was not demolished. It was the French who provoked the damage.

"England rushes toward her ruin. France may yet be saved. As for Russia, she can no longer be our neighbor. We shall wipe her out. But our real adversary is England. Woe to thee, 'perfidious Albion.' God is with us and defends our just cause."

Another letter from the same pen warns Holland that she is merely appendage of Germany and exists as a state only by Germany's condescension.

"We thank God," the letter says, "that the Dutch are not our friends. We ignore their miserable little bourgeois existence. Our law is reason, our strength the strength of the spirit, our victory the victory of thought. We are truthful. Our characters are humanity, gentleness and conscientiousness—the real Christian virtues. In a wicked world we represent love and God it with us."

THE FUNERAL OF LORD ROBERTS

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The body of Lord Roberts, borne on a gun carriage moved slowly through the streets of London today to its last resting place in St. Paul's Cathedral. The streets were lined with troops, while hundreds of thousands of civilians stood with bared heads, as the funeral went by. This took place in spite of the cold rain which fell incessantly.

The cortege reached St. Paul's at noon, where, before a great and reverent throng of people, including King George, the funeral services were held. The body will be interred along side the remains of Wellington, Nelson, Wolsley and other famous warriors.

A BANTAM BATTALION FROM BIRKENHEAD

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Lord Kitchener has sanctioned the formation at Birkenhead of a battalion consisting of men between five feet and five feet inches. It will be called "The Bantams' Battalion."

CANADIANS TO ATTEND FUNERAL OF ROBERTS

Thirty Ontario Men Selected to Represent the Expeditionary Force--Infantry and Artillery Reorganization Has Been Ordered by the War Office--More Deaths Reported in Canadian Force

SALISBURY PLAIN, Nov. 18.—Thirty Ontario men, under Major Kimmins of Winona, have been selected to represent the Canadian expeditionary force at the funeral of Lord Roberts. All are from the battalion commanded by Lieut.-Col. Hill of Niagara (First Battalion First Infantry Brigade).

Lieut.-Col. Rennie of Toronto will represent the Queen's Own Rifles, of which regiment Lord Roberts was Honorary Colonel.

The War Office has ordered the reorganization of the Canadians. The infantry division returns to the eight company (instead of the four double companies) establishment, and the artillery to the four-gun battery.

John Larne, a French-Canadian soldier of Neuville, Portneuf county, Que., died at Bulford Hospital of meningitis.

Canadian Associated cables yesterday stated that General Alderson, commanding many Canadian staff officers, would attend the funeral of Lord Roberts. They also stated that the death occurred at Salisbury of heart failure of Douglas Kirkpatrick Benham, a member of the Canadian contingent, who joined at Vancouver. He was a son of the late John Benham, of Clapham, London.

"Pat" Yeomans Writes Home Again

Salisbury Plains,
Nov. 5, 1914.

Dear Dad and Mamma,—

We were inspected by the King and Queen, Earl Kitchener, Lord Roberts and a whole bunch of officers and ladies-in-waiting yesterday and I think made a respectable appearance in spite of the fearful weather conditions we have been having here. As you have likely gathered by this time from my other letters the Contingent is divided up into several different camps—West Down North (our camp), West Down South, Bustard, Lark Hill, Pond Farm, etc.—all about two or three miles from each other and all falling on the same road.

Yesterday (Wednesday) morning we all formed up and marched about a mile to a big level space where the regiments and batteries in West Down Camp assembled gradually, the Infantry on one side of the road and Cavalry on the other. It was a great sight to see the Highlanders—all the Infantry in our camp are "Scotties"—go through their rifle drill with bayonets fixed; they have had lots of practice and drill, and certainly know things down pretty well.

We waited there for about an hour and a half, during which time we were all lined up perfectly, and then there was a long note blown suddenly on the bugle and we all stiffened up and took a final look at our dressing, and over the hill to the right came a long line of automobiles. They stopped when almost up to us and King George, Queen Mary, and all the rest got out and started to inspect us right away. They walked through and around the batteries and cavalry first, then crossed the road and inspected the infantry. The band belonging to that brigade played until they passed on to the next brigade. They passed within thirty or forty yards of us, but we could not see them well then as there were too many people in the road. We saw them all quite plainly a moment later, however. King George is easily recognizable—just the same as his pictures except that he seemed a little shorter to me than I had thought he would be.

I could not see Queen Mary very plainly but she was dressed in black and wore a hat with a huge black plume. King George wore a black arm-band on the sleeve of his uniform and all the officers in the train also had them. Some said that they were worn in honor of the British already killed in battle, but I heard later that it was on account of the death of Prine Louis of Battenburg—the Queen's brother, or something. When they inspected the last regiment of infantry they paused a second and then got right into their cars again and went on to Pond Farm Camp. Just as they got into the cars the men started to cheer and they sure made some noise. I would much rather have heard them just give three cheers and then sing "The Maple Leaf," but they cheered and cheered for ten minutes or more—until they were almost out of sight.

There is a pretty strong probability of our going to Egypt, but I can't be positive.

Well, I'll have to stop now for "stables" is blowing. Good-bye for now and love to all.

PAT.

Net is Tightened To Catch Germans

Immigration and Custom Regulations now Very Stringent

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—Precautions which have been taken as a result of the war, have resulted in a most stringent tightening of the immigration and customs regulations of the Dominion, it was learned to-day.

Additional restrictions have been added from time to time until the authorities now consider that everything has been done to prevent the entrance into the country of either German spies or German goods. To the ordinary queries with which a traveler crossing the Canadian border is confronted have been added a long list of other questions calculated to bring out in the minutest detail particulars as to identity, citizenship and the like. These include parentage, nationality, age, movements during the previous decade, purpose in entering Canada and length of visit and the like. All suspicious persons are being detained for investigation.

Similar care is being observed in the case of the customs regulations, and baggage for which the inspectors would formerly on occasion taken the owner's word, is now closely searched. As regards merchandise and other goods imported, no chances are being taken, and they are being closely examined to ascertain whether they are of German, Austrian or Turkish manufacture. Turkish rugs are now on the list of contraband, and it is understood that such shipments are frequently being rejected.

BIG NAVAL BATTLE IN THE BALTIC SEA

Heavy and Continuous Firing Is Reported from the Island of Gothland

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 18.—A Baltic naval engagement is reported from Visby, on the Island of Gothland. Yesterday afternoon very heavy cannonading was heard on the north and west cost, and it is believed to have been a battle between the Germans and the Russian fleet, which left Helsingfors two days ago. The firing was apparently of heavy guns and then of broadsides. It lasted for an hour uninterruptedly, and then, after an interval of fifteen minutes, it started again and lasted till late last night. The Swedish ferry services were stopped during the engagement.

THE SNYDERS REMANDED

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 18.—Magistrate Fraser remanded today the cases of Joseph Snyder, his son, Richard, and brother, Arthur, who are charged with treason in attempting to smuggle four Austrian reservists out of the country. The remand was taken at the request of D. B. White, counsel for the prisoners, who asked that the case be enlarged until Friday morning at 11 o'clock, as he had not yet obtained all the facts of the case. The accused were brought to the City Hall by an armed guard of eight militiamen. Four reservists were also in court. After the case had been remanded the prisoners were returned to the Armory, although the case is now in the hands of the civil court authorities.

Long before court opened the hall was crowded to overflowing.

AT THE FRONT

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractor permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractic is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect. (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

We can prove Chriopractic is right and applicable to your case. Think it over. Consultation free.

PELLETIER NOW A JUDGE.

Appointed to a Vacancy on Quebec Superior Court Bench.

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—Hon. L. P. Pelletier, former Postmaster-General, was yesterday appointed a Judge of the Superior Court of Quebec in place of Justice Delorimer of Montreal, who has resigned. The order-in-council was passed yesterday morning.

Mr. Pelletier, who was seriously ill recently and compelled to give up his arduous duties as Postmaster-General, is now greatly improved, following a sojourn in Mount Clemens, Michigan. He is at present in Atlantic City.

Judge Pelletier is a lawyer of eminent standing at the bar of Quebec. He replaces a Montreal judge and presumably will reside in that city in place of the Quebec division of the Superior Court.

BELGRADE BOMBARDED.

Austrians Are Laying Determined Siege To Servian Capital.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The fortifications of the Servians at Belgrade are being bombarded by the Austrians with heavy guns from the hills of Semlin and from monitors on the Danube, says a despatch from Budapest.

The Servian artillery is replying from the Baujicha Hills.

Austrian engineers and sappers are repairing the railways at Semlin to afford protection for their artillery. The railway lines there have been twice destroyed in the present war, once when the Austrians retired from the Servian column that invaded Bosnia, and again by the Servians when they retired before the Austrians and were forced to fall back across the river into their own country again.

A despatch to The Nieuws Frie Presse declares that the Servians retired ten kilometres after the fall of Valievo, in the direction of Kragujevatz, where a new battle was fought.

PREPARING FOR WORST

German Press Seems About to Break Bad News.

Censor Is Permitting Many Complaints About Lack of News and Also Explanations Therefor—Germans Are Beginning to Realize That Their Army Is No Longer on the Offensive.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 19.—What is considered evidence of a desire of the German authorities to prepare public opinion for ugly truths is, in fact, that the censor permits so many complaints to be printed as to the lack of news from the front, and the explanations he permits the papers to publish in reply. In a general sense the papers have brought home to the readers that the German forces have almost entirely abandoned the offensive on all sides, but they try and make believe that this is not so much by reason of any progress on the part of the allies as owing to the new strategical conceptions destined shortly to bring the enemy's career to an inglorious close.

From the severe lesson read to pessimists by The Frankfurter Zeitung it would appear as if these efforts of the newspapers are not meeting with the success they hoped for. This paper describes the situation as eminently satisfactory, seeing that the Germans are everywhere putting up a most victorious defensive. Under these circumstances German public opinion is wrong to allow itself to be alarmed by the assumed optimism or mere bluff of the allies, or to fall into the trap so cleverly spread for it to engender a panic throughout the land. The paper is constrained to admit that the official bulletins are somewhat laconic and inclined to admit that the official bulletins are somewhat laconic and inclined to dwell too much on minor facts, but it says that all this will soon be changed, and in any case the public should have the good sense to trust the Kaiser and his gallant army.

TURKS ARE WAKING UP.

Realizing That They Have Been Deceived by Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A Petrograd despatch to The Post says:—

The situation in Constantinople and other large centres of the Ottoman Empire is reported to be serious.

The Turks were assured that Warsaw had been taken and that the Russian Caucasus would be captured in the first days of the war by a surprise attack, all the troops having been withdrawn to meet the German hosts and the natives of the Caucasus being waiting to welcome the invaders and join in wholesale slaughter of the Armenians.

From the outset of the war Germanic news factories have insisted that the Russian Caucasus was in revolt.

News of Russian victories on the Vistula having reached Constantinople, the inhabitants are reported to be preparing to throw off the yoke of the Young Turks and their German masters.

The incipient plot in Turkey against the Young Turks and the German domination of the army and navy has reached such a state that Dr. Hans Von Miquel, the German Ambassador at Constantinople, is in constant fear of his life, according to a Rome despatch to The London Standard. The Ambassador, who formerly was stationed at Petrograd, daily receives threatening letters.

"A conspiracy," continues the correspondent, "has been discovered for the assassination of Gen. Liman von Sanders—the German officer who reorganized the Turkish army and is now practically its commander, and a number of high Turkish officials. Resentment against Turkey's entrance into the war, which is laid to German designs, grows.

"The prime moved in this revolt against Germany is Chukri Pasha, who defended Adrianople against the allied Balkan states. He is seconded by Field Marshal Fuad Pasha.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

On the 14th inst., Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Mott, of the Sixth Concession of Thurlow, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their mariage. Mr. Mott was born in Thurlow seventy-seven years ago, half a mile east of the village of Corbyville, and has been a resident of the County of Hastings and municipality commanding the confidence and respect of all who knew them. Mrs. Mott was the daughter of the late Mr. Peter Hicks of the Township of Tyendinaga, where seventy-one years ago she was born. As the result of the marriage of Miss Hicks and Mr. Mott, which was performed by the Rev. Mr. Ferguson, who, at the time was the family minister, two sons and three daughters were born. Surrounded by their respective families these are all living. They are Mr. C. M. Mott of Cambellford, Ont.; Mrs. T. Parks, Hungerford, Ont.; Mrs. B. F. Palmer, Invernay, Sask.; Mr. Miller Mott, Principal of Quenn Alexander School, Belleville, and Mrs. B. Langabeer, Thurlow, Ont. All living were present to add to the joy of the occasion, except Mrs. Palmer, who resides in the West.

After participating in the sumptuous hospitality provided by Mr. and Mrs. Lanagbeer, who were the hosts of the occasion, words of congratulation were spoken by the Rev. Mr. Wilson of Cannifton, which was followed by the reading of the following address by a granddaughter, Mrs. Angus Donald, of Belleville:

Dear Parents:—Your children and grandchildren have looked forward to this day with great delight and pleasure. This is the first time for many of us to have the opportunity of being present on such an occasion. To live for fifty years together is a rare occurrence, and but few people live to boast of it. Fifty years ago to-day you joined hands and hearts in the holy bonds of matrimony to enter the voyage of life together. To-day, no doubt, you have recalled that event. Together you have fought life's battle, tasted some of life's sweets, and borne many of it burdens. As we remember your years of unselfish labor and love for all the members of your family while they remained under the parental roof, we are at this time led to believe that there is no blessing too rich, no joy to full, and no reward too great for you to enjoy. As a result of your marriage six children were born; all of whom are livinig except one, who died when but an infant. There are sixteen grandchildren, all living, and many of them here on this occasion to enjoy it with you. There are also three great-grandchildren, all of whom are here to-day. This seems to us to be most remarkable, that the grim reaper, Death, has never entered your home circle in forty years. For this alone, we ought to be thankful. To-day we offer to both of you our most sincere congratulations on the completion of fifty years of wedded life.

The address was accompanied by a presentation made by another granddaughter, Miss Edna Parks, as follows:—"We would sak you to accept this small purse of gold in memory of this day."

The presentaioonn was acknowledged and all joined in singing the words—"To our Bountiful Father above, we will offer the tribute of praise." When prayer was offered by Rev. M. Wilson the formal part of the occasion was brought to a close.

Mr. and Mrs. Mott are still hale and hearty, and bid fair to enjoy many added years of happy life before their setting sun may open the morning of a brighter day.

To Put on Flesh And Increase Weight

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand, many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a datented drug, but is a scientific combination of six of the most effective and powerful flesh building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by J. S. McKeown's drug store and other good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Canada On The Plain

Happy 32,000 Who Want "To See The Fun"

"Express" Special Correspondent
Salisbury, Tuesday Night.

"Salisbury Plain is some mud—but we are having a pretty good time, all the same."

That is the considered opinion of one of the 32,000 Canadian soldiers who are getting ready, in four large camps in the Plain, to take their part in the great war.

It is no half-hearted help that Canada has given. As one of the Newfoundland contingent said to me this afternoon, "We've a vurry complete little outfit, and all we want is to see some of the fun."

That is the only grumle you will hear in any of the camps—except strange Transatlantic epithets about the mud.

They are a jolly crowd, these Canadians. I met half a dozen of them cheerfully footing the eighteen miles between Salisbury and the furthest camp at Pond Farm. A curious, wolfish sort of dog—one of the many live mascots of the troops—loped at their heels singing "Tipperary."

To hear that "Tipperary" has been elevated to equal honors with "The Maple Leaf" is to realize that the Canadians are already very much at home.

A little further along I began to realize how complete is the little outfit—because the road was occupied by half a dozen large dark-green ammunition wagons, which proclaimed themselves as belonging to "Canada—Ammunition Park No.—" Down the road there were more and more of these wagons—powerful vehicles that can career about the plain as easily as on made roads—then transport wagons, then rows of guns, and at last the camps themselves, four canvas towns, complete even to hospital and inoculation stations.

"Our Own Prairie"

The first thing that struck the Canadians when they arrived was the homelike nature of the scenery. "Why, it's just like our own priarie—only your grass is not quite so long," one of them told me. But he went on to draw some comparisons between the Canadian and English climates. It has been raining for a fortnight on the plain.

The place to see the Canadian "at home" is the great Y.M.C.A. tent, which is a landmark in each of the camps. There at least they can keep dry, while they write home, sing "Tipperary," play games, and shop.

Most of all they shop. When the Y. M. C. A. tent opened the "dry canteen" sold tobacco, chocolate, and notepaper. Now it is like a backwoods store, and its stocks ranges from cough mixtures to braces, from drill manuals to penny bottles of sauce. The Canadians eat about three tons of chocolate in a week. Chewing gum is on order, and when that comes there will be no need for the little walk of eighteen miles into Salisbury.

"Guess this tent keeps us happy," one of the Newfoundland contingent admitted. "It isn't very comfortable in our tents this weather and you can't walk about all the time."

Many of the British-born Canadians—and they form a fair proportion of the whole—have been granted leave to go and see their relations. When the true Canadians get their leave they are coming to see London.

There are some who are neither Canadian nor British.

"Me?" said one trooper, when I asked him from what part of Canada he came. "Me—I'm a Yank. But I didn't want to miss this scrap, so I just went over the border and enlisted—and here I am. Now let's see something of this European scrap you've got into."

Maud Muller on a summer's day
Made up a batch of fudge.
She fed it to her guests, they say,
And nearly killed a judge.
—Kansas City Journal.

"Distance lends enchantment to the view," quoted the sage.

"Not if you miss the last car and have to walk," added the fool.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

LETTER AND RECITATION FROM CAPT. O'FLYNN

Bustard Camp,
Nov. 5th, 1914.

Mr. George Dulmage,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear George,—I am enclosing a little poem that was written by a member of this battalion (an Irishman) and knowing how you enjoy a humorous recitation thought this might interest you.

The boys are all well and in good spirits. They are working hard to make good.

We were inspected by the King yesterday and had an ideal day for the inspection. Lord Kitchener and Lord Roberts were with the King and we had our first chance of seeing two of England's greatest Generals.

Give my best to all the boys and don't let them wear out the new pavement before I get back.

Your old friend,
E. D. O'F.

Come all ye good Canadians, to you I will relate
Unto you all I'll tell the way the Kaiser met his fate,
Just how we took away his crown and put him on the bum—
'Twas when we marched from Valcartier and went to Bel-gi-um.

We'd plenty socks and blankets, and plenty good to eat,
Our cosy little outfit was pretty hard to beat;
We answered to the bugle call, we answered to the drum,
And marched away from Valcartier and went to Bel-gi-um.

We fired some rounds of marmalade, and doughnuts hard as rocks,
We wadded them down with blankets, with wristbands and with socks,
We fired a home-made custard pie—the dread soft nosed dum-dum—
We brought it here from Valcartier to use in Bel-gi-um.

The enemy were starving, and they were filled with woe,
We put canned salmon in our guns and fired it at the foe.
The Huns came in to breakfast—by millions did they come—
To meet the boys from Valcartier who went to Bel-gi-um.

The Germans, they surrendered—their eyes were filled with tears;
They hadn't had so much to eat for many, many years.
They asked us in amazement "Where do you boys come from?"
We said, "We come from Valcartier to visit Bel-gi-um."

Oh! with our store of doughnuts, our pumpkin pie and jam,
Our stock of fine canned salmon, our headcheese and our ham,
We came across from Canada, and we sure made things hum—
We captured half of Europe, as well as Bel-gi-um.
—Original recitation by Lieut. O'Flynn.

PRACTICAL PRESCRIPTION AGAINST STOMACH ACIDITY

Nine-tenths of all cases of stomach trouble nowadays are caused by too much acid. In the beginning the stomach itself is not diseased but if this acid condition is allowed to continue, the acid is very likely to eat into the stomach walls and produce stomach ulcers which may render a surgical operation necessary even to prolong life. Therefore, an "acid stomach" is really a dangerous condition and should be treated seriously. It is utterly useless to take pepsin and ordinary stomach tablets. The excess acid or stomach hyperacidity must be neutralized by the administration of an efficient antacid. For this purpose the best remedy is bisurated magnesia taken in teaspoonful doses in a fourth of a glass of water after each meal. Larger quantities may be used if necessary as it is absolutely harmless. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia as other forms of magnesia make effective mouth washes but they have not the same action on the stomach as the bisurated.

Buried Their Guns.

A despatch from Petrograd declares that Polish peasants in the neighborhood of Warsaw have found many German quick-firers and large amounts of ammunition buried in mounds surmounted by crosses and German helmets, the crude marks of soldiers' graves. The peasants became suspicious of these hillocks and investigation showed that they contained material and guns abandoned during the retreat of the Austro-German forces.

THE NEXT MAYOR

Who is to be Mayor fo. the year 1915? is a question now being asked by many who take an interest in Municipal affairs, and by many who give little attention to what has been done in the past, but worry about what is promised to be accomplished in the future. The names of many aspirants have been mentioned, whose claims for the honor are based solely upon the opinion they have, individually, of their own merits, and sometimes, unfortunately, those with most assumption and least merit succeed.

The present Mayor has given much of his time, and worked assiduously during his occupation of the Chair, in the interests of the City, and informs us that it is not his intention to seek re-election. Who, then, shall be his successor? No man in the city has devoted more time or given more of his practical ability in the interest of Municipal affairs for years past than Alderman Panter. Why, then, after many years' work as Alderman should not the honor of Mayor be conferred upon him, and that, too, without the trouble and annoyance of a contest. If long and faithful services are worthy of recognition, let it be done in the case of Alderman Panter.

It is true Mr. Panter entered the field upon one occasion, and under peculiar circumstances was defeated, but that is no discredit to him. Many have in the past shared the same fate, who proved in after life to be the best public servants.

We know nothing of Mr. Panter's wishes or intentions, but write in what we believe the interest of the city and what we have good reason to know is the opinion of a large body of people of the city.

TO PUNISH EXTORTIONERS

The Hon. Mr. Crothers, Minister of Labor in the Borden Cabinet is about paying his respects to extortioners who hestitate not to extort from their customers unjustifiable profits upon articles which they have to sell, particularly during times like the present. The Ottawa Free Press, the leading Opposition journal in Ottawa, pays the Minister of Labor the following compliment. It is well that we have a Minister who looks after the interests of the consumer as well as the producer. The Free Press says:—

"If your tradesman overcharges you put him in jail. The Minister of Labor says he will soon give the ordinary citizen the power of dealing with tradesmen who take undue advantage of war conditions to make excessive charges.

"At the war session of Parliament the Government took authority to penalize the charging of exorbitant prices. So many complaints have been received from various parts of the country that the Government has decided to give effect to this legislation and will pass an order-in-Council bringing it into active operation.

"It is proposed to make overcharging an offence to be dealt with by the courts. Under the order in Council which is to be passed a person who feels that he has been overcharged may go before a magistrate, lay an information, and if the evidence is sufficient a warrant will be issued for the arrest of the tradesman. The trial will follow.

"It is felt that there may be some difficulty in a Judge deciding what is overcharging. It is pointed out, for instance, that this year while number one apples can be had for fifty cents a barrel, by the time packers, shippers and dealers have taken their profits, the consumer has to pay from three to three dollars and a half a barrel for them. It is said that the same practice exists in the case of most commodities.

"However, it is planned to put the power into the hands of the people and let them fight it out in the courts with the dealers the question of what constitutes overcharging."

ONE ENDLESS CHAIN

We have all made sure that the man on the land is at the basis of national wealth. We know that when the farmer has money to buy, the trade machinery of the country will have its one best source of energy. But the best cellar in the world never made a house. And unless the hundreds of thousands of industrial workers in Canada have wages to buy with, there is no use expecting to keep prosperity up. The workers can't buy if they haven't money. They can't get money without work. They can't get work without the factories being kept open. Factories can't be kept open without orders coming in from the millions of people who live in the land where the factories exist. So that it's plainly and irresistably the self-interested privilege of every man and woman in Canada to advance his own welfare by spending every dollar possible for things made in Canada, in order to keep this great endless chain in a state of dynamic efficiency. The people have it in their own hands to do it. All it needs is a little quiet and persistent campaign right in a man's own family. And the time to begin it is—Now.

CURRENT COMMENT

Though three months this year have had "Friday the 13th," it don't altogether account for the war.

If there is no excitement elsewhere, Belleville is ready almost any day to furnish a sensation with two candidates in a mayoralty contest.

Thomas A. Edison works from sixteen to twenty hours a day. We can guess the janitor's opinion of him.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Nieuwe Rotterdamschf Sourant quotes a letter from a Galician priest stating that 40,000 Austrians have been buried in one day in a grave six and one-half feet wide and a little over four miles long. The bodies, the letter says, were laid next to each other on three layers. These men were killed, it was stated, during a battle lasting only a few hours. Horrible!

One of the finest results of the present war is the tightening of the bonds which unite the United States to Great Britain and to the rest of the English-speaking nations. Except for a few German papers published in the neighboring Republic, the spirit of the American press has been unmistakably and cordially on the side of the Allies. Blood is thicker than water.—Journal of Commerce.

It is now but little over five weeks to Christmas, but from expressions heard on the street there is not much of the spirit of Christmas abroad this year. Possibly the terrible war raging in Europe has dampened our ardor for the celebration of the birth of the Prince of Peace. As a nation we should not overlook opportunities to help the suffering Belgians nor our brave defenders who are fighting our battles on sea and land. The real spirit of Christmas can be best shown by giving to those in need.

Characteristic.—In his speech at Montreal there was a touch of the real Laurier. He said, "I am not here to discuss whether or not we have perfect autonomy in Canada. I will do nothing to embarrass the Government, though I do not deny that there is great temptation to discuss the naval question at the present time." The Liberal leader is too wise to yield to any such temptation. The "autonomy" bogey the war has destroyed. The masses of the Liberal party look back with dismay to the action of their leaders in Parliament on the Borden naval proposals.

The first industrial disputes since the war have been referred to the Labor Department. Hon. T. W. Crothers has established boards in two cases. One dispute is at Golgonda over wages, the other between the electrical workers and the city of Edmonton.

Practical economy. A wholesale cut has been made by the Vancouver City Council in all salaries. The Mayor is cut from $5,000 a year to $3,200, and the Aldermen from $100 a month to $80. This is in accordance with the following scale: On all in receipt of salaries of $300 per month, a reduction of 30 per cent.; between $200 and $300, 25 per cent; between $100 and $200, 20 per cent.; between $75 and $100, 15 per cent., and below $75 monthly, 10 per cent. This cut means a saving of $12,000 per month and is regarded as a war measure.

YE MARINERS OF ENGLAND
(T. Campbell.)

Ye mariners of England,
That guard our native seas;
Whose flag has braved, a thousand years,
The battle and the breeze!
Your glorious standard launch again
To match another foe,
And sweep through the deep,
While the stormy winds do blow;
While the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow.

Te meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn,
Till danger's troubled night depart,
And the star of peace return.
Then, then, ye ocean warriors!
Our song shall feast and flow
To the fame of your name,
When the storm has ceased to blow;
When the fiery fight is heard no more,
And the storm has ceased to blow.

Austrian Desperado

Will be Given His Trial Next Month

KINGSTON Nov. 18.—Arrangements are being made to have the trial of Syzmondski, the Austrian convict who recently made such a sensational escape from the penitentiary, tried in December, probably on the 7th. He will likely come before Judge Madden.

Guard Dowsley and Mounted Scout Tatton, who were assaulted by Syzmondski when he made his getaway, are still suffering as a result of the treatment they received, but they will be able to appear against the accused when the trial comes up. Tatton, so it is believed, will lose his hearing, while Dowsley is suffering from nervous trouble.

Symondski, it will be remembered, assaulted the men on the prison farm and then made off with Scout Tatton's horse. He was traced by detectives for a month, and was finally rounded up near Copper Cliff, after a lively battle with the chief of police.

Another Shipment To Supply Demand

Great Distribution Rapidly Taking up First Allotment But More On The Way

Somebody asked, "When is it going to end?"

"Why, it's just begun," is the answer.

Referring, of course, to The Intelligenecer's distribution of the greatest Bible ever published. It did look for a while as though some of our readers would have to be disappointed, but additional shipments are now on the way and everybody will be supplied in time.

The Intelligencer recognizes the fact that there are numerous "illustrated" Bibles ever published. flagfi trated" Bibles offered to the public. But they contain merely pictures of Biblical scenes taken at random from various sources and inserted without regard to subjects or chapters. Some New Testament scenes are inserted in the Old Testament and vice versa. Thus they entirely lose their educational value. In this Bible there are more than 600 illustrations printed with the type, so that they make plain the verse which they accompany. Those who are not familiar with the Bible will catch many a new meaning aided by these illustrations. Then this Bible also contains full page color plates from the wonderful Tissot collection, each of which has been selected with the same object of explaining the accompanying test matter. So with all respect to other Bibles, the fact remains that this is the only really Illustrated Bible.

No difference how many other Bibles you may now have, this one explains and makes clear the many subjects illustrated; and even though you may have no religious beliefs such a work will be found an invaluable aid to education.

In addition to the educational helps, the copious marginal references and the beautiful colored maps, every proper name in this Illustrated Bible is separated into syllables and marked for pronunciation, being treated the same as in a dictionary, so that mispronunciation is impossible. This is one of the most important features of this great work and is of immense value to both young and old who find it difficult to pronounce Bible names.

Sore Defied Doctors

ZAM-BUK WORKED A MARVELOUS CURE.

Mr. Earle G. Appleby, of Big River, Sask., writes: "Two years ago, while at work, I injured my left heel. The wound did not heal, but left an open sore about an inch and a half long. As you can imagine, this was extremely painful. I tried every salve that was mentioned to me, but could not get relief, and so I then tried several old-fashioned remedies, such as wax dropped into the sore, hot tallow, etc., and finally went to a doctor who stitched the sore. This was fairly successful for a time, but last winter the wound opened up again, and was as bad as ever. To say I was discouraged would be putting it milding. I started in again trying all kinds of remedies, and suffered hours of agony.

"My predicament was noticed by a fellow workman, who persuaded me to give Zam-Buk a trial. I did so, although I did not expect it would prove any better than the other remedies I had tried. In a short time after Zam-Buk had been applied the inflammation and pain were practically gone. Within a week the sore showed signs of healing. I continued with Zam-Buk and it finally closed the sore and healed it completely. I consider this cure so marvelous that I am sending this unsolicited testimonial, hoping it will influence other sufferers to give this wonderful ointment a fair trial.

Zam-Buk is purely herbal and is healing, soothing and antiseptic. Does not contain animal fat or poisonous coloring matter.

Use Zam-Buk for cuts, burns, bruises, obstinate sores, eczema, piles, chapped hands, cold sores, rheumatism, and all injuries and skin diseases.

All druggists and stores, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto on receipt of price, 50c. box, 3 boxes for $1.25. Refuse substitutes.

A Fire Needs Lots of Air to Breathe

S·STOVES
STOVES

THE quickest way to put a fire out is to smother it. A fire must have air. If it gets no air it goes out immediately. If it gets insufficient air it smoulders. A smouldering fire gives out little heat; and it's heat you want from the coal you burn.

The grates in a Gurney-Oxford are designed to give the fire lots of air to breathe. So the fire is bright and snappy. The combustion is perfect. A fire will burn lots of air—if it can get it. The fire in a Gurney-Oxford gets all the air it can use. The coal burns to white, flakey ashes. You don't find a mass of tough, half-burned clinkers in a Gurney-Oxford fire box. This means efficiency—getting the most heat from the least fuel. So the economy in a Gurney-Oxford starts with the grates.

Then, the distribution of heat to the oven is through a series of divided flues. They direct all the heat where it should go—around the oven. That is why the Gurney-Oxford is such a satisfactory stove to cook with.

And the third feature for economy and comfort, is the Gurney-Oxford Economizer, because it enables the fire to be kept down to a spark and then brought to baking heat quickly and surely.

Let us demonstrate these features of the Gurney-Oxford to you. We claim this to be the most economical and satisfactory stove ever devised. Will you come in and let us prove it?

NEW ADVANCE FUTILE

Russians Are Crushing Germany's Latest Offensive.

Invasion of Poland by Way of Thorn Fails of Its Desired Effect Which Was to Divert East Prussian Attack — Fierce Battle Has Been Raging for Four Days in the Vicinity of Soldau.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A despatch received at Paris from Petrograd by the Havas Agency is as follows:—

"A terrific battle of unexampled violence has been proceeding for four days around Soldau. The cannonading has been maintained night and day. The Russians are endeavoring at any cost to avenge their former check at Soldau, and are throwing themselves at the Germans with indescribable fury. They have carried position after position by assault, in spite of the infernal fire of the Germans.

"The Germans are offering a most energetic resistance, and their fighting is alternately offensive nad defensive.

"In spite of the torrential rains, which have turned the ground into a quagmire, the Russians are advancing toward the interior of Germany," the Havas correspondent continues. "They have captured ten big cannon, none of them damaged."

The Daily News has the following from Frederick Rennet, its Petrograd correspondent:—

The Russians are rolling back the German reinforced invasion of Poland from Thorn. The advance is being crushed without the Russians having to abate their energetic penetration northward into eastern Prussia. These operations demonstrate that Gen. Hindenburg means to stake his winter campaign on repeated attempts with great force to prevent the invasion of central Germany by means of flank attacks on the Russian right. This was the plan laid down by the elder Moltke fifty years ago, at the time of the Schleswig-Holstein campaign, when he held that if Germany had to conduct war on two fronts it would be impossible to maintain a frontal defence of Silesia against invasion from the east.

Hindenburg is now following this strategy, and all reinforcements brought from western Europe are concentraitng around Thorn. His immediate danger is from a continuous strengthening of the Russian northward columns closing into the railway system of East Prussia. Other German measures for gaining time for Silesia consist in the destruction of all frontier communications. They soaked with petroleum all wooden bridges in the region of Kalisz, southward to Veleun, and undermined the iron bridges across the River Prosna. They are taking fresh hostages in all the frontier towns. Fighting among the swampy forests to the northward is very stubborn and slow.

The Germanic-Austrian staffs are in dispute as to the course to be pursued at Cracow. The Austrians, for political and strategical reasons, desire, practically, a passive defence, reserving their main strength to protect the roads leading to Vienna. The German headquarters have vetoed this on the ground that the early submission of Cracow will necessitate a radical change of all the German plans. The Austrian Emperor is believed to be supporting the views of his own General Staff.

A despatch from Petrograd says that word has been received from Marmoritza, on the Austria-Roumanian frontier, that hard fighting is taking place in the northern part of Bukowina. The Czar's troops are declared to be victorious.

It is said that as the Russians move forward the Austrians are fleeing in disorder.

PRESENTS FOR KING ALBERT.

Belgian Monarch's Fete Is Marked by Flood of Remembrances.

HAVRE, France, Nov. 19. — (Via Paris.)—A large motor truck was required to forward to King Albert at his headquarters in Flanders the mail received here for the King on the occasion of his fete. No class of society forgot the Belgian ruler on his saint's day, which corresponds to a birthday in Protestant countries.

Picture postcards, containing congratulations and best wishes, were in the majority, but the King's mail contained poems, drawings, paintings and even original musical compositions. Children were heavy contributors, as also were wounded soldiers in the hospitals. All ranks, from the nobility to the peasantry, were represented.

Federal Control of Lake Freight.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—At the waterways convention yesterday the following resolutions were adopted:

"That a committee of five be appointed to investigate the desirability of Government ownership and operation of package boats and steamers on the great lakes and to investigate the possible economies in water carriage by elimination of duplicated expenses and duplicated services.

"The committee to investigate also the question of united terminals and reduction of expenses of transferring from water to rail and rail to water."

Mutual Visiting of Prisoners.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 19.—The Associated Press is informed by German officials that a plan is being discussed to do away with further mutual retaliatory measures on citizens of France and Germany. It is proposed to appoint a German commission to visit detention camps and a French commission to visit German camps. These commissions are to investigate actual conditions among the detained foreign subjects, and, if possible, to agree upon a plan whereby both nations will refrain from further drastic measures.

EXPLANATION DEMANDED.

U. S. Seeks Apology For Attack on Cruiser Tennessee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. — The United States Government has directed Ambassador Henry Morgenthau at Constantinople to ask the Ottoman Government for an explanation of the firing by Turkish land forces at a launch from the American cruiser Tennessee, proceeding from Vourlah to the American Consulate at Smyrna, Asia Minor.

Secretary Daniels, with the approval of President Wilson, simultaneously cabled the commanders of the Tennessee and the North Carolina, also in the Mediterranean, to take no action which might embarrass the American Government.

President Wilson is determined that, under no circumstances, shall the United States be involved in war with Turkey. If the Turkish officers acted without authority of the Ottoman Government, and the firing was not justified by naval procedure in a closed port, it is confidently believed here that the Ottoman Government will render apology.

Defied the Life Screens.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19. — Life nets, placed in the rotunda of the Chamber of Commerce building in an attempt to discourage suicides, proved unavailing yesterday.

A well-dressed man about 50 years of age jumped from the fourteenth floor, plunged through the screen on the eighth floor and his lifeless body was entangled in the broken strands of the third floor screen. There the crushed form hung swaying until firemen with ladders took it down.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

BUSY CENSOR SLASHES EVEN LORD'S PRAYER

Paris Writer's Attempt at Ridicule Results in Amusing Literary Hash

PARIS, Nov. 17.—As threats and entreaties have proved equally vain against the censorship, the Temps tonight attacks it with ridicule, which is regarded as the deadliest weapon in the Parisian armory.

Pierre Mille, one of the best-known contributors, writes a column article, beginning:

"Regarding the origin of the convulsion which is shaking Europe, together with the least known diplomatic secrets and the most concealed strategic projects, I am going to make some most important revelations."

Before he can reveal anything here, however, the censor intervenes with a four-line cut. He continues:

"It will be remembered that Napoleon once cried before the Pyramids— (Here is another slash).

The writer goes on:

"But we do not need the support of history or the remembrance of the victories won by —eanne d'Arc at (name excised) or at Valmy by (another obliteration). One fact I will add" (Here follows a ten-line cut.)

He continues:

"His undaunted attitude at" (This time ten lines more disappear.

The article proceeds:

"She cried in a trembling voice: "O daughter, cruel" — (the woman's speech is all excised save the words "The devourers fight among themselves," although the passage appears to have been taken from nothing more modern or harmful than a famous tragedy.)

The writer makes a last effort:

"The adversary's position was now very serious. Throwing himself upon his knees, he cried: 'Our Father, which art—' (Even of the Lord's prayer the censor allows only this beginning and the final "amen.")

The Temps says in a postscript:

"We regret the slashing which the censor finds it necessary to inflict, but despite it our contributor asserts that the article can still be understood."

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th. 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

GOT A PASSPORT EASILY

Von der Goltz (Alias Taylor) Did Not Conceal Identity in Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16.—Bridgman Taylor or Horst von der Goltz, arrested in London on suspicion of being a German spy, was a guest at the Emerson Hotel here last Aug. 28. He registered as Major Baron Horst von der Goltz.

While here he said he was Chief of Staff of Gen. Roaul Madero, brother of the murdered President of Mexico, and a cousin of Gen. von der Goltz, who was appointed Governor of Belgium by the Kaiser. He also said he had been sent to this country on a mission by Gen. Villa.

The records of the State Department show that a passport was issued on Aug. 31, while von der Goltz was in Baltimore to a Bridgman W. Taylor, born in San Francisco on July 16, 1887. The application for the passport came through Fred Schneider, who has an office in the North German Lloyd Steamship Company's building in this city. Mr. Schneider says he did not know Taylor was von der Goltz when he made the application for a passport.

Von der Goltz was seen about the hotels in company with two fashionably dressed young women and his secretary. He was bitter in his denunciation of the English and placed the blame for the war upon the desire of Great Britain to crush Germany, so that she could control the trade of the world. He declared that if England won she would form a combination with Japan to crush the United States.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 18.—Horst von der Goltz was until the outbreak of the European war an officer of Gen. Villa's army in Mexico.

The young German was also under arrest in Mexico as a spy in 1913 when Federal officials at Chihuahua City held him under the death penalty. Intervention by German consular officials saved his life.

Von der Goltz passed through this city several weeks ago. He said he was on his way to Germany, where, he asserted, he was an officer in the reserves. He also claimed relationship to Field Marshall von der Goltz of the German Army and said that he was a Baron of a noble German family.

"THE GOOD OLD FIGHTING STOCK OF CENTURIES AGO"

Would you let your king and country
sink beneath the German wave?
While you've got a bone unbroken,
would you fail to be a slave?
Would you leave the call unanswered—
Britons rise and crush the foe?
Then you're not the good old fighting
stock of centhries ago!

Would you leave the cry unheeded of your brothers maimed and slain?
Would you have your name and honor tainted with the coward stain?
Would you take the brutal 'Teuton's' thrust without returning blow?
Then you're not the good old fighting
stock of centuries ago.

Would you let the dear old Union Jack be crushed 'neath foeman's tread?
Would you, while you've the strength to fight, leave unavenged the dead?
Then, O Britons, you're unworthy—unworthy of a foe;
You're not the good old fighting stock of centuries ago.

The LAPSE of ENOCH WENTWORTH

By ISABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Wolvertons"

ILLUSTRATIONS by ELLSWORTH YOUNG

COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY F. G. BROWNE & CO.

Merry nodded. He caught a glimpse of Wentworth's name and his own upon the flimsy thing they had called the bond. Enoch leaned back against the pillow and began to destroy the paper with slow deliberation, tearing it across and across until it was reduced to a heap of flakes which fluttered down into the hollow of his gaunt palm. He shook them into the envelope and handed it to Merry, who took it without a word and slipped it between the leaves of the bank-book.

"If you can trust me, Boy, until the right time comes and I reach the right place, I will make full restitution before the world."

"Don't, old man, let us bury this now and forever. Good God! isn't it restitution enough to have saved my life?"

"No," Enoch spoke with swift passion, "no, it isn't restitution. Don't stand in my way. You have to humor sick men, you know. Besides, I want to lay my soul bare to you now, Andrew. Had I been a Catholic I should have done it to a priest long ago, I suppose."

"Go, ahead, Enoch, I'll listen," he said gently.

Wentworth turned in bed and clasped his hands around one bent knee. "Years ago," he began brusquely, "I was wandering about in the Tennessee mountains on an assignment when I fell in with a chap who taught psychology in Yale. He was nothing wonderful, but his science was fascinating. Time and again, since those days, I have planned, if I could find the leisure, to go into psychology and study the thing out. Still, any man who knocks about the world as I have done learns to puzzle things out for himself. There must be something alluring, though, to be able to reduce the promptings of one's own soul to a science and then to work out a problem in yourself. Don't you think so?"

"I should imagine so. Still, it's an unopened book to me," Merry admitted.

"We used to sit and talk every night around the campfire. I remember once this young MacGregor explained to me why a man we had both known committed murder. He killed his wife first, then, horror-stricken, shot himself. It's a common enough story, you read it in the papers every day of the week, but it came close to us because we had both known the fellow well. He was a decent, quiet, cheerful citizen, with a genial, kindly way about him. His taking off seemed a mystery. None of us had even seen him angry. Suddenly he turned into a flaming fiend, a murderer, and a suicide. Nothing but insanity or the Yale man's theory explained it."

"What was his theory?"

Wentworth paused for a minute with a haunted look in his eyes. "He claims that the morals of every human being are molded during the first twenty years of his life. Into a fairly decent career there comes occasionally—for the life of me I can't remember his technical name for it—I should call it a moral lesion. Some sin which a man has committed, and you might say lived down, before he was twenty, crops out again years after and it conquers him. Each time he may repent and turn over a new leaf. The world looks on him not as an Admirable Crichton perhaps, but as a tolerably good fellow. Then suddenly, without the ghost of a warning, even after he imagines he has outgrown the tendency to that particular sin, there comes a temptation, and he goes under as if his backbone was gristle. He falls as quick as that!"

Wentworth paused for a moment and snapped his fingers. "Curious, isn't it?" he added.

"It certainly is curious," agreed Merry.

"When the career of this murderer was brought to the light of day, they found that once when he was a schoolboy, and again, when a friend stole his sweetheart, he might have committed murder if a weapon had been at hand. The third time a gun lay close to his elbow."

Andrew Merry did not speak, but sat watching Enoch with bewilderment in his eyes.

"I am going to tell you about two lesions which occurred in my own life. There was a third—you know about that one yourself."

Across the pale face of the invalid swept a wave of scarlet; then he began to talk slowly and hesitatingly. "I was in a Southern academy the first time it happened. I must have been seventeen or thereabouts. Prizes were to be given for a public oration and people were coming from everywhere to hear us. The governor was to address us. My father was a lawyer, one of the big lawyers of the state. He went to this school when he was a boy, and he had carried off the oration prize. His heart was set on my winning it. I toiled and toiled over that speech; it was about the death of Julius Caesar. I can remember, as I lay awake nights staring out into the darkness, how the speech came throbbing in my brain. I could never write, though, as I declaimed it to myself in the still dormitory. I used to go out into the woods and try to write. One day I gave up. I sat huddled against a stone wall which ran down the hill, dividing a pasture from the forest. There was a tall pine over my head and the crows were calling from the top of it. I can see the place yet."

Enoch lifted his eyes and turned to meet the steady glance of the man who sat beside the bed.

"Do you want to hear the story out?" he asked bluntly.

"Yes—if you are bound to tell it."

"It isn't an easy task to set the stark-naked soul of man before another's gaze, especially when it's a man's own soul; but I've been over this, step by step, during these bedridden days, and I'll feel better when it's out of my system."

"Are you sure?" Merry spoke gently.

"Yes, sure." The reflective tone had gone from Enoch's voice. It was emphatic. "Out there in the sunshine," he continued, "I realized what defeat meant. I knew my oration was merely a babble of senseless words; there was not a throb in it. Besides, I knew that I could not make it better. Suddenly, on the quiet hillside, I heard a voice close beside me."

There was a long pause. Wentworth turned his eyes from Merry and stared out at the window. A trumpet vine climbed over the back of the Waverly Place house and one scarlet blossom hung vivid between him and the sunshine.

"Say, old fellow," said Merry in a low voice, "you and I are friends, closer friends than we ever were. What's the use of raking up old memories if they hurt. The story of something you did when you were in swaddling clothes doesn't count. Drop it!"

"It does count," answered Wentworth stolidly. "I tell you it does count. It is the only thing that explains what I did—when you called my bluff. I have lain here—I've had days and nights with nothing to do but to think and to analyze things. Why, old man, I haven't had a chance like this for years before. Let me tell you my story; it's interesting even if it isn't much to my credit."

"All right, have your own way."

"I sat there in the shadow of the wall listening. It was young David Ross practising his oration. Dave came of what the niggers called 'po' white trash,' but he had ambition and genius and was working his way through school like a man. He had chosen the death of Caesar, as I had. I crouched there, scarcely breathing; I was afraid he would hear me and stop. His speech was great! As I sat looking out over the valley I could see the Roman warrior while he stood there in the Senate, down and out, hooted at and reviled, yet haughty and defiant, facing the enemies who had once been his friends. I began to sob, as a boy does in a shamed, husky, choked fashion. Suddenly a thought came to me. I leaped over the wall and held before Dave a new twenty-dollar gold-piece father had given me that morning. It bought his oration."

Wentworth paused as if in an embarrassment of shame. Merry watched him in silence.

"I feel—even now—the reluctant grip with which Dave held on to those sheets of blurred foolscap. I never gave a thought to what I had done. Every moment for twenty-four hours was needed to commit Dave's speech to memory. My father, proud and happy, gave me another twenty-dollar gold-piece. I carried it to Dave. He refused it, turning his back on me with angry scorn. Twenty years later I met him again. He had gone to congress and was blasting his way upwards toward fame. I was assigned to interview him. He remembered me instantly. For a moment he stared at me from head to foot, then he turned away without a word and never touched the hand I offered him. My God! how that hurt!" A shiver went through the man's body.

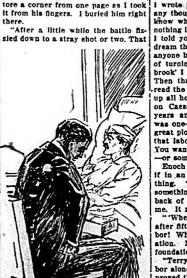
"That happened twenty-five years ago," said Merry hesitatingly. "You can't lay up a boyhood sin against a man. He changes—he's almost another human being."

"No, he isn't," answered Wentworth doggedly. "I want to show you that the psychological fellow was in the right. That was my first fall from grace; but there was a second lesion. It was worse, worse even than—than what I did to you, Merry. I was out in the Balkan mountains where the blamed barbarian Turks go tearing at each other's throats once in so often. The world looked on, waiting for a story of war. I had none to tell, nothing happened but a skirmish or two once in a while. There was nothing a man could make into a story. It was a wretched campaign. Young Forsyth, of the Tribune, and I hung together through it for months, living like stray dogs, sick to death of our job, and ready to throw it up at any moment. One morning at daybreak we were awakened by shooting. We scrambled from the cave where we had slept and looked down into the valley. We were in the very heart of a battle, and these savages were climbing over the rocks with their cutlasses flashing. They shrieked like maniacs, the bullets went flying about our heads. I crept back to the hole among the rocks where we had spent the night. I couldn't see what was happening; I didn't want to see. Death shrieks echoed all around and above me. It was the most hellish din of battle I ever listened to. I had turned coward. I lay there with every tooth in my head chattering. A nice confession for a man to make, eh?" asked Wentworth with a grim smile.

Merry half rose then dropped back into his chair. "Hold on, Enoch, I swear you're not fit for this sort of thing! Your temperature will go up, then the nurse—"

"Damn the nurse. I'm fit enough; keep still. I want to finish my story. Forsyth, the intrepid young fool, went creeping along the face of the cliff. He had never seen a battle before. I called to him to lie low, but he never heeded me. Through a crevice in the rock I saw him stretch his head over the chasm and crane his neck, then plunge down and begin to write as if he were mad. Once I sneaked out and tried to drag him in beside me. He fought like a wildcat, so I went back to shelter. The bullets pinged on the rocks all around me. Suddenly I heard a low, gurgling, awful cry and somebody called my name in a hoarse shout. It was Forsyth. I crept out. He stood on a cliff above me, clutching at his throat, then he toppled and fell. He came plunging down over the rocks until he reached my feet. He was dead, stark dead, when I pulled him into the cave. His notebook was clutched so tight in his hand that I tore a corner from one page as I took it from his fingers. I buried him right there.

"After a little while the battle fizzled down to a stray shot or two. That night under the gleam of a sputtering little torch I read Forsyth's story. It was tremendous—perfectly tremendous—perfectly tremendous! It read like inspired stuff. I had never dreamed the fellow had such a vocabulary. And he lay there close beside me, asleep—under the damp, warm, soft earth. I had a fit of the horrors. I put out my light, stuffed the pages of writing in my pocket, then went doubling and twisting down those wild mountains, dodging the enemy's campfires and their infernal bullets, until I reached the miserable little town in the valley we two men had our headquarters. I hurried to the telegraph office to send out Forsyth's story to the Tribune, with the news of his death. I was waiting to get the wire when somebody handed me a cable. I looked at it half-dazed. It came from my own paper, crazy because I had sent them no story; they were hungry as vultures for news. As soon as I could get a wire I sent out Forsyth's story."



"What's the Use of Raking Up Old Memories?"

"Under his name?" asked Merry quietly.

"No." Enoch lifted his head, looked at his friend with guilt and shame in his eyes, then he turned away. "No, I signed my own name to it. I sent it to my own paper. I wired the news of Forsyth's death to the Tribune."

Neither of the men spoke for some minutes. When Merry turned, Wentworth lay staring at him with a prayer for pity, comprehension, and forgiveness in his eyes.

"I want you to understand one thing," pleaded the older man. "When you called my bluff that morning and I wrote that bond, I was innocent of any thought of injury to you. I don't know what was in my mind. It was nothing in the world but an idle fancy. I told you so at the time. I did not dream that you could write a play. If anyone had told me you were capable of turning out 'The House of Esterbrook' I should have laughed at him. Then that day, when you came and read the manuscript—I had just given up all hope, as I did with the oration on Caesar. I had been toiling for years and years on a play. There was one—it had seemed to me like a great plot—but I had begun to realize that labor does not mean everything. You want inspiration, or genius or art—or something, and I didn't have it."

Enoch paused, wrinkling his eyes as if in an attempt to remember something. "I was trying to think of something Ellen Terry wrote on the back of a photograph she once gave me. It ran like this:

"'When am I to be an actress? Well, after fifteen years' labor, perhaps, Labor! Why, I thought it was all inspiration. No, labor and art are the foundation; inspiration—a result.'

"Terry wasn't altogether right. Labor alone won't land the prize. You've proved that, Boy."

"I don't know," said Merry vaguely.

"I do." The man's pale face flushed. "When you dropped in on me, eager as a young victor for a laurel wreath, I knew as surely as if a judge had passed sentence on me that my years and years of toil meant nothing but waste paper. Then, suddenly, as temptation had clutched at me twice before in my life, came a revenous desire for fame—the fame that another man had labored for and—"

"I understand," cried Merry. There was a thrill of compassion in his voice. "Now, dear old man, let's forget it. The one thing I can never forget is that you have raked me from the depths more than once. I might have been worse than dead today if it hadn't been for you."

"You never descended to the depths I did," said Wentworth abruptly.

"Sin—my variety of it or yours—is nothing but the difference in a man's taste. His palate dictates what he will eat. There is a moral palate, and if you go on slaking your appetite, there's a weakening of the moral tissue. Isn't that what your psychologists call it? If it had not been for you, Enoch, I might have been worse than dead today." Merry uttered the last sentence in an undertone. "I have a feeling, though, that I can never go so low again, because—"

He sat silent for a minute. Wentworth's eyes were fixed upon him like an insistent question. "Because Enoch," he went on in a steady voice, "because Dorcas has promised to be my wife."

"Oh!" cried Wentworth quickly. "Oh, thank God for that!"

NEW SUBMARINES FAST

K-5 and K-6 Run From Boston to Newport Inside of Ten Minutes

NEWPORT, R.I., Nov. 17—Through a southwest gale and rough seas the submarines K-5 and K-6, part of the new fourth division of the Atlantic submarine flotilla, sailed from Boston to Newport to-day in 9 hours and 44 minutes. They passed through the Cape Cod Canal, thus cutting off sixty miles and avoiding much rough weather.

The little vessels will take on torpedoes and go to Pensacola, where all the submarines of the flotilla will engage in tests against aeroplanes, battleships and destroyers next month. A board of officers watching the work of the submarines is to decide necessary changes in the construction of such craft.

These submarines are the latest additions to the flotilla, and were constructed at the Fore River plant in Quincy, Mass.

Destroyer McDonough with submarine G-4, arrived from New ork Navy Yard via New London yesterday afternoon.

MAKING 1000,000 RIFLES

Winchester Company Also Turning Out 100,000,000 Cartridges

HARTORD, Conn., Nov. 18—The New Haven factory of the Winchester Repeating Arms Company is bein operated night and day with more than 5,000 hands employed in the day shift and half that number at nights. They are turning out war material. The company is putting up new buildings to cost $500,000 and the construction work is being pushed twenty-four hours a day.

It is reported that the company has an order for 100,000 army rifles, and is under contract to complete 800 rifles every working day for six months. These guns are said to be similar to the standard rifles used in the French Army.

Officials of the company have been questioned as to the destination of the arms and of a recent order for 100,000,000 cartridges, but all they would say was that they were "ordered by a misisonary from South America who dropped into the factory a few days ago while he was on a vacation."

WATERLOO TO BE KAISER'S NEXT STAND

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 19.—A stinging hail storm swept the trenches in France and Belgium yesterday and covered them and their human prisoners with a white layer of icy, cold dampness. At the time, which was towards midday, heavy guns thundered from their concealed emplacements from Nieuport to La Bassee, and since the German offensive was again due, our men had to lie prone and wait. They waited patiently, good-temperedly, willingly and bravely, although they were cold to the marrowbone and their clothes wet and sticking to their skins, their boots clogged with heavy mud and their feet soaked by insistent drips from their great coats.

Our men are waiting for the next German offensive movement with confidence. Some are wondering whether another attack will be made on our position before the end of the year, while others, also well informed, state that the Germans are on the point of retreating. A Belgian, who states he walked through the German lines from Brussels, informs me that the German transport wagons have been choking the roads to Brussels for several days. He believes these are being removed into safety before the fighting line has to be drawn back.

The Germans have a line of defence from Waterloo to Namur before defending the line of the Meuse. This line has been strongly entrenched. The field of Waterloo is stated to be full of concrete trenches laid in such a way that they can be defended indefinitely, and occupied in spite of the rigors of winter without causing discomfort to the troops. Here one of the great battles of the near future will be fought. In some important quarters there is undisguished hope that the Germans will make a few more attacks before retreating.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Gen. Villa has taken possession of Leon without the firing of a shot. He now is marching southward on Silao, en route to Mexico City.

Ten inmates of the State Reform School at Marianna, Fla., are reported to have lost their lives yesterday in a fire which destroyed the institution.

SIMPLE SERVICE HELD.

Lord Roberts' Body Now Lies In Room at Ascot Home.

ASCOT, Eng., Nov. 19.—Covered with the Union Jack and with his khaki hat and sword upon it, the coffin containing the body of Field Marshal Lord Roberts of Kandahar, now lies in the small room in his modest residence here, in which the great soldier was wont to conduct family prayer and in which there is a small altar and a crucifix.

The coffin arrived from Folkestone by a special train yesterday afternoon. The ceremony which followed was of a most simple description. The coffin was borne by employes of the late field marshal's estate to his house, where a brief service, attended by Lady Roberts and her daughters and a few privileged friends, was conducted by the rector of Ascot.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Assertions that exporters had already reduced the available wheat supply in the United States to within about 1,000,000 bushels of the total a year ago, had much to do today with giving prices a decided lift. The market closed firm at 7-8c to 1c above last night. Corn gained ¼c to 3-8c net, and oats 3-8c to ½c. In provisions the outcome was 5c to 35c decline.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 18.—The wheat market was erratic during the early hours of today. Wheat prices opened unchanged to ⅝c higher, easing off shortly after to a fraction lower than Tuesday's close, and before noon rallying to high points again. The volume of trading was moderate. During the early part of the day no new sales for export could be located. Prices held steady until the close, which was ⅝c to ⅞c higher for wheat, oats ¼c to ⅝c higher, and flax 1½c to 1¾c higher.

The cash demand was generally good for all grades of wheat, altho it was somewhat erratic. Certain times of the day there was a keen demand, at others it was slow. Exporters were buying fair quantities, while offerings were limited. Other grains were in fair demand.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—The improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat noted yesterday was renewed again today, and as the prices bid in some cases showed a further advance of 3d to 6d per quarter sales of a few loads were made, but business on the whole is quiet on account of the limited amount of ocean grain room available from all ports.

The highest rate paid for a full cargo of grain for shipment from this port has been 7s per quarter, which is equivalent to 21c per bushel. There was no change in the condition of the local market for coarse grains, prices being unchanged with a steady trade passing in some lines.

Demand for butter shows no improvement, but there is a fair enquiry for cheese. Eggs are firm under a good demand.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 827 cattle, 1092 hogs, 1604 sheep and lambs and 99 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Twenty-two choice steers sold at $7.50; good at $7 to $7.25; medium at $6.50 to $6.75; common at $6 to $6.25; light butchers' heifers at $5.50 to $5.75; choice cows at $6.50 to $6.75; good cows at $6 to $6.25; medium cows at $5.25 to $5.75; canners and cutters at $3.50 to $4.50; bulls at $4.50 to $6.50; and an odd bull of extra quality will sometimes bring $6.75 and $7.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice feeders at $6.25 to $6.50; good feeders at $6 to $6.25; medium steers at $5.25 to $5.50; stockers at $4 to $5.

Milkers and Springers.

The receipts of milkers and springers were moderate, and prices were steady at $55 to $95, the bulk going between $70 and $85 each. Backward springers are not wanted.

Veal Calves.

Choice calves, $9 to $10; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $6.50 to $7.50; common, $5 to $6, and inferior eastern grass calves at $3 to $4.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $5 to $5.75 for light, and heavy ewes at $3.50 to $4; culls at $2 to $3; choice lambs at $7.50 to $7.90; heavy lambs at $6.50 to $7; cull lambs at $5.50 to $6.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $7.90; weighed off cars at $8.15, and $7.50 f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—At the C. P. R. live stock market there was no actual change in the condition of the market for butchers' cattle today, the feeling being steady owing to the fact that the offerings of such were not in excess of the requirements. There were no choice steers on the market, but as the weather was cold and favorable for keeping stock, the demand for the lower grades of cattle was fair and a few good steers sold at $7, fair at $6.50 to $6.75, medium at $6 to $6.25 and common at $5 to $5.50, while butchers' cows brought from $4 to $6 and bulls from $4.75 to $5 per cwt.

The tone of the market for small meats remains firm owing to the somewhat limited supply coming forward, for which there is good demand, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of Ontario lambs at Quebec at $7 to $7.50 per cwt., while ewe sheep changed hands at $4.75 to $5, and bucks and culls at $4 to $5.50 per cwt. The demand for calves was good and sales were made at $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality. The tone of the market for hogs was firm, with a good demand for all offerings and sales of selected lots were made at $8.40 to $8.60 per cwt., weighed off cars.

Turkey's action in tearing up the capitulations has at least introduced another comparatively unfamiliar word in common use to join mortorium and a few other products of the war.

British Transport Sunk?

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 19.—There are persistent rumors here that the British transport Crown of Galicia has been attacked by German cruisers and been sunk. It is not stated whether the vessel was sunk by her own crew or by the Germans.

The crew of the transport, it is said, was saved and will be landed at Valparaiso by the German steamer Rhakotis of the Kosmos Line.

The Crown of Galicia was a steamer of 4,821 tons. She was built in 1906 and belonged to the Crown Steamship Co.

BOOKS FOR SOLDIERS.

Tons of Literature Is Forwarded By Britons to Salisbury Plain.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Thirty tons of books, consisting of sixty thousand volumes, have been received at Salisbury for the use of Canadians, and four libraries have been formed in each camp, in charge of the board of chaplains. Periodicals are received by the carload. Major Stacey, divisional chaplain, suggests that the people in Canada should form circles in each township for writing letters to the men from their own districts to keep them posted on home matters. Long letters from lads in camp must not be expected. The work is too strenuous now to permit of them.

British Naval Losses.

LONDON, Nov. 19. — Winston Spencer Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, stated in the House of Commons yesterday in reply to a question that the total British naval casualties to date were: Officers killed, 222; wounded, 37; men killed, 3,455; wounded, 428; missing, 1. This list, the First Lord said, did not include the missing officers and men in the royal naval division at Antwerp and on the British cruiser Good Hope, sunk off the Chilean coast, which totaled 1,000 and 875 respectively.

One of the Austrian prisoners of war at Fort Henry was released on parole yesterday and left for Philadelphia. He is in ill-health. Ten more Germans arrived last night from Sarnia.

Yesterday afternoon police dragging in the Kingston harbor pulled up the dead body of Private F. W. Harrison, 33 years old, who had been missing from the ranks since Monday night.

The German steamer Karnac was yesterday declared by the Chilean authorities to be an auxiliary transport. She was at once notified that she must remain in the harbor at Antofagasta until the end of the war.

Gen. Jose Carbajal, a Carranza chief, was killed in an engagement near Puerto Mexico Tuesday, when with his troops, he joined Villa's forces and attacked Gen. Carranza, a brother of the Constitutionalist first chief.

Kaiser Promises New Emden.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 19.—Replying to a telegram from the Town of Emden, after which was named the cruiser which wrought so much damage in the Indian Ocean until it was overtaken and destroyed by the Australian cruiser Sydney, the Kaiser sent the following message:

"A new and stronger Emden shall arise in the German navy, which will duplicate the feats of the ship that was lost. On its bow will be affixed an iron cross, to commemorate the glory of the old Emden."

As a result of the Baltimore "Star Spangled Banner" celebration an association has been formed "to foster the love of the American flag." That association has tackled about the easiest job of any organization in the United States.

A Satisfactory Store

A sale epidemic has corrupted the Clothing Business. Coats, Suits and Trousers are marked double their worth and then reduced to half; If some advertisers were compelled to establish the truth of their statements, it would ruin them---since it would force them to be honest.

Honest Value!

The wonderful success of this business has been caused by giving honest value.

People buy at this store because they know they get value for their money here and are certain of satisfaction.

The success of a store Depends Upon What It Does, Not On What It Promises To Do.

BIG ORDER FOR HOSIERY GOES TO KINGSTON

The Kingston Hosiery Co. has just secured orders for the British and French Governments that will keep the Company running not only full time but overtime for the next five or six months. The order consists of 35,000 dozen half hose, 3,000 dozen suits of underwear and 1,500 dozen sweaters. The sweaters and the underwear are what may be termed a "hurry order" and must be completed by December 15th—less than a month from now. Hence it is that even now work in the mill is being caried on until 9 o'clock each night and a full complement of help is as busy as can be. The orders for half hose are less pressing, although they must be completed without unnecessary delay. What with these orders and the usual trade orders which the Company always has—and its goods are in greater demand than ever—the Hosiery Co. is assured of full operation for at least a half year to come, which will mean that all its employees will have steady work all winter.

INTERESTING SPECIAL NEWS LETTER

From Our Own Correspondent at Salisbury Plains

Salisbury Plain,
Nov. 6th. 19191.

The Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Since my last communication which I trust has been duly received long ere this, owing to the inclement weather conditions and call of duty, was unable to send a more detailed account of our doings since our arrival in England.

We have had a review by Field Marshal Lord Roberts, but the event was marred by rainy weather, which has prevailed persistently for the past two weeks. On Nov. 4th, however, we had a visit from their Majesties the King and Queen, accompanied by Lord Kitchener and General Pitcairn Campbell of the Southern command. Among visitors from Canada were Hon. G. H. Perley, acting High Commissioner for the Dominion; Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, and Lord Roberts. Many at home have had the pleasure of witnessing the review at Valcartier. The training we have received since that time has had a marked effect on the efficiency and excellency of our troops in every respect and has brought admiration and compliments from the highest military authorities here. Our friends at home will be glad to know that their confidence in us has not been forgotten.

The following is the King's message to the Canadian troops:—

"It gives me great pleasure to have this opportunity of welcoming to the Mother Country so fine a contingent of troops from the Dominion of Canada. Their prompt rally to the Empire's call is of inestimable value both to the fighting strength of my army, and in the evidence which it gives of the solidarity of the Empire. The general appearance and physical standard of the different units are highly creditable, and I am glad to hear of the serious and earnest spirit which pervades all ranks, for it is only by careful training and leading on the part of all that the demands of modern war can be met. I shall follow with interest the progress and work of my Canadians."

Many of our boys have had leave and visited London, where they were well received and every courtesy shown to them. During my visit of three days I met many Belgian refugees. I also had the pleasure of meeting three Belgian officers and found them to be very interesting and delightful companions, especially so as they have just come from the front where the fighting has been fiercest. It is enough to say that the every-day stories which greet the eye in the daily papers are quite sufficient; therefore, I refrain from repeating the descriptions of carnage and bloodshed I have had from those who know. It would make any honest heart ache with pain and tremble with dread. Their war stories were sufficient to convince me that war is truly hell.

I also had the privilege of seeing the German spy who was on trial for his life, as he was being escorted to Middlesex Guild Hall. No doubt you have already had the details of the trial.

Now, as to the boys of the 34th, with the 2nd Battery, 1st Brigade, at West Down, North Salisbury Plain; are we down hearted? NO! Everybody's happy although the weather is rotten, and—talk about mud! Well, this place takes the cake.

The numerous air-craft afford much interest. They are as common as crows. It's nothing to see six or eight flying around or hovering over camp, looping the loop, etc.

Sergt. "Bill" Black says if he don't "kick out" this trip, he's going to join the Home Guard the next.

The Candy Twins, A. E. Harris and G. Harris, have just returntd from Bath. They says it has Bath, Ont., beat a mile, especially for girls and gum drops.

Our tonsorial artist, G. Doxsee, is going to transfer to the aerial squad. He always was a high flyer. He is tired of the limber rides he has had.

Driver Geo. Clarke, who had a serious accident while on rough exercise, is progressing nicely. George got a nasty kick on the leg and it was feared that the bone was injured.

By special request of a number of the boys, I here venture a suggestion to our gentlemen friends at home on their behalf:—A caddy or two of McDonald's chewing tobacco for Xmas would be very acceptable to all who use it here— and the number who do use it is greater than those who prefer Wrigley's Spearmint Gum.

When do we go to the front? If preparation and final inspection and painting of steel work has any significance, also the issue of special clothing, we are going to move soon. Those on leave are warned to hold themselves in readiness if they receive telegrams or notice to the addresses given by them before departure. It is rumored we go to France, and again to Egypt. Which?.

Some of the boys from the 15th called on us. They report all well and getting along fine.

Regards to all,
SPAFFORD.

GERMAN ATROCITIES

Scotch Lady Says They are not Exaggerated.

W. H. Albery of Brockville, has received a letter from his niece, Mrs. Mary Robb written from her home in the town of Broughty Ferry, near Dundee, Scotland, in which she related many interesting facts concerning the precautions taken to safeguard the city and the letter continued, "the Germans seem to be so cruel. They are cutting off children's hands so that they will not be of any use. A lady in Aberdeen has taken nine children (Belgians) and out of the nine only one has hands, the others have had their hands cut off by the Germans, it seems such a terrible thing to do."

Mr. Alberry has written his niece, asking her if possible to personally investigate the pitiable condition of the unfortunate children and inform him immediately of the facts surrounding their case.

DOING A BIT

A little ancedote which shows the complete freemasonary between the fishermen and the Navy appears in the current issue of the Fishing Gazette. The Dundee trawler U.S.A. on her way home to market, was spoken to by a British battleship, which inquired if she had any fish. The skipper replied, "Yes," and with a little manoeuvreing got alongside the warship. He passed up practically the contents of his hold valued, roughly at $100.

The captain of the battleship offered immediate payment. But the sturdy smacksman said it "would be a poor tally if he couldn't do a bit for those who were protecting him, and he'd thank the man-o'-warsmen to cast off, that he might go and catch some more fish."

"Have they much money?"

"No; I'm sure they haven't. I overheard her telling a friend that they didn't care a bit for society."—Detroit Free Press.

PLANS BEING DRAWN FOR NEW DRY DOCK

It Will be 1,150 Feet Long and Will Cost About Three Million Dollars

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—Draughtsmen of the Department of Public Works are at work on plans of the new dry dock at Halifax. The plans, which will be completed next month, provide for a dock 1,150 feet long and 180 feet wide. It will be specially adapted for repair work on ships of the Royal Navy, and is estimated to cost $3,000,000.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to an Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.—3069.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

W. W. CORY, C.M.G.,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

POSITIONS UNCHANGED

German Bombardment Is Repeated on Small Scale.

Infantry Attacks Following Artillery Fire Are Easily Repulsed by the Allies and Lost Ground Is Recovered — French Zouaves Dislodge Enemy From Position Near Bixschoote—Germans Deserting.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The latest official communications recording the operations on the western battlefields, are much the same as those of preceding days. There has been fighting virtually all along the front, but without appreciable change in the situation.

From the coast of Flanders to the River Lys on the Franco-Belgian border, much of which has been flooded by the allies to hinder the German attacks, there has been a repetition, on a somewhat smaller scale of the bombardment which the invaders invariably resort to in the hope of breaking down the allies' resistance before infantry attacks, and in isolated spots, attacks in force, but according to the French and British reports, all these have been repulsed.

The Anglo-French forces, which have been holding the territory around Ypres, have again been subjected to German attacks, fresh German troops attempting what the Prussian Guards a few days previously had failed to do—force the allies out of their trenches.

As was the case with Prussian Guards the Germans who made the latest effort appear again to have taken the first line of trenches, but like the Guards, found themselves on the flanks and were compelled to give back the ground gained after holding it for a short time.

Both sides, as shown by the casualty lists of the officers, are losing heavily in the fighting, but the Germans, being on the offensive and being so often enfiladed after success was so nearly in their hands, are said to have suffered enormously.

The French Zouaves, who have frequently distinguished themselves by dashing charges, have again been utilized to dislodge the Germans from a position near Bixschoote, over which there has been much fighting, and, according to the French communication, have again been successful.

These incidents are just a sample of what has been occurring in Northern France, along the Aisne Valley, around Rheims, in the Argonne forest and on the banks of the River Meuse. First the one, and then the other, gains an advantage, but when all is told, the general situation remains about as it was.

Reports come from France that the Germans are preparing to make another attempt to get through to the coast by way of La Bassee, but, like the rumors that they are preparing for a retreat, there is no confirmation of it.

The Amsterdam Telegraaf reports that the Germans lost 2,700 men in the recent fighting at Dixmude. Nieuport is said to be badly damaged by artillery fire.

The legislative and administrative staffs of the Chamber of Deputies will go to Paris to-day, as a prelude to the return of the French Government, which removed to Bordeaux when the approach of the German armies threatened the security of the capital.

Part of the war levy on the Belgians has been distributed among the German soldiers, each receiving about a dollar, according to The Vossiche Zeitung.

Transfer of German troops on a large scale from the Russian frontier for a renewal of the fight to capture Calais is reported in a Rotterdam despatch. It is stated that all railway service in Belgium has been shut off, and communication between Holland and Germany closed. The Germans are said to have sent a large number of heavy siege guns from Liege to the region of Arras.

Large numbers of German soldiers are deserting from the posts in the Belgian provinces of Antwerp and Limbourg, and are crossing the border into Holland, says an article in The Amsterdam Telegraaf.

COMMANDOS BROKEN UP.

Gen. Botha Reports Further Successes In South Africa.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—In South Africa Gen. Louis Botha, commander-in-chief of the defence forces, reports the breaking up of additional rebel commandos and the capture of guns, ammunition and provisions.

The Earl of Crewe disclosed in the House of Lords yesterday that in East Africa the Indian troops are being employed against the Germans. That there has been heavy fighting is shown by the fact that the British casualties to date total 900.

Beyer's Force Routed.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 19—Following a running fight west of Belfontaine in which four rebels were killed, 20 wounded, and 100 captured, Gen. Beyers and 1,500 rebels are in full retreat before the loyalists. The loyalists pursued the rebels until the former's horses gave out and they were forced to abandon the chase.

German Base Wrecked.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A Rotterdam despatch to The Daily Mail says:—

"The British fleet received information Monday which led them to carry out a vigorous bombardment at Knocke and Zeebrugge on the Belgian coast. The Solvay Company's works, on the Bruges Ship Canal, which are being used as a base for German military trains, was wrecked. A train of five cars, filled with soldiers, was struck by a shell, took fire and was destroyed. Much damage was done to the German stores and supplies."

TWO Exceptionally Liberal Dressmaking Offers For The Month of November

That will insure our large Dressmaking Staff of steady employment.

Your new Suit, Coat or Dress cut and first fitting free.

During the month of November we will cut and give the first fitting free on any suit, coat or dress material bought in the store that sells at $1.00 a yard or upwards. This is an offer that has no precedent in The Ritchie Store. When one considers that in the cutting and first fitting lies the style and success of your garment, you will undoubtedly make haste to take advantage of this very liberal offer, especially when we tell you that the cutting and fitting will be done personally by Miss Peterson, our capable dressmaking artist, one of the best in her line. Although this offer will be good for the entire month of November, we would advise ladies to make the selection of their suit, coat or dress material at once, while there is still a large and varied selection to choose from. Remember, this offer is good on any material that sells at $1.00 and upwards.

Your New Dress Made to Order $10.00

Your New Suit Tailored to Order $12.00

In order that we may be able to give employment to our entire staff of girls in the Dressmaking Department, we have decided to make up any silk or other material from our stock at or over $1.00 per yard, in any fashionable style of dress you may choose, under the personal supervision of Miss Peterson, and charge Only Ten Dollars for the making. To make a suit from any suiting in stock at $1.00 per yard or over we will charge Only Twelve Dollars for the making. These prices will not cover the cost of the labor, but we are willing to lose something in order to give all our hands steady employment.

Says His Rifle Fires 200 Shots A Minutes

Rochester Man Invents Shoulder Gun Which Approaches Capacity of a Gatling

MAY SELL IT TO GERMANS

Henry W. Sweeting Asserts 90 Shots Can be Fired Consecutively by One Pull on Trigger

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—A one-man gun, invented by a Rochester man, and guaranteed to increase a soldier's fighting efficiency twenty or thirty times, is for sale. Its inventor, Harry W. Sweeting, says he has begun negotiations with Germany for the sale of the invention, which he has protected by American patents. Mr. Sweeting is now in New York on his way to Washington. Yesterday he admitted that he was trying to sell the gun to Germany, but hinted that there was some probability of negotiations with the U. S. government.

The new gun weighs only nine pounds, half a pound more than the present standard rifle. It will fire from 165 to 200 shots a minute, Mr. Sweeting said, ninety shots consecutively without being taken from the shoulder. He says the velocity is 2,700 feet a second.

"By holding the trigger back," Mr. Sweeting said, "ninety shots are fired. The ejector is on the under side. The sight is only three inches from the eye, giving a quicker and more certain aim than in the present rifles, in some of which the sight is thirteen inches from the eye.

"My gun has only one-third as many working parts as the present rifle. There is not a flat spring in the gun, and all the parts are inclosed, which protects them from the weather. It has safety locks which make it impossible to fire after the gun misses fire, an a self-cleaning device. Give me the gun to get down a man a mile away who is six feet from a tree, and I will get him before he gets to the tree. If I should fail I can shoot him through the tree if it is not more than eighteen inches in diameter."

The inventor has been working on the invention for more than a year. His thirty-eight pages of specifications are registered with the Patent Office.

ROYAL FAMILY APPLY FOR THE WAR LOAN

King and Prince of Wales Heavy Subscribers--Queen of Spain Takes Stock

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Special—The British war loan has been heavily subscribed to by the Royal family. Lord Revelstoke, on behalf of the Prince of Wales, tendered for £500,000 of stock. The King, through the same channel, applied for one million, but it is understood a quarter of this stock is intended for the Queen of Spain, another quarter for ex-Empress Eugenie. Princess Henry of Battenberk is taking £160,000. Bankers with German connections between them have applied for six million.

There has been a record demand for the British war loan. Over £600,000,000 is already subscribed.

The Chronicle financial expert says: "This is a triumph for finance, as great as any military victory that can be gained on the battlefield. It would be quite easy to close the lists at once, for the money required has been more than obtained, but the Government desire to give every opportunity to the smaller investor, who is generally rather late in making application."

LORD ROBERTS PAID TRIBUTE TO FRENCH

LONDON, Nov. 19.—(Special)—Lord Roberts wrote an interesting letter to Lady French on reading Sir John French's first despatch from France, printed in the preface to the new life of Sir John French:

"My dear Lady French,—I write these few lines to tell you how much I admire your husband's despatch, and how proud I am of the splendid work done by the troops under his command. When the whole story of the war comes to be known, the masterly way in which the retreat from Mons under vastly superior numbers was carried out will be remembered as one of the finest military exploits ever achieved."

Supposed Spy Was Released

American Spent Five Days at Fort Henry

Was on His Way From Montreal When Arrested--Proved His Citizenship

KINGSTON, Nov. 19.—A young man arrested at Prescott as a German spy was brought to the fort some time ago, but on giving substantial proof that he was an American and born in Pittsburg, Pa., he was allowed his liberty on Tuesday evening.

The young fellow was on his way west from Montreal and on attempting to cross over the St. Lawrence river at Prescott on the ferry, was taken into custody by the authorities and sent to Fort Henry as a war prisoner. He insisted all the time that he was an American, but thinking that he was putting up a bluff, the officials made him show proofs. He gave the officers at the fort a statement containing where he was born, his nationality, etc., which was forwarded to Ottawa for investigation. The authorities there got in touch with Pittsburgh, where he said he was born and in a few days, after looking up the records, they found that his statement was true. He was then released from the fort, after being a free boarded of the Government for five days.

Yesterday afternoon he applied at the kitchen at Rockwood Hospital for a handout, stating that he had not had a bite to eat since he left the Fort on Tuesday. He said that he was going west as soon as he could get out of the city. He stated also that he had been well used at the Fort and rather enjoyed the experience of being a war prisoner.

ONLY INQUIRIES MADE IN TURKISH CAPITAL

No Explanation Demanded by U. S Of the Firing on the Tennessee

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—(Special)—Neither the State nor the Navy Department received to-day any further information as to the shots fired at the launch of the cruiser Tennessee as it passed across the harbor from Vourlouah toward the Turkish port of Smyrna. In the absence of details, no further orders have been sent to Captain Oman of the cruiser North Carolina or to Captain Decker of the Tennessee, nor have further directions been sent by the State Department to Henry Monganthau, the American Ambassador at Constantinople.

At the State Department it was explained to-day that yesterday's despatch to Mr. Morganthau did not demand an explanation of the Turkish Government, but merely directed that inquiries be made into the circumstances arising at Smyrna

Secretary Daniels is doing everything in his power to get full details from Captain Decker.

DUKE AND AMBASSADOR SEE DOMINION VAULTS

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—(Special)—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British Ambassador to the United States, to-day, at the invitation of the Finance Minister, inspected the Dominion Treasury and the Government's specie and security holdings in the strong boxes of the eastern block of the department buildings. The gold in coin and bullion held for the Bank of England, along with Government and company bonds and securities aggregating many hundreds of millions of dollars, were also looked over. The Duke and the Ambassador expressed the keenest interest in the methods of weighing and storing gold coin and bullion. The vaults of the Dominion Treasury are among the largest and most modern on the continent.

ENOUGH REGIMENTS NOW, THE DEPARTMENT THINKS

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—(Special)—John Best, M.P. for Dufferin, and Col. Preston of Orangeville were in Ottawa yesterday to ask the Militia Department to give official recognition to a Dufferin regiment which is planned. The Department was told that the cost of equipment and organization would be met from private funds. The view taken by the department, however, is that at present encouragement should be given only to recruits for active service, and that there are enough militia regiments in the country at the present juncture.

MAJOR C.B.O. SYMONS IN THICK OF THE FIGHT

Former R. M. C. Officer Within 150 Yards of German Trenches---He Has Made Some Dangerous Reconnaissances Crawling up to Bridges

A Kingston lady has received a letter from Major C. B. O. Symons, formerly professor in the Royal Military College, Kingston, and who is at present at the front with the 7th company of Royal Engineers, 4th division. The letter is dated the 20th of October, and contains some very interesting news of the strenuous work the British are doing in the line of battle. Major Symons says:

"Our line is very long, and the whole msut be run as one, so one's days vary from great rush to comparative idleness. The idleness does not so often come the way of the sapers, for we have a multitude of works, such as bridges, roads, trenches, etc. Our main work and moves are perforce carried out by night, because of aeroplanes. Besides, most of my work is right up at the very forefront, or even in advance of it, where it would be quite impossible to work in any sort of light. We crawl about quietly and silently and put up our barricades or entanglements or make the trenches. I have been within 150 yards of the enemy's trenches on these occasions, so it is obvious that night and dark nights are the only possible hours of work.

"Within the last week or so, the Germans have taken to setting farms, houses, churches or anything alight so as to illuminate the surroundings and try and snipe us. We don't get much of any shelling at night, but there is plenty of promiscuous firing. The night before last a regular fusilade went on from both sides over our heads, we, lying down, listening to the plugs of the bullets. If anything, our most eerie work is an engineering reconnaissance. Then, of course, there are at most two or perhaps only myself, and one crawls right up to whatever one wants to find out about. I have had some bridges to tackle in this way. One I did by daylight in a fog, but one was so visible that pretence was useless. I walked slap up to it as if out for a morning stroll, and found out all I wanted. I ought to have been plugged a dozen times, but expect the Germans did not want to give away their positions. I had the satsifaction of being the first across this particular bridge, having chosen a very opportune moment, I think, when the guard had gone off for a drink. Anyhow they came back half an hour later and were very much surprised to find us in possesion.

About The Canadians

"I really don't know what will be done with the Canadian contingent. I expect, though, they will all form one division and not come over yet awhile. It would be sheer murder to put untrained troops on the firing line. Even with the best shots and intelligence in the world, they would suffer enormous losses. War as the Germans make it is a very costly thing, and requires the very best of training to keep down the casualty lists. Their own are simply appalling. They made a very furious attack on this particular part of the line three days ago. We lost fairly heavily, but their losses were awful, quite five to one. We are still trying to bury them, but the vast majority we cannot get at as they are between the two lines. I really hope they will not send any of our new troops out till thoroughly trained. We have a great name with French and Belgians and the Germans are reported to be in a great funk of us, so it would be a pity to 'loose face' by sending out untrained men to be slaughtered.

"You should just pass through one or two of the French and Belgian towns that the Germans have been in just see the mess they have made of them, hear what they have done to the poor women and children, see the wanton useless destruction, and see how we are welcomed by all for driving them out. Ye gods! they are real brutes, and will have an awful bill to pay some day.

"You would be surprised at some of the quaint places I have slept in—all sort and conditions, varying from a chateau to a cow shed, anything that will shelter one when one stops for the night. I had my clothes off yesterday, for the first time since October 6th (two weeks.)"

CLAIMS TO BE BRITON

Proprietor of Wrecked Restaurant Would Reopen

PARIS, Nov. 19.—Among the Austro-German establishments destroyed by excited crowds here in the course of the mobilization was Appendrodt's restaurant, situated on the Grand Boulevard. The windows were broken and the interior was pillaged. After having been boarded up for ten weeks, the restaurant has been redecorated and will soon reopen. A sign announces that it is the property of H. Appendrodt, a British subject, who has ten English, but no foreign branches. Large type posters also attest that the proprietor has given $5,000 to the Prince of Wales' fund, and $10,000 to the British Red Cross, and that the first week's receipts of the new restaurant will be turned over to the military hospital of the Ninth Section. In view of the violent attacks which the Paris press makes daily against naturalized Austro-German business men, who are alleged to be more dangerous than undisguised Germans, it is doubtful whether Appendrodt, who has been supposed to be connected with an Austrian firm of caterers, will be allowed to trade here, even under the sign of an English tea room.

Plan Was Fatal

British Spies' Reports Brought Death to Germans

DUNKIRK, November 19.—A week ago, the Germans near the coast noticed, that the English warships' fire spared the houses on the sea front at Middelkerke. They accordingly took up their headquarters in these housese. The plan became known to British spies, and the houses were suddenly bombarded fiercely by five vessels at once. The German casualties were enormous. After the firing had ceased, stretcher parties went from house to house collecting the dead. A scouting officer watched the process and estimated the number killed at 1,700.

William Johnson Seriously Injured

Fell off a Train Near Tweed--His Right Arm Cut off

HAVELOCK, Nov. 19.—Mr. Wm. Johnson, son of Mr. Jno. W. Johnson of Preneveau, a brakeman employed on the C.P.R. here, met with serious and perhaps fatal injuries at Buller Siding, near Tweed, on Monday night about 6 o'clock, when he fell off a box car while engaged in shunting operations. Four cars passed over the unfortunate lad before the crew were aware of the accident. His right arm was cut off above the elbow, the toes of one foot crushed, his head badly cut, and his back injured to an extent yet unknown. He was taken to the Huycke House at Tweed, where physicians and nurses are doing all in their power to save his life, but little hope is held out for his recovery.

CANAL GUARD INCREASED

WELLAND, Nov. 20.—(Special.)—The force from the 44th Regiment on canal guard duty has been increased from 299 to 338. Recruits have been taken in this week to make up the increase. Seven members of St. John's Ambulance Brigade left this morning for Toronto, their services having been accepted for field ambulance service with the second contingent.

Charges Denied Years in Advance Of Formulation

Curious Military Textbook was Issued in Germany in 1906

FOR WAR USE IN FRANCE

Specimen Letter for Replying to French Commander's Claims of Violation of International Law

PARIS, Nov. 19.—Among the many instances of German foresight in preparing for the present war, not the least curious is a book called "The Military Interpreter," by Captain von Scharsenort, professor and libarion of the Berlin Academy of war. This volume was published in 1906, says the Temps, and is composed of reports, letters, circulars and notices for use in France during the German occupation.

On page 22 in this model letter to the commander-in-chief of the French army, in reply to a supposed circular accusing the German troops of numerous violations of international law. "Letter to the Generalissimo of the Enemy:

"In a circular of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, you have reproached the German troops with numerous violations of international law. The German troops are alleged to have rendered themselves guilty of acts of hostility against ambulances; of having taken prisoner M. A.—— in the midst of one of the ambulance corps organized by him; of having made use of explosive bullets; of having forced the peasants of the environs of S—— to work at digging trenches under the fire of the fortress; of having attempted to send food and munition trains, etc., under cover of the sign adopted by the Geneva convention, and lastly, a doctor, while tending a wounded Prussian soldier, is alleged to have been killed by him.

"I have made inquiries with the view of learning if anything had taken place which could have been transformed by informants unworthy of credence or of evil intention, into the monstrosities you have denounced. An inquiry of this kind offered difficulties all the greater inasmuch as the statements were drawn up in a form extraordinary vague for official assertions of so grave a character. Every indication of the name of the place and the time is completely wanting in two cases in which reference is made to witnesses and their statements. In the cases of the explosive bullets and the peasants being forced to dig trenches neither the tenor of the evidence nor the names of witnesses or informers were indicated.

"The inquiry conducted on our side has found a real but singularly distorted basis for one alone of the accusations brought against the German troops. It is correct that M. A.—— was arrested, and that he was occupied in tending the wounded, but his arrest was not effected in the midst of the ambulances. It was caused by the suspicion that he was in communication with the garrison of S——. As to the duration of his detention the military authorities alone could decide.

"With reference to all other statements, I must declare them entirely invented."

SOO RESIDENT CHARGED WITH HIGH TREASON

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 19.—(Special)—High treason is the charge brought to-day against Robt. Sayer, a resident of this city, by Lieut. Col. S. L. Penherwood of the 51st Regiment, Soo Rifles. Sayer may be given a military trial here or he may be taken to Toronto. He is married.

The arrest of Sayer was accomplished by immigration authorities here with the assistance from American authorities. It is charged that on at least three different occasions he ferried Austrians over the border in a small boat. Evidence of this was introduced at his preliminary hearing to-day.

Capt. McPhail appeared against Sayer. The hearing was postponed for eight days to give the local officials time to receive instructions as to procedure from the military authorities at Ottawa. No one appeared in Sayer's defence.

AN APPALLING CASUALTY LIST FOR THE GERMANS—NOW OVER ONE MILLION AND QUARTER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A news despatch says that Berlin military circles now estimate the Germany army losses at one million and a quarter in killed, wounded and missing. Not to mention another half million who are sick. Nine hundred and eighty thousand names have been published in the casualty lists.

Prince Works Hard On The Battlefront

Heir to Britain's Throne Kept Busy by Military Duties Under Gen. French

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 19.—Special—The Prince of Wales, now on General French's staff at the front, had a busy day yesterday. Military duties kept him on the move from early morning until late in the afternoon, bringing into use his big Daimler car just sent across from England. In his visits to the various places he was accompanied by two other staff officers. There was also long attendance at headquarters, and when he retired it was with the intimation that reveille would be at 5.30 this morning.

The Prince, who now hears for the first time in his life the sound of heavy guns in actual warfare, is taking his turn of duty like any other staff officer, and it is his own wish that he shall not be relieved of any work. He wins high praise of the officers and men by his unassuming zeal, and the soldiers are proud at having the Prince among them. Already he has not only come into personal touch with the men who have been hard at work in the fighting line, but he has shared in the task of conveying wounded to the field hospitals, and made the acquaintance of the Indian troops. The Prince is making his name as a foot slugger.

"He's as fit as they make them, and thinks nothing of walking twenty-five miles on a couple of sandwiches and an apples," said an officer.

INFANTRY AND ARTILLERY ATARE LARGELY REDUCED—SOME PROGRESS MADE BY ALLIES

PARIS, Nov. 20.—An official communication this afternoon says:

Yesterday there were hardly any infantry attacks on the part of the enemy and their artillery activity also was largely reduced.

To the north the weather has been very bad, snow falling. All regions of the Yser canal, to east of Dismude, is invaded by the waters.

In front of Ramschelle we have withdrawn from the water two 16.5 centimetre mortars abandoned by the Germans. There has been intense artillery fire to the south of Ypres.

On the centre there has been no important actions to report. In Argonne three vigorous attacks on part of enemy's infantry have been repulsed.

On our right wing the Germans have re-occupied a destroyed section of Chauvoncourt. Further to the east we have made some progress.

SUDDEN AND VIOLENT WINTER WEATHER—HAS CAUSED SUSPENSION OF HOSTILITIES IN FLANDERS

BRUGES, Nov. 20.—Quiet reigns in West Flanders. The sudden and violent coming of winter has caused a suspension of hostilities.

In this weather the armies are compelled to live in devastated territory, where the are no houses to give them shelter or warmth. Physical numbness, and not military exhaustion has caused a temporary lull in battle.

HAMBURG-AMERICAN LINER SUNK IN PERSIAN GULF

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Daily News states that the Hamburg-American Liner Exbatana, has been sunk in the Persian Gulf.

The Exbatana was last reported as having arrived at Bussorah, Asiastic Turkey, early in August.

Russians Prove Two Can Play at Game of Levying

General Imposed Fine of 600,000 Rubles on Captured City of Czernowitz

POOR GAVE VALUABLES

The Cossack Chieftain Magnanimously Returned Everything and Having Taught Citizens Desired Lesson

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Milan quotes from La Stampa of Turin a description of the Russian entry into Czernowitz on September 2, sent by its correspondent there. On his arival at the town hall, General Arintinoff addressed the city fathers, declaring Bukowina incorporated into the Russian Empire, and stated that the Rusian soldiers would neither sack houses no attack persons.

"But", he went on, "following the example of the Austrians, I am about to demand what their general, Daulann, exacted when to took possession of Kamancz Podolski. In other words, I impose upon this city a levy of 600,000 rubbles, to be consigned to me in gold or silver not later than 5 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Should this sum not be forthcoming, I shall have the big guns trained on the city, and Czernnowitz will be levelled to the ground."

The populace was terror-stricken, being well aware that such an exorbitant sum was unprocurable. The burgomaster, assessors and priests began pressing the general for an statement, urging that all the wealthiest citizens had already fled with their valuables, but the Russian general only appeared to wax angrier, and he brought down his ponderous fist on the table, exclaiming: "Nay, no compromise! That was the Austrian system. Why, at Kamanez Podolski, my own daughter had to sacrifice every one of her jewels to save the city."

Finally, however, the burgomaster and the aged archbishop prevailed on the general to lower the levy to 300,000 kronen.

The burgomaster lost no time in publishing a proclamation, exhorting the population to pour in their cash without delay, lest worse things befall them. Throughout the night the local authorities, civil and ecclesiastical, were busy collecting, and from early morning a ceaseless pilgrimage of the poorer folk passed through the town hall, depositing amid tears their scanty pence and trinkets. Humble Hebrews sacrificed even their ritual candelabra. A young woman of the middle class shed all her jewellery and the archbishop himself mustered 50,000 crowns worth of silver ornaments from his sanctuary. Noontides sped by, and the deficit was till considerable. The city magistrates held a hasty consultation, and forth went the order that a few courtesy calls should be made on the usurers who might unwillingly have missed their grand opportunity. It was further resolved to force open the establishments of the various goldsmiths and silversmiths who had sealed their premises, and made their exodus before the privilege of contributing had presented itself to them.

Five o'clock sounded. The war indemnity had been realized and the careworn councillors, with the burgomaster, were ushered into the presence of the general.

"You are looking fagged," said the General."

"Aye, aye," said the ransom-bringers, moping their brows. "But Heaven be thanked, we've just managed to scrape together the 300,000 kronen."

Amid palpitating silence, the Cossack chieftain looked them up and down, and a grim smile overspread his visage.

"Enough," he said at last. "I have no intention of taking this money. Take it back and redistribute it among your own people. I wanted you all to experience something of the heart burnings that befell our Russian townsfolk at the taking of Kaminenz Podolski."

GREAT BRITAIN PROHIBITS EXPORTATION OF TEA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Great Britain today prohibited exportation of tea to all the continental ports, except to those of Countries of the Allies, and of Spain and Portugal. This prohibition is due to indications that Germany is receiving large supplies of tea through the Neverlands.

Death of Late Canon Bogart

Rev. Canon Bogert, who died in this city yesterday, was born in Brockville seventy-three years ago. He was educated at Upper Canada College and Trinity University, Toronto, where he took the degree of Master of Arts. He excelled in athletics, and captained cricket teams at both institutions.

He was ordained deacon in 1865, and priest in 1866. After serving in parishes at Tetley, Napanee and Selby and Salmon River, he became Rector of St. John's Church, West Belleville, in 1883, being its second and last rector, as this church was closed about two years and a half ago, owing to his ill-health, and was removed to Point Anne.

He leaves no family. Two nephews are: Clarence Bogert, General Manager of the Dominion Bank, and Mortimer Bogert of the Dominion Bank, Montreal. His brother is Ven. Archdeacon James John Bogert of Ottawa. Mr. Beverley Jones, solicitor of the Canada Permanent Loan & Savings Co., is a cousin.

Canon Bogert was Past Grand Chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Ontario, and was Past Principal of Moira Chapter, No. 7, Royal Arch Masons.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Mortimer Bogert of Montreal, is in the city to attend the funeral of the late Rev. Canon Bogert.

The ladies of the domestic science class, under the direction of Miss Templeton, are supplying refreshments.

DEATH

On the 11th inst. Ida, the beloved wife of John McClelland, passed peacefully away at her home in Winnipeg. Deceased was well and favorably known here, being the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Smith of this city, who in addition to her sorrowing husband and little daughter, are left to mourn her loss; also three sisters, namely, Mrs. Anna Crozier, Cobourg; Mrs. Maggie Lockwood, Winnipeg; Mrs. Hannah Earpey, Belleville, and one brother, Geo. of Alaska. The remains were interred in the family burial plot in Winnipeg.

Even a multimillionaire can have his vermiform appendix removed only once.

Deseronto Fascinated By Pretty Tallasse

Mr. C. A. Macfarlane's Drama Was Well Received at Naylor's Theatre Last Night

A good audience greeted "Tallasse, the Indian Princess," at Naylor's Theatre, Deseronto, last night, and the play proved very popular. The young people connected with the cast, after the initial appearance at Griffin's Opera House, settled even better into their allotted parts, and did excellent work. Particularly striking were the characters impersonated by Miss Eleanor Smith, as Ethel Grant; Mrs. S. McGuire as Mrs. William Wheeler; Miss Gladys Ibey as Alice Wheeler; Miss Lela Weese as the life of the play, in the unique character of Bernice, the Wheeler "baby," while a very pretty part, cleverly portrayed, was that of Carrie Pierce, a secretary in William Wheeler's office, impersonated by Miss Ida Bateman; Miss Annie Ashley, as Norah Chalmers, making an apt maid in Robert Grant's mansion.

But from the start, everyone was on the watch for Tallasse, the Indian Princess, and when she finally appeared before her wigwam, reclining beside the characteristic fire, the scene, softly lighted by a spot flash, the audience gasped in wonder at the beautiful picture. In this part Miss Bessie Duckworth excelled. Rising to a standing posture as the two travellers appeared on the trail, in search of John Grant, her timid, yet expectant greeting, as they approached, the quaint conversation, and the subsequent flight, taking the audience by storm. From that to her appearance at the Wheeler home, the discovery that she was niece of Mrs. Wheeler, her education as a young lady of society and entrance by marriage into the Grant family, she was the central figure of the drama. Miss Duckworth is to be commended for her intelligent grasp of the character, and the audience fully appreciated her efforts. As was mentioned in reference to the appearance in Belleville, the parts allotted to Mr. J. E. McKitterick, as William Wheeler; Robert Grant, the eastern financier, by Mr. C. A. Macfarlane; Mr. V. Doolittle as John Grant; Mr. F. Morrison as Alex. Grant; Mr. J. M. Phelan as James Manning; Mr. D. Montgomery as James Watson; Mr. A. Ferguson as Clifford Scott; Mr. J. E. McCorkell as Stephen Warden, were exceptionally well portrayed, while Mr. C. Maston in all his ferociousness as Crief Great Bear, who expected to secure the gentle Tallasse, but was prevented by being choked by Alex. Grant, proved an exciting participant. The double character of Chief Wabana, Tallasse's father, was finely impersonated by Mr. J. E. McCorkell, and worthy of special mention.

An improvement in the conduction of the play was the elimination of fully one half of the curtain drops, by consolidating the scenes, which added much to the performance and shortened the length of time.

Mr. William L. Doyle, as director, assisted by Mrs. Doyle, lent an expert finish to the play. Sills' orchestra of Belleville furnished excellent music.

Priest Says He Has Proof of Almost Unbelievable Cruelty

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Tales of the murder and robbery of priests, attacks on nuns, and desecration of property of the Catholic Church by the rebels in Mexico were made public last night by the Very Rev. Francois C. Kelley, President of the Catholic Church Extension Society. He has just returned from Havana and Texas border cities, where he talked with dignitaries of the Church who have been exiled from Mexican territory, and brought back a portfolio of sworn statements of scores of alleged crimes of revolutionists.

"The sansculottes of the French Revolution only killed priests and sisters, but it remains for the twentieth century to inflict worse than death," said Father Kelley. "There have been many instances where girls have asked their confessors if it would be right for them to commit suicide to escape their shame."

It looks like a chameleon Christmas from here; what?

Boys' Conference Coming in a Few Days

Several years ago, there was held once a year in one of the Ontario cities or larger towns, what was then known as the Older Boys' Conference. These were promoted almost entirely by the Boys' departments of the different Y.M.C.A.'s. Each Association sending as representatives, older boy delegates. Conferences of the distinctively Association nature were only held for a couple of years, when there was a happy co-operative plan established between the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. and the Ontario Sunday School Association whereby conferences embracing a wider scope of influence were promoted. They assumed the name of Boys' Work Conference. Instead of having one conference in one given place, to which delegates from all parts of Ontario were obliged to come, (naturally some coming from a great distance and at considerable expense) two conferences were held each year, and both usually in the fall. One for Western Ontario and one for Eastern Ontario. Two years ago the Western Ontario one was held at Galt, while the Eastern one was held at Cornwall. Last year Brantford accommodated the Western one while Brockville was honored by having the Eastern one. Belleville Sunday Schools sent delegates to both Cornwall and Brockville, and it was largely through the influence of the Belleville delegation at Brockville last year, (encouraged of course by the Sabbath School Executives) that the conference was induced to meet here this year. Belleville will, in a few days, be the scene of another of these great gatherings of older boys' and young fellows. There will be about 350 visiting delegates. The problem of billeting and entertaining this numbed looked to be difficult. Belleville being a city of homes, should not find this a problem, especially when it is remembered that Brockville, a town much smaller in size than Belleville, accommodated over 400 delegates, and then were not taxed to the limit. Belleville's task should therefore be a very easy one. More than 50 per cent of these delegates will be sent from Sunday Schools, and this especially true in Eastern Ontario, where there are comparatively few Y.M.C.A.'s. Indeed the Y.M.C.A.'s urge that all delegates as far as possible, represent their Sunday Schools, rather than their Association.

The problem of interesting and retaining the interest in the average Sunday School, is only in the solution. These Conferences aim supremely at this one thing by getting together under the direction of men who are experienced in the most up-to-date methods of Sunday School Work, and especially that part of the Sunday School work, which vitally affects the boys. They seek to make plans of creating and retaining interest as each delegate may carry back and put into practice in his own Sunday School.

The average Sunday School, if it is going to be the force in the Church and in the extension of Christs Kingdom that it can, and may be, should get in a large measure that energizing power that only a Boys' Work Conference can generate.

Apart from the Saturday evening banquet and the farewell service, Sunday night, both of which are high points of interest, the Sunday afternoon meeting (for the delegates and any other fellow of Belleville over 15 years of age) is of supreme interest and importance. There should be an attendance of 1000 at this afternoon meeting in the Tabernacle Church. It will be addressed by one of the most intensive speakers to boys on the continent. Every boy in Belleville should hear Alexander.

THAT "TRUCE"

Nearly every issue of the Grit press in Ontario, the reader is regaled with a dissertation upon an agreement said to exist upon the question of a cessation of political agitation during the war, yet the same journals are agitating political organization, and urging preparations for an election. Knowing, as the Conservative party does, the hollowness of the professions of Liberalism, they are not likely to be led astray, and caught napping.

The Liberal Bureau at Ottawa is busily preparing campaign literature, and organizing for the coming contest, whether at an early or at a distant day. It is therefore the duty of supporters of honest government to be on the alert.

As evidence of what the Laurierites are doing they are busily at work in Ottawa reorganizing the party.

"A conference," says a report from Ottawa, was held in that city on the 17th inst., at which the Hon. J. A. Calder, Minister of Public Works for Saskatchewan, and the Hon. William Pugsley, of St. John, were present, and it was arranged that Mr. Calder was to take charge of the Liberal organization from Port Arthur to Victoria, Dr. Pugsley to look after the Maritime Provinces. Hon. George P. Graham is to be in command in Ontario, and Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux in Quebec. The question of securing a seat for Mr. Graham, it is said, is a problem which is worrying the Liberals, as Mr. T. Low, ex-M.P., who resigned in South Renfrew to give Mr. Graham a seat, wants to get back into politics and would like the candidacy himself.

In view of the war developments and the complete vindication of the Borden naval and militia policies in every section of the Dominion it was decided that it would be unwise to allow the rank and file to discuss the course pursued by their leaders during the naval bill debate, well knowing, as they did, what the result would be, yet the Liberal leaders are still protesting that there is a political truce, but nevertheless are actively preparing for the next election. They are not holding for the present any meetings, but the tip seems to have gone out to the Liberal press to open up a campaign. Let no one be deceived, the Liberal Press Bureau conducted at Ottawa is preparing campaign literature ready to launch whenever the auspicious moment arrives. Be ready.

SOLDIERS' PENSIONS

(Journal of Commerce)

Great Britain has announced that soldiers taking part in the war will receive an adequate pension when the fighting is over. As she will have 1,500,000 soldiers on the firing line early next summer, and if the war continues many months beyond that will probably have twice that number, the pension bill will amount to a very tidy sum.

The United States holds the world's record for pensioning her soldiers. Following her Civil War, which ended fifty years ago, her pension list has grown steadily year by year, until last year she paid out over $172,400,000 in pensions. Five years after the war closed, or in 1868, she had 169,000 pensioners, who received an average of $136 each per annum. From that time on the number of pensioners steadily increased until the number reached the high water mark in 1905, when 998,411 people were found willing to accept Uncle Sam's bounty for having taken part in the war. Since then the number has gradually been reduced until to-day there are 785,239 on the roll, who receive an average annual grant of $219.45. Of this list of 785,000 some 395,000 were survivors of the Mexican and Civil Wars, and their average age is seventy-one, so it is not reasonable to expect that the pension will continue at its present high figure. A compilation of the amounts paid out since the American Civil war shows that up to the close of the last fiscal year more than $4,750,000,000 have been paid out in pensions to the war veterans.

It is only right that adequate provision should be made for the men who go forth to defend their country, and it is to be hoped that the Canadian Government will shortly make provision for the pensioning of the wounded and of the dependents of those killed. However, if the pension lists in Great Britain and the Overseas Dominions take on the proportions attained in the neighboring Republic, the country will have cause to remember the war for a great many years. There is, however, just one bright spot and that is that the Kaiser is going to be be made to pay the bill, not only of the actual losses entailed by the war, but he and his people should be held responsible for the losses emanating from the conflict, among which should be included pensions.

PARTYISM RUN MAD

In the face of what has been done by the Government in the way of organizing a volunteer force to aid in suppressing the present war, the reader will be surprised to find any journal except one that has become politically mad, writing and publishing such trash as the following.

The Winnipeg Free Press asks:

"Why are not all these men in this country who are so keen to enlist not enlisted and expedited on their way to fulfilling their desire to fight for the flag and for all that makes life worth living to the races that have the love of freedom in their blood? It is unthinkable that our Government would deliberately adopt a policy of throwing a wet blanket upon the readiness of young Canadian manhood to do its duty, not under any compulsion, but with glad and ardent willingness, which we have justly taken pride in as such a strength and glory to the Empire."

CURRENT COMMENT

Well, there's nothing like getting acclimated. "'Dinner in Hell,' is a new fad of the idle rich at Hot Springs, Va.—Buffalo Express.

Armored motorboats are the latest war engine. One would think that they might be quite effective in the flooded region along the Yser.—Buffalo Express.

The action of the United States authorities in prohiibting the importation of cattle from Canada will bring the price down in Canada. But will the consumer get his beef any cheaper?

The drowning of 3,000 men would in ordinary times be a great tragedy. But the loss by drowning of a German regiment which would be about 3,000 men, is merely a minor incident of the war.

The prompt execution of Carl Hans Lody in London should be a warning to German spies throughout the Empire that Great Britain will not be so lenient with suspects in the future.—St. John Telegraph.

Cobourg holders of Edmonton lots received their tax bills this week. Edmonton is supposed to be one of the few cities in Canada where the single tax system prevails, but to the recipients of these slips, it looks more like double-tax.—Cobourg Post.

If Germany hoped to break up the Allies by bringing Turkey into the war her plans have again miscarried. No matter how eager the Czar is to get Constantinople he will not decrease the pressure on Berlin to do so. Britain and France will see to that. Russia's road to Constantinuple runs through the German capital.

The Church of England has insured Westminster Abbey against sky bombs for $750,000. This evidently anticipates nothing more than a partial disfigurement, for the abbey could not be reconstructed for several times that sum, while the British people probably would not take $750,000,000 for the great mausoleum that is one of the treasures of the world.—Vancouver World.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES

Eleven British war vessels are announced to be participating in the "battle of the canals" in West Flanders. The ubiquity of the British navy has been the bane of the Teutons, and if it begins to join the army in land attacks it will demonstrate that the "mistress of the sea" refuses to be confined anywhere by the ordinary laws of nature.

Trustworthy British sources indicate that the British army at the front now numbers 300,000 men, while 200,000 are to be added within a month. Besides these 1,000,000 are being prepared for campaigning in the spring. For a nation without conscription Great Britain seems to lack little in military enthusiasm. It makes up for its deficiency in standing soldiery by rugged patriotism.

WAR NOTES

England has had 3,677 officers and men killed in naval engagements to date. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons that the British naval losses were 222 officers and 3,555 men killed, 37 officers and 428 men wounded; five officers and one man missing. This list, the First Lord said, did not include the missing officers and men in the Royal Naval division at Antwerp and on the British cruiser Good Hope, sunk off the Chilean coast, which totalled 1,000 and 875 respectively.

An official decree promulgated in France on Wednesday, extends to the French colonies in Africa the prohibition on the sale and consumption of absinthe and kindred drinks at present being enforced in France.

Little Reason For Outcry By Temperance Men

Restrictions on Liquor Sales at Salisbury Camp are Very Severe

LONDON, Nov. 18.—"There is little reason for the outcry of the temperance party against the War Office in regard to the Canadians."—was the comment of an officer to a press correspondent. "Only beer is sold, and the general restrictions are very severe, as in the outlying bars liquor is only allowed to be sold from noon until nine o'clock in the evening, and no sales to women are permitted after six o'clock. Any smuggling of liquors by workmen about the camps is heavily punished by the magistrates when discovered. The mayor of Salisbury recently commented at a meeting of the City Council upon the favorable moral condition in the city, in view of the fact that 100,000 troops are encamped upon the Plain."

The officer quoted had been in contact with all the troops, and he was glad to be able to speak highly of the Canadian contingent.

NOTHING BETTER FOR WEAK WOMEN

"I Never Spent Any Money That Did Me So Much Good as That I Spent for Vinol."

Bellefontaine, Ohio.—"I wish every tired, weak, nervous woman could have Vinol for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good as that I spent for Vinol. My nerves were in a very bad condition, making me very weak, tired, and worn out and often drowsy headaches. I had tried cod liver oil, doctor's medicines, and other preparations without benefit.

"One day a friend asked me to try Vinol. I did and soon my appetite increased, I slept better and now I am strong, vigorous and well and can do my housework with pleasure."—Mrs. J. F. LAMBORN, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Nervous, weak, tired, worn-out women should take Mrs. Lamborn's advice and try Vinol for there are literally thousands of men and women who were formerly run-down, weak and nervous, who owe their good health to Vinol.

It is the medicinal, tissue building elements of the cod's livers, aided by the blood making, strengthening influence of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, which makes it so efficient in all such cases.

GERMANS SHOT YANKEE

Executed After He Struck German Officer in the Face

The London Daily Graphic gives an account of the reported execution by the Germans of George Wheeler, an American of Boston.

Wheeler, according to the story, was arrested by a detachment of Uhlans and the following moring was taken before a court of German officers with another prisoner, Phil Rader, an American newspaper correspondent and aviator, whose home is in Los Angeles Cal., and who since has enlisted in the French Flying Corps.

The Daily Graphic says:

"Wheeler was searched and this so enraged him that he cried out: "This is a —— of a way to treat an American." An officer standing by told him that if he did not like such treatment he should have stayed at home.' Further incensed, Wheeler swung around and catching the officer under the jaw, laid him prone.

"For a few seconds not a word was spoken. Then a command was rapped out in German and Wheeler was unchained from Rader and led to the othed side of the room. A few more questions were addressed to Wheeler and the two were lad back to their improvivsed jail.

"Next morning Wheeler was placed against a wall and a firing squad put thirty bullets into him. And to close that ghastly scene Mr. Rader saw Wheeler's body thrown into the sallow grave.

"Mr. Rader was led to a waiting motor car and taken to Valenciennes, where he was led before the General, who, learning that the captive desired nothing more than to return to Paris, made out a pass for him, promising to join Rader at dinner in Paris very soon."

Rader is a representative of an Americian news service (Scripps) and took up aviation with the intention of accompanying in another machine, Lieut. Porte on the first part of his proposed trans-Atlantic flight, returning to Newfoundland and giving the news of Lieut. Porte up to the time he left him.

Going to Europe in his capacity of a newspaper correspondent at the opening of the war, Rader saw a cavalry detachment approacbing and ran his car up to the cavalrymen with a cherry 'Hello, boys.' One of the cavalrymen demanded in perfect English, who the stranger was and where he came from anl announced that the detachment was a body of Uhlans and that Rader was their prisoner. Late that night Rader was joined by another American prisoner, George Wheeler, of Boston.

SAW LEMAN IN CAPTIVITY

French Boy Tells His Experiences as a Prisoner in Germany.

PARIS Nov. 19.—The Midi publishes a story regarding the experiences of French prisoners in Germany, which was obtained from George Rhodes, a French boy, who had been imprisoned ten weeks in the fortress of Madgeburg, but was released on Nov. 8 because he was only 16 years old.

Rhodes, who was formerly employed in a Carlsbad hotel, was arrested at Metz on his way home, and was finally taken to Magdeburg where he acted as an attendant to French officers.

He says that they are not ill-treated though compelled to sleep in dormitories holding twenty-five. They are allowed to buy food in addition to the regular rations, which is wholesome though meagre, but the prices are exorbitant. All payments are made with copper token, worth 2 cents each, which the officers receive every three days, the amount varrying according to the officer's rank. In fine weather they promenade in the fortress courtyards, but are not permitted outside.

Rhodes describes the arrival of Gen. Leman, the hero of Liege, who spent some time in the Magdeburg citadel. He says:

"An automobiles arrived from which descended a Major General, accompanied by the Belgian Gen. Leman. Every one hurried to see him, and the prisoners greeted him most respectively. He visited our officers several times, talking and going to the various rooms. He was thin and pale, and appeared much fatigued."

Rhodes concludes with the statement that while at the beginning of his detention "Die Wacht am Rhein" was constantly sung in the streets, the prisoners had lately heard the cries of Socialists in procession which contmually traversed the city protesting against the growing miseries of the population.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER CHARGE

Montreal Man Vindicated in the Chicago Court.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Four years ago Henry H. Bell was secretary of the Utopia, a fashionable club in Montreal, the happy head of a family, and the possessor of a snug fortune

The other day he came to Chicago. His money was gone, he had lost his job and his wife has left him. Though acquitted in court of murder the Montreal public believe him guilty. He came to Chicago seeking vindication, and he found it.

Bell was arrested in Montreal on January 12th, 1912 as Charles Newton Estes, charged with the murder of Beatrice Dehart, of Chicago. A Chicago detective identified him as Estes, but altered his decision in Court, and Bell was freed. It was charged that he had bribed the detective with $10,000.

"I am positive this man is innocent," said First Deputy and Police Schuettler after investigating Bell's story.

A sister and others who knew Estes failed to identify Bell yesterday.

$2,499,000 FOR HORSES

Allies have Spent That Amount for Animals Bought Here.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Nov. 19.—Horses and mules valued at $2,499,000 have been shipped from the National Stock Yards here to the French and British Governments since the war began, according to a statement given out at the yards today. The English have bought 5,020 horses and the French 7,476, the average price being $200 a head.

Contracts have been let for 8,000 to 13,000 additional animals to be shipped from East St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Little Rock, Memphis, and Fort Worth.

A horse dealer said today that the British Government was willing to buy 100,000 horses under contracts calling for the delivery of the animals free on board at shipping points. Dealers, he said, could not take such risks, as the expense of feeding train load of horses at seaports while the shipper waited for vessels would be too great.

THE BLACKEST LIE

(From the London Daily Mail)

The Frankfurter Zeitung states that Belgium intrigued with England and France to draw Germany into war.)

Big bully Belgium,
Breathing blood and flame,
Crafty as a serpent
In a cunning game,
Sent a note to England,
Sent a note to France,
"Let us crush the Fatherland
While we have the chance!"

Poor little Germany,
Gentle land of peace,
Seeking the Milennium,
When armaments shall cease;
Rather grieved than angry,
Called her sons to fight,
To protect their Fatherland,
As was only right.

Belgium concocted war,
Thus deserves her fate!

Chose a Name To Fit The Case

With a Family of Eleven He Would Soon Run Short of Names For Them

Shakespeare (or was it Bacon) said "What's in a name. The correct answer is said to be "more or less."

One is reminded of the story told by a certain Judge in this county. It seems that he was travelling in a strange part of the country and stopped at an old negro's cabin to inquire the direction to a certain village. It so happened that there were eight or ten colored children playing in the yard, all resembling one another and bearing unmistakable likeness to the old man. When the desired information was sought the colored patriarch turned to one of the piccaninnies and said: "Here, you Judas Iscariot, come and see what this gemmen done want."

He was asked why he had given such a name to his son.

"Case it's a Bible name," replied the old man.

"But," suggested the Judge, "you could have founds lots of names in the Bible that would be better and more appropriate for your son."

"Well, I couldn't, boss," responded the darkey. "I already had eleven children when he comes, so I goes lookin' frew de Bible to fin' him a name, an' I come to where it says 'it 'ud been better for Judas Iscariot if he neber been born.'"

The old colored father at least had the advantage of most of us in the fact that he read his Bible, although he did get the purport somewhat twisted.

In the new illustrated Bible now being presented by The Intelligencer on the educational certificate plan, the various passages are made plain by accompanying illustrations that portray the actual meaning of the text. Such a Bible has never before been issued. It gives to the reader an entirely new and correct conception, which is at once interesting and instructive. The Bible thus becomes an educational work of rare value to young and old alike. It is just the book for the family—father, mother, brother and sister—everybody that would have a desire to enlighten himself on everyday topics of conversation.

The Intelligencer is now presenting these Bibles for six certificates with the amount of expense items to defray the cost of distribution, as explained elsewhere.

The LAPSE of ENOCH WENTWORTH

By ISABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Wolvertons"

ILLUSTRATIONS by ELLSWORTH YOUNG

COPYRIGHT 1914 BY F. G. BROWNE & CO.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Behind the Curtain.

It was a wet night in October. A line of carriages moved slowly over the shining asphalt to the door of the Gotham. Grant Oswald stood in a corner of the foyer watching the throng pour in.

"This beats your first night in London, doesn't it?" queried a newspaper man who stood beside him.

"Yes," acceded the Englishman. "The first night or any other night."

"Wentworth's escape from death was a great ad—if you look at it that way. He had a close call."

"Yes." Oswald spoke absently.

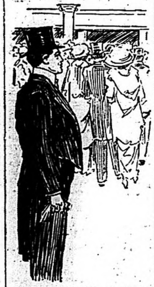
That morning he had arrived from London. Although he was the least curious of men, he felt as if the people from whom he had parted four months ago were living in a different atmosphere. Before the ship docked he had discovered a group waiting to welcome him. Dorcas was there, her beautiful face glowing with happiness. He watched her untie a gray scarf from her hat and wave it. Merry stood beside her, but the girl's hand was clasped inside her brother's arm. Wentworth was wan and thin. Across his temple gleamed a wide red scar. Merry lifted his hat when he caught sight of Oswald and the wind tossed down, almost into his eyes, the wavy lock of long fair hair which proclaimed his calling. Alice Volk stood in the group, with Julie jumping impatiently beside her. Little Robin clasped her hand, while he searched for the ship with his sightless eyes.

With a courteous "Good night" Oswald left the man and walked into the theater, where a gay, chattering crowd streamed past him. The throng was so dense that he was pushed into a corner. When the overture began he moved toward the rail and took his place among a group of men who had not been able to buy seats. He found Singleton, of the Times, at his elbow.

"Hullo," said the young editor heartily. "I'm glad to see you back and glad you've come back to such a house. Why, it's one of the biggest I ever saw in New York. You fellows must be raking in the shekels."

"It does look that way," Oswald smiled. "I don't know how long it will hold out. The play has already gone far beyond my expectations."

"It ought to last through several seasons. Generally a drama that pulls at the heart strings has a clutch on the purse strings of the public. Besides, you've a great card in your Miss Wentworth, to say nothing of Merry. She's out of sight. Why, I've run in, heaven knows how often, for that third act. I can't think of any big actress who could get as much out of that situation as Dorcas Wentworth does. There are minutes when it doesn't seem as if the girl were acting—she lives the character from start to finish. She is not playing 'Cordelia,' she is 'Cordelia.' I told you Oswald she is a wonder. I have been following the drama as a critic for years, and one gets to be hardened, the emotions are not susceptible to the appeals of the average player, but in this scene particularly Miss Wentworth grips me in a most wonderful way. She is so simple and sincere in her methods that one cannot realize that she is acting a part. She is great."



Oswald Was Watching the Throngs Pour In.

"I believe you are right," acknowledged Oswald.

Before the third act began the house settled down to that silence which means intense anticipation. When the curtain fell, the applause rose to a deafening clamor. One player after another appeared to take an encore. Last of all came Dorcas. She stood on the stage alone, smiling and bowing. Her face was radiantly happy. When the curtain dropped, the applause began again. Wentworth appeared, leading Merry by the hand. The face of the older man looked pallid and the red scar cut lividly across his forehead. A stillness fell upon the house. It seemed to Oswald as if the people waited intently for some unusual event.

There was a tenseness in the quiet that prevailed in the audience that seemed to forecast something dramatic. It equaled in intensity the interest with which the most telling climaxes of the play had been received. The very air of the two men standing side by side in the center of the stage seemed to promise a sensation.

Enoch Wentworth raised his hand with a gesture which was strangely dramatic for a man who was neither an actor nor an orator. Like a flash Oswald remembered a day when he sat watching a prisoner at the bar. The man had been condemned to death; a moment later, with a stifled cry of terror, he stretched out his arm for mercy and sympathy.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Wentworth began, in a voice which was low, but so marvelously distinct that each syllable carried to the farthest seat in the house, "this is not a curtain speech—you have not called me before the footlights tonight; it is an explanation. It is a—confession."

Enoch paused as if mustering strength to go through an ordeal. He felt the curious scrutiny of a thousand eyes. "It is a confession," he repeated slowly, "a confession which has been long delayed—"

He never finished his sentence. Merry stepped forward and laid his hand upon the man's arm with a clinging grasp which was full of affection, even while it pushed Wentworth aside.

"Allow me." Then he laughed. "Good people, one and all, who have so long been friends of mine, this is my confession, late in the day, as my friend Wentworth suggests, but it is mine. He was simply breaking the news to you that I wrote 'The House of Esterbrook.'"

He hesitated for a moment, then Enoch touched his arm as if in protest. Merry smiled and gently put him aside. A whisper of startled surprise ran through the house, followed by a moment of hush, then applause. It subsided slowly. During the tumult men and women who kept their eyes upon the stage saw Wentworth turn as if pleading vehemently. Merry answered with a few decisive words, then he stepped down to the footlights.

"We have saved this confession, ladies and gentlemen," he began gravely, "not to create a sensation or to further advertise the play, but each one of you must realize how the public distrusts a jack-of-all-trades. Many of you doubted the ability of a Merry Andrew to touch human emotion ever so lightly, and came that first night with eager curiosity to see him in the character of 'John Esterbrook.' How much more would you have hesitated if you had known that this same Merry Andrew was the author of the play? Hence the secret, to deceive you until an honest verdict had been rendered. Tonight I release my friend Enoch Wentworth from the role he has carried for ten months. I also wish, before you, to acknowledge a large indebtedness to him. For years he has been the truest friend a man ever had. He has believed in me, encouraged me, and to his untiring labor you are indebted for much of the perfect detail which which carried 'The House of Eastabrook' to success. He has helped me in the dark hours when success in my profession seemed to be something I could never achieve. When I have been dragged down by the devils of despair his was the hand that lifted me up and with kindly deeds and encouraging words has kept me striving for the place which at last seems to be not entirely out of reach. I need not speak of his last great proof of his friendship for me, you all know how he almost lost his life in saving me from almost certain death. Good people, I owe much to Andrew Merry, and it is a great pleasure to acknowledge it in this public manner."

The audience saw Wentworth stare as if in utter amazement when Merry began his confession. Then his eyes grew misty, and when the young actor turned to him with an affectionate smile, he gripped the hand held out to him as a man does when he cannot put love or gratitude into words. Across the footlights men and women realized vaguely, through the strange human insight we call intuition, that another drama was being played before their eyes; a life-and-blood drama, where the feelings of strong men were deeply stirred.

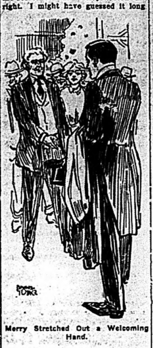
"Good Lord!" said Singleton.

Oswald turned with a start as if he had been aroused from sleep. The newspaper man stood at his elbow with a look of blank astonishment in his eyes. It passed quickly, however; he was a trained newspaper man, all his news instincts were aroused, he was on the track of a story. Here was something he must get to the bottom of. He scented a mystery and was immediately on the alert for anything that might give him a clew to start on. His paper must have this big story, it was big, he was sure of that. He turned suddenly to the man at his side.

"What's back of all that?" he asked. "I can understand that Merry wrote the play. I've known Enoch Wentworth for years, and I was never so staggered in my life as the first night when I saw 'The House of Esterbrook.' I went to the office afterwards to write my stuff and I sat for ten minutes—dumb, stupid—trying to figure out how Wentworth, the Enoch Wentworth I knew, could have written it. How long have you known this?"

"I have known it," answered Oswald quietly, "just as long as you have."

"Then I'm right," cried Singleton. "I knew Merry was lying when he stood there on the stage giving us that bluff about Wentworth carrying the secret for him. Merry wrote it all right. I might have guessed it long ago. I say, do you know there's a devil of a big story back of all that?"



Merry Stretched Out a Welcoming Hand.

Oswald's face grew stern.

"You see I know both of the men so well," went on Singleton eagerly. "Why, they were a regular David and Jonathan pair ever since I met them first. Enoch was forever setting Merry on his pins. The actor would go off, Heaven knows where, throw over a part, and drop off the edge of the world. I don't believe he dissipated exactly; he simply tossed his money away and went downhill. Wentworth would hunt him up and drag him back where he belonged. He straightened up suddenly when he began to play 'John Esterbrook.' You can't even pull him into a poker game now. I guess I took the winnings at the last game he stood in for. That night I had a great mind to hand the money back to him. We said 'Good-by' about daylight. He looked pessimistic and glum. No, he wasn't glum either; Merry never gets glum. He had a down-and-out, don't-give-a-damn expression that morning. I can see him yet. Suddenly he disappeared again. When he came back Wentworth and he cut each other dead. That Paget woman affair began, then Wentworth saved Merry's life. Why, it's a tremendous story!"

A GUARD'S REVENGE

Lying Wounded, He Shot Three Germans Who Deprived Him of Water

Private T. Smithson of the 3rd Coldstreams, an Englishman who elected to go to Scotland to recuperate when he got the chance, recounts the following story: "I got 'laid out,' but just before the shrapnel got me in the ankle and arm I had a narrow escape. A shell burst right over a chum a few feet away and blew him to bits. I couldn't get any further, but fortunately, there was a heap of manure in one of the fields, and I got cover behind that, and I think that soon I was about the only man left alive in that place. There was a man lying near me, and he was badly hurt. He asked for some water and I threw my bottle, but before he could pick it up another shrapnel finished him. For a long time there was nobody moving near me, but the shells were bursting all round. After a while I got to need a drink badly, but I couldn't crawl to where my bottle was lying.

"After an hour or so a German patrol came up, and I determined I was going to have a drink no matter what happened, and as they passed I spoke and signed to them to throw my bottle over. But they only laughed and kicked it further away. I 'saw red' then, and I was going to plug some of them for that even if they plugged me afterwards. I waited till they were about four or five hundred yards away, and couldn't get back too soon, and though I knew if anything went wrong with the gun after I fired the first shot it would likely be all up with me, I risked it. My first shot brought down one of them, and the other three dropped on the ground. I simply waited till they got up and got one after the other. I don't know whether I killed any of them, but," he added with a grim laugh, "as I hit them all I knew the chap who kicked the water bottle had got something for his trouble, and I felt better after that."

What Caliber Means

Caliber means the diameter of the bore of a gun—thus a gun of 12-inch caliber has a bore 12 inches across, taking a 12-inch projectile. Caliber is used in plural to express the length of the gun; thus a phrase often heard is a "gun of forty or fifty calibers," which means that the length of the gun is forty or fifty times the diameter of the bore. Thus a 12-inch gun of fifty calibers, the type mounted in the British Dreadnoughts before the 13.5-inch gun was introduced, is a weapon fifty times 12 inches long, that is, 50 feet in length. The longer a gun is the greater is its power.

Are You Suffering From Auto-Intoxication?

The dictionary says that Auto-Intoxication is "poisoning, or the state of being poisoned, from toxic substances produced within the body." This is a condition due to the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver, or pores of the body failing to throw off the poisons. More than 50% of adults are suffering from this trouble. This is probably why you are suffering from nervousness, headaches, loss of appetite, lack of ambition, and many other symptoms produced by Auto-Intoxication. Your whole system needs cleaning up.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
(In Tablet or Liquid Form)

will remedy the trouble. It first aids the system to expel accumulated poisons. It acts as a tonic and finally enables the body to eliminate its own poisons without any outside aid. Obey Nature's warnings. Your dealer in medicines will supply you, or you may send 50c for a sample package of tablets by mail. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

German Movement From Thorn Meant to Save Cracow.

Russian General Is Retiring Along Vistula In Order to Lengthen German Line of Communication and Will Give Battle on His Own Ground—Cracow Is Main Objective In the Meantime.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 20.—With a force of 1,600,000 men formed in two fronts, one guarding against any reinforcements attacking through the snow-covered Carpathian Mountain passes, while the other strikes hard at Cracow, the Russian army is about to swing around with a crash which may shatter the power of Austria and Germany in Austrian Poland. The Russians are within 25 miles of Cracow, the last stronghold of the Teuton allies on the Russian frontier, and despite the German feint at Warsaw and the stubborn resistance of the Austrians, the columns of the Czar's mighty army continues to press on to the assault on the fortress and the eviction of the enemy from the frontier fortresses.

The German advance in considerable force along the narrow battle front of the west bank of the Vistula river is regarded by military experts as being a feint at Warsaw, capital of Russian Poland, in an attempt to draw Russian troops away from the advance on Cracow, and to distract attention from the efforts of the German soldiers about to establish a strongly-fortified defence line from Kalitsz to Cracow. The German plan also is intended to relieve their troops in East Prussia, now giving away along the entire line, by rendering a Russian further advance untenable.

It is reported here that the Russians in East Prussia have driven back the Germans on the Angerburm-Gumbinnen front, although in the Polish territory between the Vistula and Warthe rivers, the Russian advance guard gave ground.

All that is definitely known of the latter operations is that the Russian advance guard, consisting largely of cavalry, which advanced right on to the German frontier, after the battle of Warsaw, met superior forces of the enemy and has been compelled to fall back more than half the distance covered in the advance.

The Germans are sending very strong forces of men and guns into the country between the two rivers, where the battle must be fought, hoping that in this confined area the Russians will not be able to deploy their enormous forces to their advantage, as they have done in practically all the previous battles.

Grand Duke Nicholas, the commander-in-chief, however, can choose his own ground for the battle, and it is probable that he will select it as far away from the German lines of communication as he can.

Systematic destruction in the region through which the Germans have passed in Poland, cannot be considered accidental. It must have been carried out by direct order. To-day Poland presents a still more striking example than Belgium, of the determination of the German forces to ruin their enemies.

West of the Vistula river, in the neighborhood of Warsaw, Poland is one mass of ruins. All railroad stations and water reservoirs have been destroyed, telegraph poles have been cut down and telegraph apparatus in every place broken up. Bridges, including even the small viaducts, have been blown up and factories with modern machinery, especially in Lodz, have been destroyed or ruined beyond repair.

Public opinion in Russia demands liquidation and sequestration of all German property, including land.

TURKS AGAIN BEATEN.

British Force In Persian Gulf Captures Position From Enemy.

LONDON, Nov. 20. — The Official Press Bureau has issued the following report from the general commanding the force operating on the Shat-el-Arab river and in the Persian Gulf against the Turkish forces:—

"On Nov. 17 our troops drove out of an entrenched position about 4,500 of the enemy, capturing two guns and many prisoners, camp equipment and ammunition.

"Our casualties were three officers killed and fifteen wounded, and in the rank and file 35 men were killed and about 300 wounded."

500 Lepers In U. S.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Nov. 20—That there are more than 500 known lepers in this country scattered over seventeen states, was the assertion of W. M. Danner, American secretary to the Mission of Lepers, who is attending the Interdenominational Medical Conference. He advocates the establishment of a national leprosarium.

SPIES CREEP INTO THE ALLIED LINES

German Snipers Get Iron Crosses for Picking Off Men at Night.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—More light on the tactics of German spies is thrown by a report of an eye-witness with the British army headquarters, as follows:—

"Further information has recently come to hand regarding the enemy's method of sniping and spying. Non-commissioned officers are offered iron crosses if they will penetrate our lines at night. Those that attempt this work, having discarded boots, helmets and other impediments, crawl as close as possible to our defences and try to attract the attention of our sentries by throwing a stone in a direction contrary to that in which they are crawling. This generally causes neighboring sentries to fire, thus betraying their positions and that of our line of trenches.

"These spies or snipers often wear khaki uniforms and woolen caps similar to those worn by our men, and, thus disguised, sometimes succeed in getting right behind our lines to favorable spots, from which they shoot men passing to and fro. Many of them speak English well and display great ingenuity and effrontry in getting out of tight corners.

"Another reason for penetrating our lines is the cutting of telephone wires, and behind one section of our front, breaks have of late been very frequent. That the damage has not been entirely due to bursting shells has now been proved by the capture of one of the enemy's secret agents, carrying wire-cutters and a rifle. The man was known to have been on intimate terms with the Germans before they retired from the areas now occupied by us."

The "eye-witness" eulogies a French doctor, who, with several nuns, remained in Ypres during the bombardment nursing 52 German wounded, and was finally killed by a shell. The day after his death the nuns and wounded were removed to a place of safety."

FUNERAL WAS IMPRESSIVE.

Troops From All Over the Empire Formed Roberts' Cortege.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The guard of honor which met the body of Field Marshal Lord Roberts at Waterloo Station at noon yesterday, and escorted it to St. Paul's Cathedral through a drizzling rain, offered a more impressive military display than the Lord Mayor's parade, or the display at the opening of Parliament, both of which took place this month.

Troops from every available regiment were in the line. Khaki uniforms prevented its being a brilliant military display, but the long ranks of olive drab swinging along between the crowds roused London to a pitch of patriotic enthusiasm which has not been equaled since the war began.

A special escort was formed of a detachment of Lord Roberts' "own beloved Indian troops," paying their last honors to their former leader whose death was caused by his trip to France to see them in action against the Germans.

King George attended the ceremony in person, and representatives of the King and Queen of Norway were present.

The pall-bearers were Earl Kitchener, Admiral Rt. Hon. Sir Edward Seymour, Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, Field Marshal Lord Grenfell, Field Marshal Methuen, Field Marshal Lord Nicholson, Lt.-Gen. Sir James Hills-Jones, Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter, Gen. Sir Alfred Gaselee, Gen. Sir Charles Egerton, and Admiral Lord Charles Beresford.

Six hundred members of the Canadian contingent attended the memorial service at Salisbury Cathedral yesterday in honor of the late Lord Roberts. The divisional staff was largely represented and the proceedings were most impressive.

CRACK CAVALRY WIPED OUT.

Austrian Corps Charged Into Ditch and 900 Were Killed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A special cable to The Evening Sun says that the Honved cavalry regiment, the corps elite of Vienna, was wiped out in Galicia early last month, when, in charging over unknown ground, they found themselves precipitated into a deep ditch. Nine hundred were killed.

It is recalled that, at Waterloo, a similar tragedy was enacted, when a cavalry brigade rode into a ravine—the historic "sunken road of Ohain"—and 1,500 men and 2,000 horses perished. They filled the gulf, and the rest of the brigade passed over across the bridge of flesh.

CRUISER SINKS SUBMARINE.

French Warship Waldeck Rousseau Wins Honor In Adriatic.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Standard has the following from Paris: News from the Adriatic says that the French cruiser Waldeck Rousseau has sunk another submarine. The enemy seems to make a special watch for this vessel, and during a recent cruise of only four days the cruiser had to run quite a gauntlet of aeroplane, submarine and torpedo boat attacks. She not only come through them unscathed, but with the honors on her side, for, besides sinking the submarine, she chased and battered a flotilla of 17 hostile destroyers.

WESTERN BATTLE LAGS

Struggle In Flanders May Last For Months, Say Experts.

French Algerian Troops Have Taken Tracy-le-Val — Both Armies Are Using Boats and Rafts In Attacks In Flooded Area — Artillery Is Proving Ineffective — German Dead Are Burned In Piles.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A feature of the fighting in the western theatre of war, as reported by the French War Office, was the capture of Tracy-le-Val, close to the western angle of the battle front, by France's Algerian troops.

Military observers agree that the fighting in Flanders may continue several months. Both armies are using boats and rafts in attacks in the flooded area between Nieuport and Dixmude. For the first time since the war started artillery has proved ineffective. French marines yesterday crossed on rafts the inundated approaches to Schoorbacke, West Flanders, while a British force charged by road. The fighting was desperate, but the Germans were routed with heavy losses.

Floods continue to hamper operations on the northern front, but positions are being strengthened from Ypres to Arras. The bulletin says new big guns have arrived at the front and that the general situation in Flanders and northern France is virtually unchanged.

According to a correspondent of De Tyd, the German losses in the southwestern portion of Belgium have been so terribly high that the dead, instead of being buried, are burned. Wherever possible this is done at some distance from the fighting line, but in some places, this is out of the question and pyres are raised within sight of the active soldiers.

It is said that the Kaiser's visit to Thielt, where a British aviator dropped several bombs, was due to the desire to arouse the enthusiasm of the army.

A casualty list received in London yesterday from the British army headquarters in France under date of Nov. 15 contains the names of nine officers killed, eighteen wounded and two missing.

Snow, sleet and cold now prevail along the battle line in the western part of Belgium. Pneumonia and rheumatism are said to be claiming as many, if not more, victims than rifle bullets and shrapnel. This is said to be specially true of the Germans, but the sufferings and consequent disablement are equaly as heavy among the French-British troops.

FIGHTING IN BOATS.

Both Sides In Belgium Adapt Themselves To Flood Conditions.

BRUGES, Belgium, Nov. 20.—Fighting between the German and allied forces in the inundated territory between Dixmude and Nieuport on the North Sea coast, is now frequently being carried on in boats.

Artillery, for the first time in the war, has proved ineffective, but personal bravery and enterprise are counting for much, and the battle is beginning to resemble the classical siege of Leyden in the sixteenth century with raids and counter raids by means of flat-bottomed boats.

Two corporals of the Seventh Belgian Infantry have been made Knights of the Leopold Order for transporting forty men, including fifteen severely wounded, across the inundations under heavy fire.

The battle in its present stage, army officials say, may last several months.

PLOT IS UNCOVERED.

Three London Turks Had Arsenal In Their Room.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 20—A searching investigation is proceeding in connection with the arrest of three Turks—Solomon Hassan, Kamol Risi and Rini Nijib—at their room in Wellington street Wednesday night, following instructions from Ottawa. In a secret pocket of one of the men the police found an unposted letter, address to a Detroit German, stating that the writer, along with his compatriots, was "going to start something here." The letter has been forwarded to Ottawa. Concealed at the men's boarding-house was a rifle, ammunition trunk and a military rifle and several hundred rounds of ammunition.

A Dominion secret service officer is here investigating the matter, and the men will be taken to Kingston.

Government Has Wheat Option.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 20. — A novel step is about to be taken by the Government of South Wales, with a view to preventing any cornering of the wheat supplies. The Prime Minister announced that he proposed to introduce a bill immediately giving the Government full power to purchase the whole ensuing wheat crop of the country at five shillings a bushel He estimated the deficiency in this season's crops at a million bags.

The Sydney Municipal Council has decided upon a preferential treatment of British and allied goods during the war. A 10 per cent. preference will be given British merchants and 5 per cent. to the allies.

Capture More Boer Rebels.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 20.—Remnants of the defeated Boer rebels, led by Gen. Beyers, are being rounded up. An official Pretoria despatch states that 74 cavalrymen and Lieut. Henrik Kirstein were captured Wednesday.

REPORT ON DUGAL CHARGES.

Commission Finds Premier Flemming Not Guilty of Extortion.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Nov. 20.—The report of the royal commission appointed to investigate certain charges made by L. A. Dugal, M.P.P. for the County of Madawaska, against Hon. J. K. Flemming, Premier of New Brunswick, and Hon. M. F. McLeod, formerly Provincial Secretary, were released for publication last night. There are two reports, one dealing with the charge that Mr. Flemming, through the agency of W. H. Berry, chief superintendent of scalers for the province, extorted certain large sums of money from the holders of timber leases in the province, and the other dealing with the construction of the Valley Railway.

In the timber case Mr. Flemming is found not guilty of directing the collection of funds, but the report declares that Mr. Flemming "was well aware that moneys were being collected for a purpose unquestionably improper," and that he manifestly "directed the disposition of such money when collected, also that he acquiesced in the collection of such moneys at a time and from a source highly and grievously improper."

In the Valley Railway case it is reported that the charge has been sustained. The commission report states that no public money has been diverted, and that the Valley Railway has been well built at a cost not unreasonable. It also exonerates any other member of the Government from suspicion of wrong-doing, and finds the charge against Hon. Mr. McLeod also not proven.

In a letter to the electors of the province, Mr. Flemming declares his innocence of extortion, claims that what contributions were made to the campaign funds were voluntary and challenges F. B. Carvell, the leading spirit in the prosecution, to resign his seat in Carleton County and make a test of public confidence at the ballot box.

The reports are very lengthy, covering nearly 30,000 words, and made up for the most part of reviews of the evidence. The Government at a meeting last night heard them, but took no action.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Gen. von Winterfeldt, the Governor of Metz, died at Weisbaden after a short illness.

The Marchioness of Donegal, formerly of Halifax, N.S., and a frequent visitor to Canada, is establishing a movable hospital in France.

The Youngstown, Ohio, Sheet-Tube Works and the Republic Steel Works have received immense orders for barbed wire from European belligerents.

The new levy from the Landsturm of the years 1870 to 1890 was begun in Vienna Monday. Four commissions are sitting and about 3,200 men are passed daily.

Francis Dyke Acland, British Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, will meet the U. S. navy collier Jason, which is acting as a Santa Claus ship, on her arrival in England.

Lord Kitchener has sanctioned the formation at Birkenhead of a battalion consisting of men between five and five feet three inches. It will be called "The Bantams' Battalion."

Samuel Bonsfield, thought to be from Ingersoll, shot himself under the eyes in the headquarters of the 25th Brantford Dragoons yesterday. He was about to apply for enlistment.

The barge R. C. McNeil, with 500 tons of coal aboard yesterday sank off Penfield Reef, Conn., in a terrific northeast gale. Capt. Fred. Pitcher and his crew were rescued with difficulty.

Dr. R. J. Burdette, preacher, author and humorist, died at his home in Pasadena, Cal., yesterday. He had been ill for the greater part of two years and for the last week had been in a state of coma.

CANADIAN LESSONS NOW.

Presbyterians Abolish "Spreadeagle" Variety From Sunday Schools.

TORONTO, Nov. 20. — Canadian Presbyterians yesterday issued their declaration of independence of too much George Washingtonism and Yankeeism in the international Sunday School lessons by publishing, under direction of the general assembly's Sunday School committee, a Canadian Sunday School lesson series. The editor, Dr. Fraser, said yesterday: "You will find nothing un-British in them," as he handed over a complete set of the new lessons.

In addition to the advantages of a distinctive British series, the lessons have the imprinted feature of a complete lesson for each grade according to age.

Six years ago the international lesson committee published a tentative outline for a graded series, but did not follow it up.

Tired of waiting, also animated by a desire for a distinctly British series, the general assembly authorized the series now being made public.

Glasgow Must Hasten Repairs.

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 20.—British cruiser Glasgow, which arrived here Nov. 17 to repair the damages sustained in the naval battle of the Chilean coast Nov. 1 has obtained permission from the Brazilian Government to enter drydock and to receive the most urgent repairs. The repairs must be completed within seven days and at the expiration of that time the vessel will immediately sail for the high seas.

The Glasgow has five holes in her hull made by shells in the battle and four sailors were wounded.

Canada's Aid Appreciated.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Herbert Samuel, president of the Local Government Board, made a statement in the Commons yesterday appreciative of gifts of food, produce and clothing from the dominions, mentioning in detail the consignment from Canada and her provinces, who had vied with each other in their desire to give practical testimony to the feelings entertained for the Mother Country.

He was sure the House would join in an expression of the country's thanks to generous donors of these numerous, valuable gifts, and to those in this country who had so kindly undertaken gratuitously their storage and distribution.

British War Loan Covered.

LONDON, Nov. 20. — Great Britain's new war loan, the largest in her history, already has been covered, according to reports which were current yesterday in banking circles. The bank of England, however, reports that applications have not yet been actually computed, so that their total is not officially known. It was not intended to close subscriptions before to-day unless there should be an enormous over-subscription.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Sharp falling off in receipts at western primary points helped to rally wheat today from a setback, due to lower quotations at Liverpool. There was a steady close at the same as last night to a decline of a shade. Corn lost 1-8c to 5-8c net and oats 1-16c. Provisions finished at a range varying from 30c down to a rise of 17½c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 19.—Wheat prices opened ¼c lower to ¼c higher, oats, ⅛c to ½c higher, and flax, ⅛c to 1⅛c higher.

Liverpool wheat cables were not as firm as anticipated, which caused the erratic opening on the local market. A light volume of business was transacted in options, and prices for the most part fluctuated on a range of about ½c. One prominent member said the market had got into a rut, and a waiting attitude was apparent on all sides. Winnipeg wheat futures closed ⅜c lower to ¼c higher, oats ½c to ⅝c higher, and flax 1½c to 2½c higher.

There was a fair demand for all grades of cash wheat, and offerings more liberal today. Exporters were the principal buyers. Cash oats were in good demand and prices firmer. Barley was in poor demand, while flax was fair and prices stiffer.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—Business over the cable in grain today was very quiet owing to the falling off in the demand from foreign buyers and the fact that prices bid for Manitoba wheat were 3d to 6d per quarter lower. On the other hand, there was an increased demand from local buyers for oats and sales of several round lots of No. 3 C. W. were made for shipment from Fort William at 57¾c c.i.f. here. The tone for Argentine corn was stronger and sales of carlots were made at 84½c per bushel ex-store, while round lots of American corn were bought for shipment from Chicago at 77c per bushel c.i.f. here with 17½ per cent moisture.

Ontario malting barley is stronger, with choice grades held at 76c to 78c. There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour, and as the prices bid in some cases were higher than they have been, yet sales of 15,000 sacks were made for December-January shipment. The local trade in all grades is still quiet. Demand for mill feed continues active and millers are now well sold up of all their surplus supplies, consequently a stronger feeling prevails in the market.

Butter is quiet and steady. There is a good enquiry for cheese, but the volume of business is checked owing to the scarcity of ocean space. Eggs are stronger and prices for strictly fresh have advanced 3c per dozen. The trade in potatoes is fairly active and prices for carlots are 2½c to 5c per bag higher.

CHEESE MARKETS.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 19.—At today's cheese board the total offerings of 2012 boxes were sold at 16½c. The colored were 1752, and the white 259.

Must Warn Citizens.

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—As a sequel to the Toronto militia mobilization incident, Maj.-Gen. Sam Hughes yesterday issued instructions to the general, divisional and district officers commanding that no further instructions shall be given in mobilization without the people being fully apprised in advance. It was understood, he says, that this was to be done in Toronto, but it must have been overlooked.

No Conscription For Ireland.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Government has no intention of attempting conscription in Ireland.

In the House of Commons yesterday Premier Asquith denied there was a plan to apply for such conscription. His statement was made in reply to a question from John Redmond.

Loyalty To Each Other

AN INTERESTING LETTER

On Matters Pertaining to Trade By Mr. Thomas Ritchie

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir.—As soon as war was declared the Imperial Authorities in order to prevent any sort of panic which might arise to unduly disturb trade, urged the people to calmly go on with business as usual, otherwise many thousands of men and women dependent on employment would suffer want. This advice was wisely followed throughout Great Britain. In this way stagnation in trade with its baneful results was largely avoided.

It is much to be regretted that this sensible and patriotic advice was not advocated here. Unfortunately the very opposite course was taken by certain persons in Belleville who went about the country and villages in this district alarming the people and telling them to harbor their resources and curtail their trading. No one could be made richer by such means, but it is certain that many are being made poorer by being thrown out of employment through lack of means in circulation to enable employers of labor to do business as usual. One result has been that persons possessing their usual income have been heard saying that they will do without this and that which they want until the war is over; this not because they are made poor by the war.

Now prudence is a virtue to be observed by all; it is also a virtue to be considerate and to see that no harm is done by locking up or refusing to spend their money on what they want, and so bring distress on others more needy than themselves. In connection with this very matter it is worthy of note that our noble King and Queen are setting good example by holding State Drawing Rooms, even though, according to ordinary custom, the court just now would be in mourning for relatives. The court announced that its intention for doing this was in order that a vast number of those usually employed by dressmakers, milliners, jewellers and in shops and stores would have an oportunity to obtain worpk to earn a living. The pattern thus set by Royalty is naturally being followed by wealthy families in London and elsewhere.

It may be observed here that rural districts like that by which Belleville is surrounded is likely to gain by the war. Nearly all agricultural products are now bringing good prices, and these will likely rise further in value on account of the war while other things which we need, except sugar, which comes largely from Germany and Austria, are now for the most part lower in price, such as farm implements, household effects, clothing, etc.

Credit is due to the farmers of Hastings and Prince Edward for doing nobly in contributing men and other aid to the Empire and in loyally subscribing to the patriotic funds. They, together with citizens of Belleville, can accomplish further good at home by following the advice or British statesmen and the noble example of the Royal House to help the ship to proceed on an even coarse by not allowing themselves to be led astray by alarmists, for if trading is curtailed, as those alarmists have advised, it is certain that it will bring want and distress to very many of our own people here who are least able to bear it, but who are just as willing and ready as we who are better off to give a portion of their scanty earnings to the cause of the Empire. Let us be loyal to one another.

TWO-CENT STAMPS NECESSARY

Postmasters state that a number of postcards have been received with one-cent stamps for the soldiers at Salisbury Plain, when two-cent stamps are necessary to pay the postage. It causes no little inconvenience at the offices and also at the other end when the one-cent stamps are used. The authorities hope that anyone sending cards will take notice of this.

LEFT PRISONER'S PAPERS BEHIND

A prisoner was brought down from Walkerton by two sheriffs on Wednesday night for the Portsmouth Penitentiary, but on taking him to that institution he could not be admitted on account of the sheriffs having brought the wrong papers with them. The prisoner was brought back to the police station and the sheriff telegraphed to Walkerton to have the papers forwarded at once. The man will remain in the cells until the papers are sent from Walkerton.

CAR OF PROVISIONS FOR BELGIANS FROM HILLIER

The loyal old township of Hillier showed their deep sympathy for the distracted Belgians on Thursday last, by loading a car of provisions to be forwarded to that unhappy people who were overrun by the Kaiser's hordes and all who were not killed outright had their homes and means of subsistence destroyed, and are now dependent on the charity of Christian peoples to tide them over this great calamity which was not of their seeking. We understand, also, that the people about Consecon filled another car a day or two later for the same purpose, which is very commendable.

STR. ALETHA WENT ASHORE

Grounded at Indian Point

Wednesday night the heavy seas were instrumental in driving the steamer Aletha ashore at Indian Point near what is known as the upper gap in the Bay of Quinte. The craft did not go hard on but a call was sent to Kingston for the Donnelly Wrecking Company and as they were about to clear for the scene, word was received that the craft had worked herself oft the point. It is not thought that she has sustained any damage.

PRIVATE CAR "EATONIA" BURNED IN YARDS

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—(Special.)—Fire destroyed the Eatonia, Mr. J. C. Eaton's private car, on a siding near the John street bridge yesterday afternoon. The car was being equipped with new motors for the electric lighting, and in some unexplainable manner the car ignited. Being mostly of wooden construction, it burned so rapidly that the workmen were unable to control the blaze. An alarm was rung to the city firemen, but before their arrival the car was practically destroyed. It was valued at about $10,000, and the loss is partially covered by insurance.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

W. W. CORY, C.M.G.,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

BELIEVE JEALOUS RAGE CAUSED DOUBLE SHOOTING

Man Injures His Wife and Fellow-Boarder and Then Disappears With Revolver

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—(Special)—In a fit of jealous rage, it is said, Robert Brown, a boarder at 206 John street, yesterday morning shot another roomer, Norman Smith, and then went to his wife's room, where he made an attack on her. Smith was shot twice in the right leg and once in the left leg, while Mrs. Brown is suffering from a bullet wound in the leg also.

Immediately after the shooting Smith left the house, and although the police were at once notified of the affair he has completely disappeared. When he departed he carried the revolver with him.

Smith was taken to St. Michael's Hospital by the police ambulance. Mrs. Brown's condition is such that she was allowed to remain at her home. Neither person is in a serious condition.

RUSSIA WINS ON SEA

German Cruiser and Two Destroyers Sunk at Libau

Attack by German Fleet on Russian Port In the Baltic Is Reported to Have Resulted In a Triple Disaster — Black Sea Battle Ends In Serious Damage to the Battle Cruiser Goeben.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A news agency despatch from Petrograd says a German squadron which bombarded Libau was later attacked by the Russian fleet, and that in the fight which followed a German cruiser and two torpedo destroyers were sunk.

The following official statement was given out in Petrograd yesterday by the Russian Ministry of Marine regarding the naval battle in the Black Sea between the Russian and Turkish fleets:

"On Nov. 18 a division of the Black Sea fleet, returning from its cruise to Sebastopol, near the coast of Anatolia, sighed 25 miles from the Bhersones light a Turkish detachment consisting of the Goeben and Breslau. The Russian fleet immediately drew up in battle order, bringing the enemy to starboard, and opened fire at a distance of forty cable-lengths (about five miles). The first salvo of 12-inch guns from the flagship Admiral Evstafry struck the Goeben and caused an explosion amidships, setting her on fire. Following the Evstafry, the other Russian ships opened fire, the Russian guns giving an excellent account of themselves.

"A series of explosions were seen in the hull of the Goeben, which opened fire slowly. The enemy seemed not to have expected to meet us. The Germans fired salvos of their heavy guns, directing them principally at the flagship. The encounter continued for fourteen minutes, after which the Goeben withdraw and disappeared in the fog, taking advantage of her speed.

"The Breslau took no part in the fight, holding herself on the horizon. The Evstafry suffered only insignificant damage."

French War Office Finds Little To Report Along Western Front.

PARIS, Nov. 20. — The following bulletins were issued by the French War Office yesterday:—

"The day has been particularly calm. There is nothing to report."

"On our north front the whole day yesterday (Wednesday) was marked by renewed activity on the part of the enemy's artillery, particularly between the sea and the River Lys; the infantry, however, did not attack.

"Between the Oise and the Aisne the operations around Tracy-le-Val resulted favorably for our troops. It will be recalled that we captured this village some days ago.

"The day before yesterday (Tuesday) the Germans tried to retake it from us, and after carrying by assault our outer trenches, they succeeded in reaching the central crossroads of the locality, but a vigorous counter-attack by our Algerian contingent drove the enemy back, captured all the lost ground and inflicted heavy losses.

"In the Argonne region we have maintained our positions.

"Along the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

An official statement made by the German War Office in Berlin declares gains have been made by the Germans west of St. Quentin and Roye.

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractor permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractic is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect. (health).

WIRELESS WRECKED BY U.S. OFFICIALS

Fast Yacht Winchester Reported to be Owned by Belligerent Nation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(Special.)—Without giving any reason for their act, officials of the United States Revenue Cutter Service to-day went on board the fast steam yacht Winchester anchored off Staten Island, in the upper harbor, and destroyed the yacht's wireless outfit. A detachment of men had previously been placed in charge of the vessel by the revenue cutter Seneca. The Government officials intimated that they were acting on orders from Washington.

Previously it had been reported that both the Winchester and the Kanawha, another fast yacht, had been sold, but this could not be confirmed, nor were the names of the supposed new owners given in the reports, although it was intimated that one of the European belligerents was the purchaser.

It was said the Winchester had not cleared for any port and that no license had been taken out for her wireless outfit.

Pigeons Carry Information to Official Berlin

German Ships, Flying Neutral Flags, Captured in North Sea With Birds Aboard

HAS BECOME REAL PERIL

Many Stories Are Related by Reliable Persons of This Method of Getting Inside Information

LONDON — With the recent successful raid of German squadrons into the North Sea to within firing distance of Yarmouth there has come a renewal of the agitation for more efficacious measures of protection against what is called a "spy peril." I can give some personal knowledge and instances of how well the German naval authorities are kept informed of British naval movements.

For some time it has been known in restricted circles in London that the British Admiralty had taken certain measures of a special contingency. Not many people were supposed to be aware of the arrangement in question. It was certainly not expected they would be known in Berlin.

Well, I was talking a few days ago with an American who had just returned from the German capital, where he had, for objects perfectly honorable and compatible with his duties as a citizen of a neutral nation, been in touch with German naval headquarters. In the course of conversation he mentioned the very matter which was supposed to be a British naval secret. I asked where he had learned this information, and he told me it was common knowledge at German naval headquarters. Evidently these "restricted circles in London" had not restricted enough to exclude a German spy.

The recent trial of Lody (the German spy who has since been put to death in the Tower) showed how easily information could be transmitted to Germany through Holland and Denmark. There has been more mystery as to how information could be transmitted with sufficient rapidity to make it valuable in the case of naval movements. Various suggestions have been made within the last two days.

HOME OFFICE IN WRONG.

The Daily Mail yesterday said:

"A few weeks ago the Home Office assured the country that the German system of espionage in England had been perfectly stopped. Since then more ships have been mysteriously torpedoed, sentries have been shot, letters conveying information to the enemy have been seized, and a German squadron has, by the possession of secret information as to the movements of our fleet, evaded the British patrols, safely passed through unshattered passages in British mine fields, and thrown shells on the Suffolk coast.

"Evidence has now come to hand disclosing the method by which information has been conveyed to the enemy, but the informers have not been traced. The night coast-signalling referred to yesterday had been intended for and picked up by 'neutral' boats engaged in fishing or other legitimate pursuits off the British coast. The message received, the boat has gone about, and at daylight, many miles nearer the Dutch or Danish coast, has liberated carrier pigeons with messages. On the return of the pigeons to their home lofts the messages have been conveyed to Berlin, Kiel or Wilhelmshaven.

"By this means the enemy has become possessed of vital information long before a ship could cross the seas, and has made its dispositions accordingly, hundreds of British paying for the treacherous use of the neutral flag.

"Some of these 'neutrals' with their pigeon lofts have been captured by British patrols, and now that the North Sea is closed to traffic, it is believed that German submarines are making use of the pigeon post.

"A bird shot at Franlingham, a short way inland from the Suffolk coast, on Tuesday has been definitely identified as a foreign pigeon and the police are following up information which has come to their hands."

SIGNALLING OFF COAST.

In its issue today the same paper says:

"It is only little by little that the general public learns facts of which the authorities are aware. For instance, it transpired yesterday that on the night preceding the German raid the main roads from the east coast were held in force by military, who stopped every motor car in the fruitless search for vehicles reported to have been working along the coast with a portable wireless and signalling apparatus.

"This follows close on a mysterious incident reported from a few miles south of Cromer. In the early morning a military patrol saw two pigeons fly from the upper window of a house standing in an isolated position a short way back from the cliff. The birds circled around and then flew off over the North Sea and were quickly lost to sight. The house was surrounded, and, there being no one to admit the authorities, an entrance was forced. The occupants, like the pigeons, had flown.

"Further proof of the spy peril, if any be required is provided by a naval officer. He writes:

"'There are two spies that I know of in ——— (and probably more), and I have given enough evidence against them to have them shot three times over, but, owing to their being naturalized Englishmen, the police can not do anything unless they catch them redhanded.'"

Lord Harewood, in the London Evening News, tells of an incident which occurred near Filey. He says:

"Flashlight signals were seen coming from a deserted house on the cliff. Part of this house was used as a nursing home. The building was surrounded and the unoccupied part was searched. Nothing was found. A guard was set, and a day later two German submarines appeared suddenly off Flamborough Head. The next day a man, believed to be a German, dashed out of a house next to the one that was guarded. The sentries were unable to prevent his escape, and, as far as I know, he was never captured.

"I also received information that fast motor cars were flashing signals out to sea. It seems that it is the fishing boats which provide the link between our coast and the enemy. The Germans have used neutral trawlers to receive signals from the shore, and it is not impossible, I am afraid, that trawlers sailing under our own flag, have been in the pay of the enemy."

It has already been recorded that so far a most diligent search has failed to discover the point from which signals are sent to trawlers and submarines at sea, and Lord Harewood's information that fast motors are used to transport the signallers from point to point furnishes the information, particularly when it is remembered that Norfolk and Suffolk villages have told of big cars rushing wildly through the night.

SENATOR VEST'S EULOGY OF THE DOG

"Gentlemen of the Jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son and daughter that he has reared with loving care may become ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him when he may need it most. Man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees and do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend a man may have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is the dog.

"Gentlemen of the jury: A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, when the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince.

"When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun on its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast into the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard him against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes and death takes his master in its embrace and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws and his eyes sad but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even to death."

SOCIAL ASPECTS OF EPILEPSY

Its Symptoms and Tendancy to Handicap the Victim—Incidents Where Families Have Become Public Charge

Mr. Maurice D. Lynch, Chicago, Ill., formerly of Belleville.

It would be too much to hope that in a paper by a layman on "Social Aspects of Epilepsy" any strictly new thoughts upon the subject could be presented, or that attention could be called to any phases of the problem with which you are not already familiar. In fact, the handicaps of the epileptic are so well known to all who have given the matter any thought, it might well seem that nothing was left to be said. However, one who is interested in social work so frequently comes into contact with the problem of the epileptic, and so often is made to realize the hopelessness of successfully dealing with cases of this malady, especially in states where there are no colonies for the care of the epileptic, that he feels impelled, whenever opportunity offers, to reiterate the need of proper provision for these unfortunates.

If what follows should give a new turn of thought to those legislators in the various states who must eventually deal with the problem of the epileptic, or should influence them, in any degree, to lend earnest efforts to provide for the proper care of those afflicted, the only object of this paper will have been attained.

Thanks are due, and are here tendered to those ladies and gentlemen connected with various charity and other organizations in fifty cities of the United States, whose courtesy in furnishing data has helped so much.

In ordinary cases of distress, the social worker finds the existing machinery of his organization sufficient to deal with practically every situation that arises. In these days of day nurseries, outing camps, tuberculosis sanatoriums, visiting nurses and all the other agencies that co-operate with organized charity, about all that is left to worry over is money to keep the machinery going. When epilepsy is encountered, however, the social worker finds himself blocked. Where no colonies exist, nothing adequate can be done for the unfortunates. Most states provide only for epileptics who may be committed as insane, or who may be sent to institutions for the feebleminded. Sometimes different counties send epileptics to the county poorhouses, but the patient who suffers from periodical spasms and who at other times is apparently normal, is without any hope whatever for humane and effective care.

The victim of epilepsy may be quite strong and healthy, willing and anxious to work and provide for himself and family but once he is known to be an epileptic, every avenue to employment is closed against him. Nor can you blame employers for not wishing to hire him. The epileptic employed in a place where there is machinery is a menace to his fellow-workman as well as being liable to injury himself. If he personally handles machinery the danger is greatly increased. If the epileptic is a clerk in an office, he upsets the whole routine of the place when he has an attack and makes his retention in position impossible. The writer remembers well the case of a girl epileptic, who had a violent seizure in a large office where there were some two hundred other young women employed. So much nervous terror was shown by so many of the other girls, it is safe to say that no known epileptic ever will be employed by that particular firm. And you cannot blame the firm for not wishing to spare its employees from witnessing such distressing sights.

We are told that in something like eighty per cent of all cases of epilepsy manifests itself before the age of twenty years. The poor epileptic, therefore, seldom is able to learn a trade or any special occupation, with the result he is not able to hold steady employment and thus provide for himself like other men. He usually is the most inefficient of unskilled laborers. If the disease comes upon him in later life he has to give up his trade, if he has one, because he cannot work steadily at anything and he thus becomes an unskilled laborer. The smaller wage in such cases necessarily reduces the standard of living and usually drives the wife and young children to work, to the detriment of their health and education. Also epilepsy by weakening the control of the individual, is very apt to become a moral handicap, leading to intemperance and vice.

Scores of cases, showing the handicaps of the epileptic in the matter of getting employment, might be cited, but one from Tennessee is all that will be quoted:

The Barker Case. The man in question came to the Associated Charities seeking help to get a newspaper route in the suburbs. He could not hold employment in inside positions but believed that outside work would be possible for him and he had a friend who would loan him a horse and buggy to make the daily trip. The route was according secured for him but a few weeks afterwards he fell out of the buggy during a seizure. He hurt himself and was sent to a hospital for two months. Upon being discharged from the hospital he resumed his route, this time with a boy to accompany him, but on account of frequent seizures he was unable to continue. For a year afterwards one outside job after another was found for him but he was able to hold each one only a short time. At the end of the year he had a stroke of paralysis and, as his mind was becoming affected, he was placed in the insane ward of the County Hospital. He still is there, hopelessly insane. The report concludes with the statement that if there had been a colony of epileptics in the State, so that the man could have been placed therein at an early stage of his affliction, his case would have been in all probability materially helped.

The epileptic, in addition to the handicaps he labors under in the matter of getting and keeping employment is deprived to a great extent of the pleasure of association with his fellow men. His malady usually keeps him from attending srvices in whatever chuch he may belong to. He does not feel that he should go to public entertainments. He cannot, with any satisfaction, share in the sports and diversions of his fellows. If he is intelligent, he often is deeply humiliated because of the aversion in which those so afflicted are held, and because of the fallacy held by many otherwise, intelligent people regarding epilepsy as a contagious disorder. It might be well to mention here that sudden death in an epileptic is common and the cause may not be recognized, and circumstantial evidence associated with the death many involve other persons in serious difficulty.

But it must not be supposed that it is only the victim of epilepsy, himself, who suffers. While his own plight is pitiful enough, the case of his wife and children is no better. As a matter of fact, the presence of an epileptic in any family, even in families where the question of want does not enter, is demoralizing in the extreme. The nervousness of the patient, the ever-present fear of the rest of the family of the expected recurrence of the spasms leads to high nervous tension in all. This is particularly true if the husband and father is the afflicted one. The attacks of the patient make the home an unpleasant place for the children; they do not care to have their friends visit their home, so they begin going away from it for their pleasures. Many children thus learn to live away from home, losing parental restraint and the feeling of filial responsibility. The epileptic in a family, especially where the condition is marked, requires so much attention that one or more normal members of the family are prevented from assuming their proper part in community life, thus entailing material loss to the state.

The presence of an epileptic also decreases the earning power and thus lowers the standard of living in the family. Frequently, where the husband is the afflicted one and the wife is a healthy and capable woman, the litter could easily find employment latter could easily find employment did not have on her hands the care of her husband. If there were institutions in every state to which the epileptic could be committed, the position of the family would be immeasurably better, because the normal members of it could find employment and would enjoy peace of mind. Peace of mind is impossible in a family that numbers an epileptic among its members. A few cases will be quoted, which illustrate the effect of the epileptic husband on the rest of the family:

The Green Family. This family consists of a father, mother and three children, a boy of thirteen, a girl of nine and a boy of eight. The father, a man of forty-eight years, worked as a steamfitter, earning $18.00 a week, until he was suddenly taken with epileptic attacks. Since March, 1909, he has been unable to secure employment. For a year after his illness, the wife endeavored to support the family, working as a charwoman in an office building. The nervous strain of her husband's attacks finally broke her health, and the physicians said that if she did not have complete rest, she would lose her mind. Incidentally, $1,442.70 has been expended upon this family during the period they have been pensioned up to February, 1914.

The Brown Family. Consists of a father, mother and one child, a girl of nineteen. The father, who is sixty years of age, was a brass finisher. For the past six months he has been unable to work. His epilepsy has affected his brain. As he had threatened several times to asphyxiate the whole family, it was found necessary to have him committed to an institution for the insane. It is easy to imagine the mental condition of the other members of this family.

The Johnson Family. In this case the wife became a nervous wreck because of the fear and distress she endured whenever her husband's epilepsy overcame him, which it did several times a year, making him very dangerous, sometmes for weeks at a time. Her health became so bad, she could not withstand an attack of illness that came upon her and she died. Her husband's condition was undoubtedly the indirect cause of her death. The man in this case pleaded pitifully for an opportunity to go to an institution for epileptics and receive proper treatment.

So much for cases where the husband is the afflicted one. Let us now turn to those where the wife is the victim. The malady in the case of the woman usually makes it impossible for her to conduct her household properly. It weakens her will power, causes her often to be inefficient, lazy and careless, and prevents her from making the home attractive to the husband, with the result that epileptic women are very frequently deserted by their husbands. They usually, too, lack proper control over their children. Thus we find many cases of delinquency among the children of epileptic mothers. Let me quote two cases that come from the District of Columbia, which well illustrate this point:

The Smith Family. This family consists of a man, woman and three children. The youngest two are are woman's children and the oldest is the child of the man's first wife. The woman has been ill with epilepsy for at least five years, how much longer we do not know. She has grown steadily worse, and now her mind is affected and her physician say she will never be any better. The oldest child, dissatisfied with his home, has lived away from it for some time and has recently become the mother of an illegitimate child. The youngest child frequently has to stay at home from school in order to care for her mother, who has violent spasms. The situation is made worse owing to the fact that the man drinks, is immoral and does not support the family. During the past winter, he, too, has been ill. The family has sold almost all its furniture and the home conditions are terrible.

The Robinson Family. The family consists of a widow, with four daughters, aged respectively, twenty-eight, twenty-one, eighteen and four years. The mother is an epileptic and while she has gone to a hospital for treatment she is gradually growing worse. She can do fair work as a laundress and good work as a cleaner, but rarely can make more than $1.50 a week, as it is hard for her to secure a place on account of her affliction. Her oldest three daughters are by her first husband, who, she claims is dead. The fourth is the child of a laborer who died in the Home for the Aged, where he was placed after having a stroke of paralysis The three grown daughters each are living with men to whom they are not married, and have illegitimate children.

Where children are epileptic, we find the same strain on the parents and other members of the family as in cases of affliction among adults. Epileptic children nearly always have a poor school record and their lives in school are very unhappy on account of other children making fun at their expense. They often grow up without either mental or physical training, and their chances in life are practically nil. Some children may never be left alone, thus preventing the mother, if she is a widow, from doing anything towards the support of the family and automatically forcing them into pauperism. The case that follows illustrates this:

The Kellar Case. In this case we find a boy, twelve years of age, who has frequent epileptic seizures. During one of these, which occurred recently, he was severely burned. The mother was deserted by her husband some time ago and left without means of support. She is a capable woman and under ordinary conditions would have no difficulty whatever in getting along and making a living for herself and child. She is willing and anxious to work but the boy must be always watched and she is unable to find anyone who will care for him in her absence. The result is she is compelled to accept charity.

It might be well to note that in at least one epileptic colony I have in mind, no provision is made for the reception of any but able-minded men who are "curable," so that in that state, although a colony for epileptics exists, it makes no provision for women and children.

There is another class of epileptic cases to which it may be well to refer. I mean those cases where the question of poverty does not enter but which shows the terrible mental anquish of sensitive, educated victims.

The Henderson Case. I have in mind this case of a young man in an Eastern city. He is exceedingly bright; he stands high in a social way and is very successful in business, but has a strain of epilepsy in his blood. His seizures were infrequent, never more than once a year, sometimes not so often as that. His habits were clean, his integrity beyond question and his personality pleasing. He became betrothed to a young woman of high attainments, but did not make his affliction known to her. While he was following an usher in a theatre one evening, the young woman just preceding him, he was taken with a seizure which was the first he had experienced in two years. That marked the close of the relations between himself and his fiancee. Of

The Submarine

Concerning the Swordfish of The Modern Naval Warfare

Keen interest in the whole question of submarines has been aroused by the success of a German submarine flotilla in sinking the Aboukir, the Cressy and the Hogue. Needless to say the controversy launched by Sir Percy Scott's letter in the Times of June 5 last as to the relative efficiency of the battleship and the submarine in modern naval warfare has been heatedly revived.

As to what the submarine is and does the naval correspondent of the London Morning Post gives the following lucid description:

"So much has been written concerning what the submarine, by a flight of imagination, may achieve, that most people are somewhat uncertain as to what the submarine is and does. To begin with, she is shaped like a cigar, and she carries a tower on her back. Inside the turbular steel hull, valves and tubes and pipes line the wall; aft, in a space so low that the engineer can hardly stand upright, are the internal combustion engines and the electric motors which drive the vessel when she is under water. Below the floor, or deck, of the inside of the hull are petrol and stores. Forward are the torpedo tubes. Amidships there projects downwards from the ceiling a thick brass column ending in a brass cross piece. This is the base of the periscope. When the boat is submerged and the officer desires to see what is going on above, he sets a hand on each arm of the cross-piece, which is level with his face, and rotates the column, while he looks into the mirror.

"In the mirror he beholds an image little and bright, of a section of the sea and horizon, and by swinging it round he can scan the whole circle, reflected in the periscope above, which is the eye of the steel fish. Alongside the periscope is the upright steel ladder leading through two hatches to the deck of the conning tower, which is raised five or six feet above the top of the hull. It is about four feet in diameter, and is protected by a breast-high rail lined with canvas. Here is the wheel, and here, when the vessel is running awash stands the captain and the quartermaster. In fine weather those who are not needed below are grouped on the little half-deck below the conning tower, just above the steel hull itself. Officers and men are dresesd in seaboots, sweaters and rough clothing.

"The submarine running awash forges sullenly onward with a heavy grinding noise, the water lifting and dripping from the gills which project on either side of her snout. Below, the hull is filled with the crashing of the furious engines cramped into the narrow tube of steel. The engineers squat placidly among the racing rods and pistons, in the thick atmosphere tainted with fumes. Should the seawater enter the hull and mix with the petrol gas, the fatal chlorine gas is formed, and the crew are suffocated.

"The method of the subamrines is to cruise at economical speed, ten knots or less, on the surface, until she sights a hostile vessel. As she is so small she can see another vessel before the other vessel can see her. Then she sinks. The captain and the crew go below; the hatches are closed; and the captain swinging his weight upon the cross-piece from the periscope, his eye upon the mirror, gives his orders. The crew are lying along the sides ready to turn valves on or off. The internal combustion engines are stopped and the propellor shaft is connected up to the electric motors. There is a sudden silence.

"The process of submerging is process in the brain of the captain. He has a mental picture of what each tank contains, and how much weight is driven out forward or aft at each order, and what will be the effect up on the vessel. He communicates this process to the vessel itself. He must first dip her bows slightly, then her stern, then her bows again, and so on. If, he makes a mistake the submarine may dive down, and then all is done. The process is reflected in the brain of his lieutenant, who stands near by the captain. In ordinary vessels, if the captain faints or makes a mistake, there are a dozen people at hand who can put it right, because they know what ought to be done.

"Not so in the submarine. The only person besides the captain who knows what is going on is his lieutenant; but the consequences of a mistake would follow so quickly that the lieutenant could not rectify it. Nor would he know in all probability that a mistake had been made until the consequences began. The men lying beside the valves know nothing except how to do what they are told. Nor is there any sensation of motion as the boat sinks. It seems to be as still as a drawing-room on shore.

"The periscope, which is about the size of a saucer, remains about 18 inches above the surface, and, viewed from the deck of a ship, all that is seen is a flitting pennant of white spray, as it cuts the water, like a sea-bird's wing. In any ripple it would be almost imperceptible at two or three hundred yards. Upon approaching to attack, the submarine sinks lower and submerges her periscope so that her captain, looking in the mirror, sees his little and bright picture washed out in green—the green of the water. And from above nothing is visible at all.

"The submarine is now blind. She cannot see through water, but she can steer a course. Her captain has made his calculations before he submerged his periscope. And the range of a German torpedo is about 3,000 yards at 25 or 30 knots. The submarine can fire her torpedo, go about, presently rising until her periscope is above water, then herself continue beneath the surface until she is safe to rise, and like a whale, to breathe again."

TOM SLICK HAS NO KICK AGAINST WAR

He Collected $700,000 on Expired Option from a British Syndicate

"It would be difficult to convince Tom Slick of Oklahama that this European war was anything but a windfall, because Slick has already profited to the extent of $700,000 in hard British cash," said William G. Cochrane of Muskogee, Okla. "Some time ago Thomas B. Slick, oil operator, gave an option to a British syndicate to purchase his oil properties in the Cushing oil field near Muskogee at an agreed price of $5,800,000 the syndicate putting up $700,000 in cash as evidence of good faith. With the outbreak of the European war the option expired and Slick pocketed the $700,000 which the English syndicate forfeited.

"Three years ago Slick didn't have a dime, but he got a job at $100 a month to secure oil leases in Eastern Oklahoma. While working for his employers Slick also did a little prospecting work on his own hook, and together with B. B. Jones, of Bristow, Okla., secured certain oil leases in what is now the Cushing oil fields, which daily produces 175,00 barrels of oil, and now Slick does not have to worry about the higher cost of living."

"Slick's partner, Jones, blew into Indian Territory from Tennessee before Statehood and commenced the oil game. He secured leases on Indian lands and discovered the Cushing oilfield, which is to-day the wonder of the world. A few weeks ago Jones was offered $5,000,000 for his Oklahoma oil holdings, and in addition was to receive one-eighth royalty from his Cushing property alone.

"Four years ago the land in what is now the Cushing oilfield could have been bought for $4 or $5 an acre; today some 160-acre Indian allotments in this district are easily worth $5,000,000. This development of the oil business in Oklahoma reads like a fairy tale, and the luck of Slick and Jones is nothing to the good fortune that has befallen Eastman Richards, a fullblood Creek Indian of Muskogee, upon whose land the great oil strikes in the Cushing field have been made. Richards was given 160 acres of land by the Government and inherited two other sections of Creek Indian lands. To-day those three allotments are valued at $15,000,000, and Rochards gets one-eighth royalty from the oil. His fortune is handled by the Indian office at Muskogee, and when Richards needs a little loose change he interviews the Indian agent and draws out a few dollars."

A CASE IN COURT

For Alienation of Affection

By F. A. MITCHEL

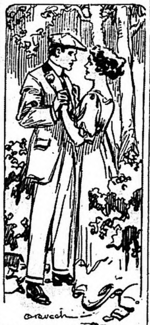
Herbert Harley and Margaret Bartholow were co-eds at —— university. There they formed an acquaintance which drifted into love. Unfortunately for their union Miss Bartholow had an aunt who was an active worker in the cause of equal rights for women with men. This lady, Miss Amelia Ascerbiton, was a member of the bar.

Margaret was graduated with high honors, and her aunt was bent on her preparing for the same profession as herself. There had been a long courtship between Harley and the young lady, during which she had agreed to marry him. Harley endeavored to hold her to her promise, but Miss Ascerbiton contended that marriage in the case of a woman was incompatible with a profession. She therefore endeavored to persuade her niece to break her engagement.

There was a strife between Harley and Miss Ascerbiton as to who should secure Margaret, the aunt for the law, the lover for a wife. The former won. Miss Bartholow broke her engagement and forthwith entered upon the study of the profession her aunt desired she should adopt.

Harley was greatly disappointed and angered, not at the girl he loved, but at her aunt, who had influenced her. For two years he kept nursing his wrath, which, instead of dying out, burned continually fiercer. Meanwhile he and his former fiancee had been leading their respective classes in schools of law and were admitted to practice in the courts. It was then that Harley decided to sue Miss Ascerbiton for the alienation of the affections of her niece.

Miss Ascerbiton sprang to the front like one who smelled the battle from afar. Being an attorney, she took charge of her own defense and persuaded her niece to assist her as associate counsel. Harley conducted his own case, without assistance from any one.



"HER BEAUTIFUL FACE WAS TURNED UP TOWARD MINE."

"Your honor," said Harley, making his plea, "this is a suit to recover damages of the defendant for alienating the affections of her niece from me, the plaintiff."

"I move, your honor," said Miss Ascerbiton, "that the case be thrown out of court from the fact that there was no such affection on the part of the said Margaret Bartholow for the plaintiff as described by him. There being no affection to alienate, this suits falls to the ground."

"I presume you intend to prove," said the judge, "by Miss Bartholow's own statement that she did not love the plaintiff. The court rules that this is a matter which must come up in the usual way, the plaintiff having the right to introduce evidence to prove his case."

Harley proceeded:

"It is incumbent upon me as plaintiff in this case to show just what the defendant has endeavored to prevent my showing—that the said Margaret Bartholow did on the 24th of May"—

"I object, your honor!" cried the defendant's assistant, rising with blushing cheeks. "This is not a suit for breach of promise, but a suit for alienation of affection."

"The objection is not sustained," said the judge. "The plaintiff must prove that there was affection to be alienated or his suit fails."

"Then we admit that there was something like af"— Miss Bartholow was beginning.

"We admit nothing of the sort!" cried Miss Ascerbiton savagely.

"Your honor," interrupted Harley, "I desire to assure the defendant's assistant counsel that I shall respect her feelings so far as possible. I shall not read extracts from letters I have received from her as is usual in cases of breach of promise."

"Stop your pettifogging!" snarled Miss Ascerbiton.

"What do you mean?" asked Harley.

"You're trying to influence the jury to believe that you have evidence that does not exist."

"I do not need such evidence. I will make a simple statement of my own. It was the evening of the 24th of May, 190—, that I visited Miss Bartholow at a country place where she was at the time staying. She was dressed becomingly in a light pink summer silk. It was evening, and the day was receding before the coming night, a half moon presiding over the two. I invited Miss Bartholow to walk with me in the garden. Many of the flowers were in bloom, and the roses were budding. They were beautiful, but the lady at my side was far more beautiful.

"She plucked a rose, the only one in bloom, and placed it on my coat for a boutonniere. Her hand accidentally came in contact with mine"—

"Accidentally?" snapped Miss Ascerbiton.

The jury looked daggers at the defendant, and the judge forbade her making any more such irrelevant interruptions. Harley proceeded.

"A current passed from her hand to my heart. Her beautiful face was turned up toward mine, and I was tempted to kiss her delicately curved coral lips. But I desisted. I had not yet such a right.

"We walked on over gravel paths lined with boxwood, the flowers beyond nodding to us as if to say: 'Hail, lovers! We were born for such as you. We delight you with our beauty. We influence you with our perfume to love. We shall die with the coming of frost, while you love on through the years. But with the opening of the next season we shall influence others to mate and through other seasons their children and their children's children to become lovers.'"

Miss Ascerbiton, seeing the effect this address was having on the jury and presuming that the speaker was intending to contrast it with the breaking up of this love which she was accused of bringing about, arose and said tartly:

"Your honor, I should like to know what this effusion has to do with the case on trial. Does the plaintiff suppose that these intelligent gentlemen of the jury can be influenced by such twaddle?"

"Shut up!" cried a juryman.

"Shoot the old girl!" cried another.

"Go on with the story!" cried a third.

The judge rapped on the desk before him and looked fiercely at everybody in court, awing them into silence. Then he signified to Harley to go on.

"Where was I?" said Harley meditatively.

"In a flower garden with a girl," suggested a juryman.

"In June!" said another.

"No, it wasn't; it was May," a third corrected.

The judge rapped more fiercely than before, then, after an ominous pause, said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, it is permitted you to ask for information bearing on the case, but not to make comments."

Quiet having been restored, Harley proceeded:

"There is a nook in that garden, a bower. In it is a seat overhung with wistaria. We sauntered on and sat down on the seat. The half moon was visible in the sky. A yellow streak marked the place of sunset. A balmy breeze laden with perfume fanned our cheeks."

Here the speaker paused.

"Gentlemen of the jury, out of respect to the feelings of the lady I loved and love today I must end my testimony with the simple words, 'I told her that I loved her, I asked her to be my wife, and she accepted me.'"

There was a look of disappointment on the faces of the jury and, indeed, of all present that the proposal had not been given in full, with a description of the attendant caresses. But out of respect to the feelings of Miss Bartholow, who was quietly weeping, no one insisted on a development of the story. Harley rested his case, but before the defendant arose to speak said:

"May it please the court, I move an adjournment of this case for half an hour. I intend to make an effort to settle the case out of court."

"The court is adjourned for thirty minutes."

Miss Ascerbiton arose, turned her back on her niece, the judge, the jury, and stalked out of the courtroom.

"Goodby, dearie!" said a juryman.

"Why don't you git a feller in a flower garden yourself?" said another.

"You'll have to come down with the dust."

Miss Bartholow said something in a low voice to Harley, who sat on the other side of a table between them. He nodded assent and, rising, said to the judge, who had not yet left the bench:

"Your honor, I am authorized to state by the assistant counsel that this case is settled. She has agreed to marry me on condition that I assent to her practicing her profession if and so long as she chooses to do so. I have no objection whatever to my wife entering any profession whatever, and I have accepted the condition."

There was a murmur of approbation by those present, and the plaintiff and assistant counsel for the defendant left the courtroom together.

Mrs. Harley on reflection chose to let her husband be the provider for the family and gave up practice. After the arrival of their first child she was the more confirmed in this decision.

STYLES

Not many styles will come from Paris this year. France is in the grip of war. The shops of the great modistes and milliners are closed.

Every year we send millions of dollars, to France and elsewhere, for feathers, flowers, hats, gowns, jewelry, silks, etc., for feminine adornment.

Yet these things are produced in Canada. Canadian artisans and Canadian workpeople are creating and producing dainty frills and furbelows that are hard to beat.

It remains for Canadian women to buy them.

The mere fact of an article being imported gives it no added value. On the contrary it should be a reproach at a time like this when Canadian industries need your support.

These things are made in Canada, of good material and good workmanship, and they're being sold at prices that discount imported articles every time.

It's a splendid thing to knit socks and Balaklava caps for soldiers, but you will be showing yourself strangely inconsistent if you pass up the work of your fellow Canadian women for something that foreign women have turned out. 15A

THE "TIPPERARY" SONG

Melody Made Famous by the War Was Refused by Several Publishers

The British troops arrived in France singing "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary;" they sing it in the trenches, it is heard in the hospitals and wounded soldiers sing it as they step ashore when invalided home. The history of this now famous song was related by Mr. Bert Feldman, of Messrs. B. Feldman and Co., the publishers.

"It was early in September, 1912," he said, "that Jack Judge, the author of the song, sought his first interview with me. Mr. Judge, who is a vaudeville singer of much excellence as well as an author of songs, recounted to me in glowing terms the success he was everywhere making with 'Tipperary,' but quite frankly informed me that he had unsuccessfully tried in several quarters to publish it before coming to me. One publishing house, he told, returned his song with the opinion that it was worthless.

"Appreciating his candor, I asked him to sing the song to me. It instantly impressed me as full of possibilities. I suggested a few alterations in the construction of the refrain, which, he agreed, greatly improved its swing. Thereupon I set to work with the publication of the song. Much to my surprise, I was not tremendously encouraged by the artists to whom I originally submitted the song for exploitation, but this did not shake my belief in its ultimate success.

"I ultimately induced Miss Florrie Forde to produce 'Tipperary' at the Isle of Man. This, to my mind, was the 'psychological moment' in its career, for its success was electrical, and the thousands of visitors took it and made it it their own. From this eventful night of July 21, 1913, the popularity of the song has grown until 'Tipperary' is to-day in world-wide demand.

"Our average sales alone are 10,000 copies daily and the sales, from present signs, must approximate two million copies."

NOT LIKE THE BOER WAR

One Was "Marching," Other is "Fighting" all the Time

"The difference between the South African war and this is that one was marching and the other fighting," said a corporal of the Coldstream Guards, who, having been in both, is now in West Ham Hospital.

"I saw more fighting in two weeks this time," he added, "than I did in two years in South Africa, and when I went to join my regiment there scores of dead lying by the roadside.

"One terrible scene," added the corporal, "was when after a battle we collected the wounded—German and our own—and put them in a big farm house. The German guns shelled the place and we got our wounded out first. The place caught fire, and it was awful to hear the cries of the German wounded and the screaming of the cattle close by.

"We could not put a red cross flag up, we had not got one."

The Social Aspects of Epilepsy

course, it is well that it did. It illustrates, however, in a striking way, the handicaps of the epileptic in the social relation of life.

The Sanderson Case. Another case, which presents a strong moral lesson, is this one of an intelligent young woman, well educated and ambitious, who held a good position in a manufacturing establishment in Pennsylvania. She had always craved the beautiful things of life and finally met a well-to-do young man who fell in love with her. He could have given her all the things for which she longed. She had, however, been subject to epileptic seizures for a number of years and had received treatment from a doctor in her city. When she realized that she wanted to marry, she went to this doctor and asked his advice. The doctor sent her to an alienist in Philadelphia, who examined her carefully and told her he felt she would be doing a great injustice to the man if she married him, as well as to the children who might possibly come from the union. The girl gave up the man and has since lived her life with courage and fine spirit, but it is quite patent that such an attitude could not be expected from people of lesser moral courage and insight into the future.

In the course of social work among families of epileptics, we see so many striking illustrations of the influence of heredity in epilepsy, that surely it requires no expert knowledge of the subject to draw from them the conclusion that the epileptic must not be permitted to propagate his kind if any headway is to be made against the advance of this great scourge. From Pennsylvania comes a case which shows clearly the influence of heredity.

The Williams Case. Another typical epileptic family is this one from Illinois, where the husband, forty-nine years of age, is epileptic. The wife is sickly and worn out. The oldest child, a daughter of twenty was in one of our State Schools for three years. She has had two illegitimate children. The next child, a boy of eighteen, was at another State institution for several years. He left school at the fourth grade. He works irregularly and is given to drink. The next child, a boy of sixteen, left school at the fourth grade. He refuses to work unless threatened with court action. The fourth child, a girl of thirteen, is still in school in the third grade. The next child, a boy of ten, is in the first grade and is feeble minded. The two youngest children, boys of seven and three respectively, are nervous and unmanageable. This family is and always have been dependent on Public and private charity, although three of the children have now attained working age.

The White Case. In this family, the husband is forty-two years of age, the wife forty-six years, and there are five children of thirteen, ten, nine, eight and seven respectively. The family has been helped by the Associated Charities for ten years. The man is unable to work because of frequent attacks of epilepsy. At one time he was earning $3.50 a day, but he cannot hold a position any more. The woman is an inefficient home maker and four of the children were committed to the State School for Dependent and Neglected children. Two of them have infantile paralysis and the youngest child suffers from an incurable skin disease. She also is feeble-minded and extremely nervous. The cost of this family to the community has been great.

Scores of cases such as these might be cited to show how epileptic parents beget epileptic children. With slight variations, the tale is always the same.

From no matter what angle you view the problem, you are forced to the conclusion that the epileptic at large is a menace to society. Sometimes this truth is brought home in a terribly impressive manner. Only last week we, in Chicago, were shocked by reading accounts of the brutal murder of a four-year-old girl by a well known epileptic. In spite of the well known fact that many epileptics just prior to seizures have a strong homicidal mania and that the records are full of deeds of violence committed by epileptics who really were not to blame for those crimes done while in the grip of their malady, society in general seems to view epilepsy with an indifference that is almost incomprehensible to those who have given the subject even the most casual thought.

Surely, there is only one sane way to meet the situation and that is to enact in all states laws committing epileptics to properly equipped colonies, where they may be intelligently dealt with.

There is little doubt that the question of cost is chiefly responsible for any state being without a properly equipped colony for epileptics. If, tomorrow, colonies could be established without cost, no state in the Union would be without one or more. Now, when we consider that every state, right now, does indirectly pay for the care of every case of epilepsy within its borders and pays at a ruinously expensive rate, is it not disgraceful that epileptics everywhere are not humanely and scientifically cared for?

The answer of the average State Legislature to the plea for colonies and the excuse the average legislator makes to his conscience for failing to urge their establishment, is "we cannot afford it now. We cannot pay out that much money now." But they do pay and pay dearly, not only in money but in broken homes and broken hearts and every generation a terrible legacy in the ever-increasing number of these unfortunates who must be cared for.

The high cost of living in Europe is not made any less high by the sweeping reductions in the number of those who are alive.

According to one of the war aviators, they have to fly high in order to be safe. Yes, and then they are not disgustingly safe.

For an implement definitely ed to the military scrap hea experts the bayonet is doing ing amount of work during t of blood and horror.

THE SOLDIER'S FEET

Great Care Must be Taken to Prevent Lameness—Boots Must be Large

One of the lessons taught Great Britain by the South African War was that sound feet are of the highest military importance. That she benefited by the experience obtained in that campaign is indicated by the fact that the British army in France has shown itself capable of marching long distances and of fighting splendidly without time for rest. Yet a number of wounded soldiers returned home suffering from footsore, so that the following hints may be of value to those men who have offered their services to their country:

1. The soles of marching boots should be thick but flexible and hand-sewn, and not riveted or machine sewn. The latter form a ridge inside which is uncomfortable.

2. In order to avoid the difficulty of new boots, which draw the feet by extracting tannin from the leather, the boots should be a size larger, and have a loose sole of thick wool, which will prevent the tannin being extracted from the leather.

3. A thick woollen sock will absorb the perspiration and form a pad for the foot. If the boots are hard they should be rubbed with castor oil.

4. All boots should be ventilated and this can be done by punching a row of small holes just above the vamps, not low enough for the water to get in. These holes can be protected from rain by having a slip of leather a little full to cover them, to run the wet off.

5. The following powder is found useful for chafed, sore, and tender feet: Three parts of salicylic acid; ten parts of starch, eighty-seven parts of pulverized soap stone.

6. Blisters should be pricked with a clean needle at the edge, the fluid pressed out, and then coated with collodion with a camel's hear brush, which can be purchased for a few cents.

7. The feet should be washed every night. Nails are useful on grass to prevent slipping, but on stones they are slippery and dangerous.

REGIMENTAL PETS

Not Unusual For Animals to Accompany Troops to Front

Some of Britain's soldiers have taken the regimental mascots with them to the front. This is no new departure, for in the Boer War most regiments took their pets with them—by permission or without it. Among the most notable of them was Billie, the brindled bulldog of the 2nd Royal Irish Rifles, who had come unscathed through previous campaigns, as his medals testified. There were also two monkey mascots which attracted attention, belonging respectively to Strathcona's Horse and the C.I.V., both of which rode in procession through London at the close of the war.

The most famous of regimental pets is the goat of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, but the record for service with the colors belongs to the late and much-lamented Bob, of the Royal Berkshire Regiment. Bob—a dog—was at Maiwand when his regiment made its gallant stand to cover the guns, and he figures in the group of heroes pictured in "The Last Eleven at Maiwand." He came off with a bullet-wound in the back, and on returning to England had the honor of being decorated by Queen Victoria.

A CHAPLAIN'S EXPERIENCES

Britain's Soldiers Eager to Engage in Religious Exercises at Front

In a letter from a British army chaplain at the front he says: "I have been able to do a fair amount of spiritual work. It is remarkable how at such times as this men look for it. If ever human nature showed that at bottom the conciousness of God is in it, it is at times like this, when men cannot tell what the day will bring. I have been able to hold Communion, and wish you could see the officers and men in big circles, not such ones as one sees in time of peace, but hundreds. And round the camp fire where they can be lighted, we hold evening service and sing hymns, 'Abide With Me,' 'Lead, Kindly Light,' and 'Holy Father in Thy Mercy,' which goes so well to 'Art Thou Weary?'—the real tune they do not know. Well, a great deal of good is done, and the desire and response of all shows that the work done has been good. Our men are wonderful, but the Germans—well, if the way they carry on here is any criterion of how they would carry on if they got to England, God help us, for no one else could."

"Mothering" the Strangers

Three British soldiers back from the front with slight wounds were taking the air on a London 'bus. They offered their pennies between warlike cries of "Are we downhearted? No!" The conductor would not take the coppers, saying, "You have a joy-ride, boys." Then he went to collect the fares of a stranger, his wife and their two children. It appeared that they were Belgian refugees, and instantly the Tommies held up the conductor with, "You've got to have our pennies for them. Are we downhearted? No!"

Twenty-one Years' Siege

Crete endured the longest siege on record, beside which Troy's ten years seem but a skirmish. In 1648 the Turks, attempting to conquer the island, laid siege to the capital city of Candia, which, however, did not surrender until September, 1669, after twenty-one years. Again in 1821, when the Cretans revolted, the defeated Turks were able to hold the fortified cities against all attacks, and many of them were still uncaptured when the Powers intervened nine years later.

To enable two persons to ride on a motorcycle seated side by side a New York man has invented a double seat and supports that enable them to maintain their balance.

KITCHEN WRINKLES

Kettles may be thoroughly cleansed by boiling a few potato peelings in them.

When cooking apples put a pinch of salt with them. They will always be most beautifully tender.

Never put parsley into water, where it quickly decays. It will keep much fresher if placed in an air-tight tin or canister.

To clear beetles out of cupboards and larders sprinkle a little benzine over the boards, and it will kill the eggs as well as the insects.

To remove iron rust from linen or cotton goods, boil a small quantity of rhubarb and dip in that portion of the material which is spotted.

To serve up cauliflower whole and unbroken boil in a cloth, as it may then be lifted out of the saucepan without any detriment to its appearance.

The lives of gloves may be prolonged by placing a small piece of cotton wool in the tip of each finger and thumb. This will prevent the nails rubbing them into holes.

Before cleaning out a fireplace sprinkle a good handful of tea leaves among the ashes. This makes the ashes lift more easily, and prevents the dust from flying about the room.

To clean lamp glasses hold them over a jug of boiling water until well steamed, then polish with a dry duster. It is far less trouble than washing, and the glasses very rarely break.

There is often trouble in getting cream to whip up properly, but if a few drops of lemon juice are added it will soon become thick. Care must be taken not to add too much, as that would make it curdle.

His One Mistake

Jim Crook, who travelled incognito—sometimes as a Russian prince, sometimes as an Italian count, occasionally as a German baron—spent most of his life crossing and recrossing the Atlantic from New York to Liverpool.

By profession he was a cardsharper; and he found the big ocean liners an admirable hunting-ground, for he was a man of considerable charm of manner, and had an extraordinary knack of establishing himself in the good graces of distinguished fellow-travellers.

Once he made a mistake.

"I should like very much to hear one of your sermons, sir," he remarked to an eminent clergyman whose acquaintance he had made on the first day out from Liverpool.

"Well," replied the parson, who was no mean judge of character, "you ought to have heard me last Sunday."

"Ought to have heard you! Was it an exceptionally good sermon?"

"Oh, no! But I was preaching in the chapel at Portland Prison!"

The Long-sought Chance

"Very well," she said, "if you are afraid to ask father for me we will consider our engagement at an end."

"Thank you," he replied. "I was afraid you might be disagreeable about it."

Answered

"Porter—porter!" asked the fussy old lady. "How long will the next train be?"

"Well, mum," answered the waggish porter, "I can't say exactly, but I should say four coaches and a guard's van, and the engine!"

TRUTHS ABOUT OZONE

Undiluted Article Would be as Fatal to Patient as to Disease

What about ozone, anyway?

The ozone that is strong enough to do any good through the killing of bacili is strong to kill folks, too. Anyhow this is what a prominent medical journal says on the question of "Ozone myths":

"Faith in the subtle and far-reaching effects and the health-giving virtues which have at one time or another been attributed to ozone has somehow been instilled into the popular mind," says the article.

"Seaside and mountain resorts alike have benefitted by the reputation of 'ozone in the air' in the neighborhood involved. The excusable longing of an ever-ailing population for a stimulating atmosphere and for an ideal antiseptic has led many to look hopefully toward that substance which appears to represent the acme of the valuable properties of oxygen.

"The honest manufacturer and the medicine faker have both been alert to avail themselves of the opportunity for public service, so that 'ozonizers' and 'ozonoized' products are displayed in abundance.

"The ozone question presents its facts as well as its fiction. Ozone undoubtedly has antiseptic power; but for such effects a dangerous concentration appears to be necessary. Lately it has become possible to prepare pure ozone and to investigate its physiologic properties. Prof. Leonard Hill and Dr. Martin Flack of London find that 'a concentration as little as one per million is irritating to the respiratory tract. Exposure for two hours to a concentration of fifteen to twenty per million is not without risk to life.'

"The concentration of ozone necessary to kill bacilli would also kill tissues in which they occur. There is no harm in breathing weak concentrations of ozone. Ozone in somewhat higher concentrations (one per million) may have some value, but proof of its value may well be demanded, especially so long as there are other and better curative agents."

Care of Flat Irons

If an iron is allowed to get red hot, it will never retain the heat as well again. The flat-iron is badly abused if allowed to stand on the range and in a dusty place. Irons should be put away to cool as soon as done with, and then kept in a cool place away from dust till wanted again.

Belgium Honors a Wooden Leg

One mystery for foreigners who witness the celebrations of Belgian independence is the part which a wooden leg plays in the processions. Thereby hangs a tale. During the barricade fighting in Brussels in 1830 the Dutch troops were harassed unmercifully by a wooden-legged patriot named Charlier, of Liége, who, in spite of his infirmity, stumped behind his huge gun wherever there was need of him. "Jambe de Bois" ("Wooden Leg"), as he was known, became one of the popular idols of those strenuous days, and ever since the symbol of a wooden stump has been calculated to excite the wildest enthusiasm amongst the Belgian populace.

to its readers who will ever be grateful for the opportunity offered by this grand educational distribution.

In addition to the 600 beautiful text illustrations are full page plates of the famous Tissot pictures in handsome colors. As Edward W. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, says: "This Bible is not a meaningless picture book. The illusrations serve a distinct purpose. They enrich the text, but they do more—they intelligently EXPLAIN it, so that many a hitherto obscure passage assumes to thousands a new meaning through these eye-teaching pictures."

You will enjoy this Bible, whether you belong to church or not, for its "eye-teaching" pictures make it of rare educational value to all.

This is what Abraham Lincoln said: "No library is complete without two certain books—the Bible and Shakespeare; hardly a quotation is used in literature that is not taken from one of these books."

HEAVY CANNON FIRE USUALLY BRINGS RAIN

Downpours Have Followed Most of the Great Battles Since Large Guns Were Introduced

It is one of the extraordinary things of warfare that a big battle invariably produces torrents of rain.

History contains innumerable instances, both on land and sea, and on more than one occasion the storm or showers that followed an engagement had no small influence upon the life of nations.

The soldiers who fought so bravely under the leadership of Marlborough at Blenheim in the year 1704 had to suffer the misery of successive downpours after their brilliant victory.

Marlborough was anxious to follow up his victory without delay, but his men were so worn by the fatigue of the battle and the discomforts caused by heavy rains and the contingencies of warfare that he was unable to push on for several days.

On June 16, 1815, the British defeated the French at Quatre Bras, and Napoleon worsted the wily Blucher at Ligny, both within measurable distance of Waterloo. The heavy rains which followed these engagements made the clayey soil almost impossible for cavalry manœuvres at Waterloo (fought on June 18), and so crippled the tactics of Napoleon and greatly assisted those of the Duke of Wellington.

During the early weeks of the siege of Sebastopol, in 1854, the roar of cannon and explosion of bombs was followed, day by day, by heavy downpours of rain, until, as we read, the British soldiers stood in the trenches knee-deep in mud. A terrible gale broke over the Black Sea and caused great disaster to Britain's transports, and on the heels of this tempest came a heavy, steady downfall that brought death to hundreds of gallant fellows.

In yet another instance the heavy cannonading of a siege brought in its train a disturbance of the elements. This was just prior to the fall of Plevna, in 1877, when the moisture of the clouds was turned to snow as it fell, and, by increasing the sufferings of the besieged, helped to make Osman come to the determination to try a last chance for freedom.

The explanation of the rain is comparatively simple, and has been made use of for the benefit of agriculture in various parts of the world. The atmosphere is laden with moisture, a concussion caused by loud reports or noises will often burst the clouds, with the natural result that the drops of water fall to the earth. This has been practically tested when farmers have been groaning over the drought, and scientists have induced the desired rainfall by causing cannon to be discharged at altitudes varying with the locality. When, however, the discharge is continuous, as in battle, it is obviously more effective.—Pearson's Weekly.

BOOMED GERMANY'S NAVY

Von Koester the Human Dynamo Behind the Navy League

In the amazing propaganda carried on by the Germany Navy League lies the secret of the conversion of the nation once known as the land of thinkers and poets into a race of naval enthusiasts. It is the Navy League which has driven the doctrine of sea power so deep into the German marrow that it has become a religion and Admiral von Koester is the personality which has been behind the league. The methods of a predecessor in office brought the organization to the brink of disintegration. The Imperial Admiralty was face to face with a calamity. The break-up of the Navy League threatened danger to the whole future of German naval policy.

ADMIRAL VON KOESTER

Koester had just relinquished the commandership-in-chief of the high seas fleet with the rank of grand admiral, which corresponds to the highest rank in the army, that of a field marshal. The executive gifts which had distinguished his entire career speedily enabled him to restore harmony in the league's warring ranks. On the wave of enthusiasm which accompanied the dawn of the dreadnought era, the Flotten-Verein was launched on a new career of prosperity and power.

Voices of the War

Given time, the British Empire can put 20,000,000 men in the field.—Lord Charles Beresford.

If there was some great organiser who deliberately planned this war, the curse of humanity will pursue him to the end.—Lord Rosebery.

With regard to what aeroplanes will actually do during this war, I do not anticipate that they will achieve any big coup.—Mr. B. C. Hucks.

The times have improved. There are no scandals in food supplies to the foreign armies.

RED CROSS WORK

International Body Came Into Existence Half Century Ago

Before the end of the 18th century ambulance service in war was almost unknown. Wounded soldiers were left on the field unattended until after the fighting—it might be the day after the fight or later before surgical help or any help reached them.

The French army was the first to organize a system of flying ambulance carriers. Other nations adopted a similar system, and in the British-Indian army a special caste of bearers did the work.

The army organization of the various nations advanced rapidly in efficiency, but complaints and charges were frequent of treachery and attack on the ambulance and medical staffs of the armies. It was not until 1864 that an attempt was made by the Geneva convention to fix a code of international rules governing the treatment of surgical and ambulance corps of opposing armies. Many conventions were held after this date until the final one in 1906-7 at which 35 States were represented and rules adopted governing the treatment of the wounded and their attendants, both on land and sea.

The Red Cross Society is not a military organization, but works with and under the army in the field. Every nation has, of course, its own medical staff and ambulance corps as part of the army equipment, but all now wear the badge of the Red Cross of the Geneva convention—the Red Cross on a white band on the left arm.

It is not necessary to elaborate on the details of the work. First aid on the field, carrying away the wounded to the rear, bandages, stimulants, water, medicine. Then the field hospital, the hospital trains, the home depots. All nations have a very perfect system both on sea and land.

GERMANY'S CRACK CORPS

Sons of Royal Family Receive Military Training in Guards

The German Guards Corps—the flower of the Kaiser's troops—comprises the very finest regiments in the Prussian service.

The corps includes four regiments of Foot Guards, the Emperor Alexander and Emperor Franz Grenadiers (each with the Czar and Austrian monarch as its titular chief); the Queen Elizabeth Guards Regiment, named after the widow of Frederick William IV. of Prussia; and the Queen Augusta Grenadier Regiment, which received its name when the wife of the first German Emperor was appointed to its head.

In the corps are also the Guards Fusilier Regiment, known in Berlin as the "Mai Kaifer" ("May Beetles"), from their brown and black shoulder-straps, the Guards Rifle Regiment, and the Chasseurs of the Guards.

Of these crack regiments the 1st Foot Guards have served as the military cradle and training school of practically every male member of the Hohenzollern family from the Kurprinz Frederick, afterwards King Frederick I., to the present Emperor, who was gazetted to it as a boy of ten.

IRISHMAN'S SELF-SACRIFICE

Gave Their Lives Rather Than Bring Ruin to Villagers

Because they did not wish the Germans to wreak their vengeance on the house and the village which had sheltered them, two troppers of the Irish Dragoons sacrificed their lives in the most heroic circumstances. One of them had arried his chum, who was slightly wounded, to a farm house under fire, and when the retreat came got left behind. Suddenly a German patrol appeared. There were only the two—one wounded against a dozen Uhlans, but behind a barrier of furniture the two Irishmen kept the Germans at bay, wounding or killing half of them. The Germans then made off and brought a machine-gun to the house and threatened to destroy it. The two soldiers, not unmindful of the kindness shown them by the owners of the farm, and rather than bring loss on them or the village, made a rush out with some mad idea of taking the gun. But in vain. Just over the threshold of the door they fell dead, their blood bespattering the walls of the house.

THE BOY WHO WENT BACK

"The Sooner We Get Through, the Sooner We'll Get Home"

"God bless your son! If it had not been for him I should not be here (in the hospital) to tell the tale," wrote Gunner Batey, of the Royal Garrison Artillery, to the parents of a comrade-in-arms. "We had been fighting for three days across the Meuse," he says, "and I was severely wounded by shrapnel, and fell. We had to retreat, but we were determined to save the guns. I fell again, and with horses yoked our men drove off. Your son and I had fought side by side, and he missed me. The noble lad came back through fires of hell and carried me to safety. He was wounded, but not dangerously. We are all proud of that boy: he is always in the thick of it. When he laid the gun it played h—— among the Germans, and all over the line you could hear him: 'Into 'em, lads; the sooner we get through the sooner we'll get hom.'"

A PERSONAL VIEW OF RUSSIA'S RULER

Emperor Nicholas Kindly and Unassuming When He Gets Chance to Move Among Subjects

The Czar of Russia, unlike his arch-enemy, the German Emperor, is a man whose life is largely shrouded in mystery. With the Kaiser it is a case of "power and publicity." With the Little Father of all the Russias it is a case of mighty influence, swayed by a man whose personal side is seldom revealed. One of the officers closest to the Czar is his personal bodyguard. This position was held two years ago by Count Simon Rodianoff, and after he relinquished it he gave to the world many personal stories of his imperial master which otherwise would never have become public.

On one occasion his Majesty announced his desire to have a droshky brought, so that he might go for a drive in the country incognito. While Count Rodianoff went to inform the necessary members of the Household of the imperial wish, the Czar strolled in the park. When the bodyguard came upon him, about half an hour later, he was helping a gardener to lop off the dead limbs from a tree.

In civilian attire the Czar and his bodyguard walked past a wing of the palace, and, through an open window, heard voices. They approached, and, looking in, saw about a dozen sentinels seated at a round table, drinking vodka and playing cards. One of the men was telling his companions of a love affair, at which they all laughed heartily. The sentinels sprang to their feet, saluted, and presented arms.

THE CZAR OF RUSSIA

The Czar smiled.

"How do you do, boys? Go ahead, and don't be disturbed by me," he said.

When the droshky came they drove into the country, enjoying the sunshine and the delightful rural scenery, until they came to a typical Russian inn, where the Czar stopped the horse, and, announcing that he was hungry, entered the hostelry.

Mine host was deep in a discussion of politics with a number of peasants that had stopped on the way to market with their produce to drink vodka.

"We want something to eat," said the Czar.

But all the innkeeper had in the house were some old, dried-out ham, herrings, and eggs. However, one of the peasants had a cartload of crabs, and the Czar asked the innkeeper to buy a couple of dozen and boil them.

"I have no time to boil you crabs," quoth mine host. "If you are hungry eat herring and drink vodka."

"But suppose I pay you ten roubles?" persisted the Czar.

The innkeeper looked at the speaker.

"I'm sure your money doesn't grow on trees," he replied. "You buy the crabs from the man and pay me fifty copecks for boiling them, and I shall be satisfied. I don't wish to be too greedy."

Half an hour later his Imperial Majesty and his bodyguard sat down at table with the peasants and partook heartily of a repast of boiled crabs and tea, of which the Czar afterwards said that he had never enjoyed a meal more.

Later in the day the Czar and the count took part in a wedding they found in progress in the cottage of a humble fisherman.

"I know people pretty well from their appearance," said the old peasant, smiling shrewdly. "I know from your face that you are either a commercial traveller or an agent for a drapery house."

Nevertheless, the two distinguished tourists attended the wedding, and drank with the bride and bridegroom; and the next morning the Czar sent a present to the bride, consisting of a fine service of silver, a five-hundred-rouble note, and a personal message, which ran:

"I congratulate the newly-weds, and send my wedding present.

Nicholas I."

Though the Czar enjoys a sirolt incognito, he is guarded at his various residences in the closest possible manner.

Heroic Highlander

the foot of the hill of Jouarre, ne La Ferté, is a simple wooden cr, bearing the inscription, "T. Campbell, Seaforths." GRADUATING EXERCISES AT LOCAL HOSPITAL

Seven Bright Young Ladies Presented With Diplomas on Completion of Their Studies--Capable Addresses by Dr. McCullough of Toronto, Dr. Gibson, J.W. Johnson, M. P. P., and Others--A Most Enjoyable Affair

The assembly room at the hospital was last evening filled to overflowing with citizens who gathered to participate in the graduating exercises. Seven young ladies who have completed their studies as trained nurses composed the class. The room was most tastefully decorated for the occasion with flags, bunting and flowers.

Mayor Wills occupied the chair, and as usual he made a most capable chairman. Associated with him on the platform were the members of the graduating class. The proceedings were opened by an appropriate prayer being offered by Rev. R. C. Blagrave, Rector of Christ Church.

His Worship, in a few most appropriate remarks referred to the fact that the ladies predominated at the gathering and also predominated in the good work of the hospital. They also did good work in caring for the poor of the city. In speaking of the hospital the Mayor referred to the capable superintendent, Miss Greene. This was a most worthy institution and was managed in an excellent manner. Whilst we were all naturally at present much interested in the war and giving liberally of our means for a patriotic purpose we should not forget or neglect the hospital, but assist it in every possible manner. He congratulated the young ladies who were graduating. They will assist the doctor in making a cure. It is a great work they are engaged in and there is no doubt they will do their duty well.

Miss Greene, Superintendent of the hospital, read a report which showed that much work was being done in the institution. In 1913 no less than 853 patients were cared for and this year the number would be no doubt as great. There have been 60 graduates from the hospital and 150 letters had been received from young ladies who were desirous of becoming nurses. There had been but little sickness amongst the nurses this year, indeed they were a healthy family. Some of the nurses had volunteered to go to the front since the war broke out, and while none had as yet been accepted they might be for the second contingent. Miss Greene in conclusion thanked the physicians of the city for the interest they had taken in the institution.

Dr. W. S. McCullough of Toronto, Chief Provincial Health Officer, was

DEMAND SUPPRESSION OF HENRI BOURASSA

Sons of England Lodge at Ottawa Appeal to the Premier

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.--The proposed address to be delivered by Mr. Henria Bourassa, before the "People's Forum" on Sunday night continues to excite attention. Mr. Bourassa is down for a talk on "Canada's National Duty at the Present Hour."

Last night Bowood Lodge, Sons of England, passed a resolution of protest, asking "the Premier, Minister of Justice, Secretary of State and Col. A. P. Sherwood, Commissioner of Dominion Police, to take such steps as they consider necessary to prevent the appearance of Mr. Bourassa here Sunday evening."

It was also decided to ask the Government to suppress La Devoir should articles appear in it embodying statements detrimental to the interests of the British Empire.

FEW SHIPS TO CARRY FOOD TO GREAT BRITAIN

Large Supplies Have Accumulated in Montreal--Problem Grows Serious

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—(Special)—The scarcity of tonnage eastward on the St. Lawrence is seriously hampering the movement of food and equipment from Canada to Great Britain and Europe, and the approaching close of navigation from Montreal promises new difficulties. Large quantities of freight have accumulated at Montreal for shipment, and room must be found for it within the next few days, or it must be carried to another port. Deputy-Minister O'Hara, of the Department of Trade and Commerce, is in Montreal in connection with the problem.

NO POSTAL MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE IN MEXICO

Suspension of Service is Probably Due to the War Affecting Exchange

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—(Special)—The Government of Mexico has notified the Postoffice Department that the money order business between Mexico and Canada has been temporarily suspended. Consequently post masters throughout the Dominion have been notified not to issue any money orders for payment in Mexico. The reasons for the suspension of the service with Mexico are not given, but it is thought to be due to conditions of exchange brought about by the war.

It looks like a chameleon Christmas from here; what?

MAYOR OF MONTREAL APPOINTS BROTHER TO CIVIC JOB

Easy-Money-$1,500

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—Mayor Martin has now added his brother, Alexander Martin, to the civic payroll to the extent of $1,500 per year, free house, light, heat and other incidentals. The position to which the Mayor's brother has been appointed is termed "Guardian of St. Helen's Island." There has been no such position for some time past, and the Mayor was of the opinion that with the improvements he hoped would be carried on at the Island that a superintendent was urgently needed. Looking about him for an appointee, the choice fell to a little town in the New England States, where the Mayor's brother has been living for many years. He was sumoned to his old town, Montreal, and the Controllers could do nothing else than to say "yes" when the Mayor broached the subject. The Mayor's first proposition was that his brother should be termed "Governor of St. Helen's Island," but the Board frowned this title down, fearing that it might mean a uniform and golden sword.

September, 1916, Fixed As Earliest Date For Peace

French Officers Allow Further Six Months for Arranging Terms

GERMANS NOT COWARDS

Will Take Deal of Beating--Usefulness of Cavalry Doubtful in Modern Warfare

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A despatch to the Standard from Bordeaux says that French officers fix September, 1916, as the earliest date of the absolute cessation of hostilities, and forecast another six months, practically amounting to an armistice, in which the terms of peace will be arranged.

"But", says the correspondent, "of what avail is the speculative side of the probable duration of the war? There are so many things to do yet. We cannot begin to think until the Germans are driven out of France and Belgium. Any talk before that would be futile.

"They take a great deal of beating, too. It is annoying to the French people who read English to absorb so much daily as to the 'rout' of the Germans so many time through cowardice and dread of cold steel. The French wounded tell a different tale, and are so frequently called runaways. Disparaging the enemy in this way brings no glory whatever in defeating them.

"A French cavalry officer who has just returned with a splintered shoulder told me he was not at all sure that cavalry was much good in present day warfare. He had seen the battles in South Africa, and knew the value of mounted infantry, and he was firmly convinced that the horse, except for purposes of transport and artillery, would prove a negligible quantity.

" 'You have read in your papers,' he continued, 'that the cavalry have done this, that and the other; but they will lie out as a fighting force, and the sabre will give way to the rifle and bayonet. There must be a certain number of mounted troops yet, but they will not be such a factor as before. Motor cyclists will be substituted to a great extent; their value is not yet fully appreciated. Before the end of the war, in the French army, and in the British too, there will be ten times the number employed than at present. We shall need three times the number of motor cars, too. The first requisition was nothing to what will be required.'

"Referring again to the cavalry, this officer continued: 'The numbers will be kept up for some months on the same principles as at present, but before long the men will be armed with rifles and bayonets.' "

BUY WHOLE WHEAT CROP

N. S. W. Government Will Prevent Corner

LONDON, Nov. 20.--A novel step is about to be taken by the government of New South Wales with a view to preventing any cornering of the wheat supplies. The prime minister announced yesterday that he prosposed to introduce a bill immediately giving the government full power to purchase the whole of the ensuing wheat crop of the country, at five shilling per bushel. He estimated the deficiency of this season's crops at one million bags.

Sydney municipal council has decided upon a preferential treatment of British and her allies goods during the war. A 10 per cent. preference will be given British merchants and 5 per cent. to allies.

ORILLIA INTERMEDIATES HOPE TO LAND TITLE

ORILLIA, Nov. 20.--Hockey will boom in Orillia during the coming winter as in the past. Orillia will put both intermediate and junior teams on the ice. The Intermediate team, last year's runners-up for the championship will be much stronger this winter and should be thereabouts when the championship is decided for 1915. Champlain Tercentenary year, 1915 is Orillia's year and the club should start it right by annexing the Intermediate honors. Teddy Corbould, Norman Harvie, Gordon Perriman, Morley Carter, Geo. Ross, Love Jupp, Gordon McDonald, of last year's team are all ready for the ice. Ken Macnab, Henry Draper, Andy Tunhope and Chas. Teskey, of the Junior champions have passed the age limit, and also available for the intermediates. Pete Thornton, last season with the T.R. and A.A. seniors, is back home and ready to get into the fray. With all this first-class material, the Orillia Intermediates will be very strong this season and will not be handicapped like last season by not having sufficient players. The junior team will also be a good one this season and will be out for its third championship.

Kipling Narrowly Escaped Arrest For Espoinage

LONDON, Nov. 20.—How Kippling narowly escaped arrest for espionage is told in the following letter written by Cycle Sergeant Callis, of the Fifth Royal North Lancashire Territorials, now training at Seven Oaks.

"Our battalion turned out in full marching order and proceeded to our usual practice ground, Knowie Park. The cycle section marched in the rear of the column, and an ordinary-looking man came to me and asked me a lot of particulars about the battalion. He told me he had seen a lot of soldiering in his time, and said he must confess our men struck him as being about the smartest on the march he had ever seen outside of regulars. He asked me for so many particulars about them, and also about their billets, that I thought I should detain him as a sort of spy. I excused myself and rode off to the column and informed one of our majors as to the nature of the conversation, and took the man later to the said major. The officer stopped me to-day and laughingly asked me if I knew whom I had nearly put under arrest. I answered in the negative, and he told me it was no less a person than Rudyard Kipling."

EMPRESS INTERVIEWED

Czarina Confident of Victory for Russia

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 19.—The Empress of Russia, in an interview with a special correspondent of the Berlinske Tidende, expressed her confidence in the ultmiate victory of the Russian arms. She said:

"Have you noticed how the war has welded the people into unbreakable unity? As long as the war lasts, there will be no politcal parties in hand with the other parties. Poles, Finns and Jews have become Russians. They are collecting money for our hospitals, and have voluntarily joined the colors. Many have already distinguished themselves in battle. From the Arctic to the Black Sea, and from Vladivostok to the Baltic, you will find one united Russia, which can and will be victorious.

"If the war is prolonged and very costly in life, it will be the defenders of justice and not the promise-breakers or of neurality-violators who will at last attain victory.

"Tell Denmark that these words are from Empress Farie Feodorovna."

CHARGED WITH ARSON

Destroyed Employer's Barn--Wife Attempts Suicide

COBOURG, Nov. 19.—Last week, Provincial Inspector Miller, of Toronto, who was investigating recent incendiary fires on farms near Brighton, arrested F. Merney, who lived on F. Lazier's farm, on suspicion of having destroyed a barn on the latter's farm on October 4th. Merney was arrested at a garage in Colborne, appeared before Magistrate Drewry, of Brighton, and was brought to Cobourg jail. He came up for preliminary hearing and was committed to stand trial on the 39th of this month.

A sad circumstances in connection with the affair is that the prisoner's wife, who resides in Brighton township is said to have attempted, since her husband's arrest, to commit suicide by throwing herself in front of a moving freight train. She was badly cut about the head, one ear was cut off, and her eye injured.

HIGHER PASSENGER RATES

Further Increases are Proposed in New Tariffs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.--Acting on the suggestion conveyed to them in the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision in the five per cent rate advance case, railroads in the central passenger association territory have filed with the commission fruther proposed increases in passenger traffics. The increasese follow increases made in communtation and mileage rates.

The new tariffs which are now being tabulated will undoubtedly be allowed to go into effect. The increase in individual cases are not large, and not uniform for all points, some fares being increased slightly where it was considered that the old chrages were out of line. The comission has indicated that where an alteration of costs between the two branches of service has shown that the passenger business is not paying its share, it would approve a readjustment to permit an increase in revenue.

TOLD OF BRUTALITY OF GERMAN SOLDIERS

Belgian Deputation at Quebec Described Horrors They Witnessed at Ardennes

QUEBEC Nov. 20.—A pitiful tale of atrocities committed in the town of Ardennes, on its occupation by the Kaiser's troops, was told to the Belgian relief workers here this afternoon by Messrs. Vaeson and Magis, natives of that city, and delegates of the Belgian Government, who are visiting Quebec in connection with relief work for the war smitten country.

All present listened spell-bound to tales of cold-blooded murder of men, women and children, witnessed by the lecturers themselves. An incident related of a dying Belgian who called for a drink of water. A German private handed him his water bottle. An officer passing by floored the soldier with a blow of his fist, and kicked and cursed him, at the same time wrenching the much-needed water away from the wounded man.

TO-DAY'S WAR BULLETINS

Bodies of Germans Being Cremated Along Yser in Carload Lots--Spain in Secret Agreement to Assist Allies to Suppress Spy Activities--Fighting on Yser Stopped--Stories of Austrian Victories Denied--Allies Establish Trenches Thirty Yards From Enemy--Germany Awaiting Result of Great Battle--Russians Being Attacked from Three Sides--The Russian Forces Estimated at 900,000 Men

(Canadian Press Despatches

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Belgian Newspaper Independcy Belge, published here since German occupation of Brussels, has received news from Carleroi, that the Germans are running big blast furnaces there day and night, cremating corpses of the German soldiers killed along the Yser. The bodies are being brought to Charleroi in carloads.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—A cable to The Tribune from Madrid, says Spain has entered into a secret agreement to assist the Allies by an extra activity in suppression of the German spy activities and of all news of which they make use.. In return the Allies will permit shipment of conditional contraband to Spanish ports and give protection to Spanish export trade.

BRUGES, Nov. 21.—The fighting along the Yser has completely stopped. The Severe cold weather continues and old inhabitants fear a repetition of the famous cold winter of 1870-71. Fifty-seven empty trains, each of forty cars, supposed to be destined to carry German troops from the Western Frontier to East Prussia, have been moving towards West Flanders.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—A Havas News Agency Correspondent in Athens telegraphs that the Servian Legation denies the stories of great Austrian victories.. The Servians retreated from their positions around Valjevo before superior forces without .loss, .except five useless cannons.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—An official communication this afternoon reads:

Nov. 20.—Generally speaking situation was similar to two proceding days.

In Dixmude our artillery at Nieuport secured an advantage over that of the enemy.

At Pollebeke two attacks of German infantry were immediately repulsed.

From Belgian frontier to the Oise there was nothing to report.

In the region of the Aisne and in the Champagne district an advantage was gained by our batteries over the Artillery of the enemy has become more marked, and prevented the Germans from continuing their construction of Trenches begun by them.

In the Argonne distirct we blew up certain of the enemy's trenches.

In the vicinity of Verdun and in Vosges district we made progress.

At certain points we have established our trenches at less than thirty yards from the German position.

LONDON Nov. 21.—A correspondent in Berlin of the Central News says:

"All Germany is in an extreme tension, awaiting the result of a great battle on the Eastern Front. The Russian forces are estimated at 900,000 men. The Germans control all the roads to Novo Georgiewsk and Warsaw. Battle centers at Lodz, where the Germans and Austrians are in excellent position, while new Austrian forces are advancing from the south. The Russians are being attacked from three sides."

ATTEMPT ON LIFE OF SULTAN OF TURKEY

PETROGRAD, Nov. 20.—(Special)—An attempt to assassinate the Sultan of Turkey was made in Constantinople within the last few days.

Reports have reached Bucharest that large numbers of arrests are being made daily in Constantinople in consequence of an attempt against the life of the Sultan. A group has been arrested belonging to an association organized by Burkhan Edin. It is suspected that the Sultan's heir, Yussaf Isedin, participated in the plot. Think Titanic

WANT KHEDIVE TO STIR UP ARABS

Khedive Hopes to Re-enter Cairo at Head Of Turks

PARIS, Nov. 21.—(Special.)—(By German wireless.)—The news that the Khedive has revolted against British control and plans to return to Egypt with the Turkisn army was confirmed last night.

The Temps correspondent at Rhodes says: "It is common konwledge that following Britain's refusal to allow him to return to Egypt the Khedive became enamored of the prospect of re-entering Cairo with a victorious Ottoman army which pro-German Young Turks hold forth to him.

He has organized caravans consisting of 200 horses, tents, and provisions for the campaign. The turkish army is concentrated between Damascus and Mahau, and is estimated at 200,000 but I believe only 70,000 are of effective fighting value. The Germans, therefore, induced the Khedive to march with them with the object of stirring the Arab population to join the army."

WILL RUN FEWER TRAINS

Grand Trunk Will Adopt Reduced Schedule Shortly

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—(Special.)—Owing to the great reduction in traffic on its lines this year, the Grand Trunk Railway has decided to take off many of the trains on its branch lines, and a new service will go into effect from Sunday, the 29th instant. The change will not affect the main lines, but the branches will have their service curtailed considerably.

CLAIMS MOVIE FILMS SHIPPED IN FROM QUEBEC AND A BOGUS STAMP PUT ON TO FOOL POLICE

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—Unless they decide upon a sudden reformation there are a number of moving picture theatres proprietors in Ottawa and the Ottawa district who will receive some very embarrassing attention from the provincial board of censors at Toronto, backed up by the police.

Inspector Newman, of the censor board, has come back from a tour of the eastern part of the province and declares that there is altogether too much importation of uncensored films in the eastern centres. They are shipped in from Montreal in considerable numbers, and, except when the provincial officer is able to make a trip through the district, the proprietors get away with them. The local police are fooled by transferring stamps from old censored to uncensored films.

"In future these infactions of the law are going to be punished. A few heavy fines will stop a lot of it," stated the inspector. During his tour Newman seized six films at Ottawa, nine at Alexandria, three at Rockland and one at Hawkesbury.

SCARING OFF GERMANS

Villages Post Placards That Typhus Is Raging

PARIS, Nov. 19.—A traveller, just returned from a trip through the portion of France occupied by the Germans, informs the Temps that the Germans are utilizing all the resources of the country, working the mills north of the Aisne, the coal mines of Anzin and Aniche, and everywhere seizing goods for transportation to Germany. At Hirson the Germans issued a newspaper in French, which recently stated that they had not taken Paris in order to humiliate France excessively. In other localities, the Germans asserted that they had withdrawn owing to cholera, which was devasting the French capital. Many villagers avoid German occupation by posting, when the enemy's approach is signalled, placards, signed by the mayor, warning the inhabitants that typhus is raging throughout the commune and bidding them boil the water and take other precautions.

KIPLING ON ROBERTS

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Daily Telegraph has a poem by Rudyard Kipling on Lord Roberts. In part it is as follows:

He passed in the very battle smoke
  Of the war that he had descried.
Three hundred miles of cannon spoke
  When the master gunner died.

He passed to the very sound of the guns,
  But before his eyes grew dim
He had seen the faces of the sons
  Whose sires had served with him.

Clean, simple, valiant, well-beloved,
  Flawless in faith and fame,
Whom neither ease nor honor moved
  A hair's breadth from his aim.

A person named Thomas Hackett, who is on the prohibited list, was arrested this morning for intoxication. He had been supplied with liquor at a place where he was not known, but upon his identity being established he was handed over to the police.

SOLDIER STOLE FROM COMRADE

A member of the 21st Battalion appeared before a court-marital in Tete du Pont Barracks yesterday charged with stealing a sum of money from a comrade. The accused pleaded guilty and was sentenced but the sentence will not be made public until it receives the confirmation of the Militia Department at Ottawa.

MEMORIAL SERMON

Rev. A. M. Hubly, who has had a literary and correspondence acquaintance with the late Lord Roberts, will preach a memorial sermon in honor of this Christian hero, who without ostentation has drawn to himself the admiration of the world, while also enjoying the favor of God, in Emmanuel church to-morrow evening.

THE MARKET

The attendance upon the market this morning was good, and prices obtained for all produce offered for sale was fair. Butter sold at from 28c to 30c per pound, fresh eggs 38c by the basket lot and 40c by the single dozen. Dressed chickens sold at from 60c to $1.20 per pair, according to size and quality; ducks from $1.00 to $1.25 per pair, geese $1.40 to $1.60 each and turkeys from $2.50 to $4.00 each.

DEATH OF A YOUNG MAN

Yesterday afternoon at Gravenhurst, Sidney T. Newton, youngest son of Chief of Police Newton and Mrs. Newton of this city, passed away. Deceased, who was in his 20th year, was born in this city. Some months ago he contracted lung trouble, which resulted in death. Some weeks ago the deceased was taken to Gravenhurst in anticipation that the change might be beneficial, but such proved to be futile. Sidney was a bright young man, beloved by all who knew him, and his demise will be sincerely regretted by a host of young friends. In addition to the parents, two brothers, Walter J., of Toronto, Stanley R., of St. Louis, and two sisters, Mrs. J. P. Wilson of North Bay, and Miss Florence, are left to mourn the loss of a dutiful son, and a loving brother. The remains will arrive here this evening for interment.

BELLEVILLE CURLING CLUB

Managing Committee Met

The members of the management committee of the Belleville curlers met last evening and made arrangements for the coming season. The Ice Committee consisting of Messrs. Mitchell, C. I. White and Dr. Day reported that the rink had been carefully rolled and everything was ready to turn on the water as soon as conditions permitted. Mr. J. G. Galloway was elected chairman of the management committee for the season. The secretary Mr. Pitney reported that there were 66 permanent members and the annual and prospective members were placed in a list and the names divided up among the members of the committee who will call upon them at an early date. A number have applied for membership and the committee is anxious to have the names of all parties who intend to play during the season so that when arranging for the different rinks all may be assigned a place. The prospects of the club for the coming season are the very best and this splendid sport will flourishing throughout the winter. The lady curlers of the city, who won the splendid trophy last year have already organized and arrangements are being made so that they have quarters at the rink.

Oswald turned abruptly. Something in his quiet gaze made Singleton shift his eyes with a start of guilt. "I want to say a word to you," the Englishman's voice was stern, "and I want you to repeat what I say to every man in your fraternity. There may be a big story somewhere behind this—I cannot tell. If there is, if an enmity or a misunderstanding did exist, if there was a wrong done, or if anything lies behind these two men which we do not comprehend, leave it to them. They have buried it. Don't turn ghoul," he pleaded, "and dig it up, simply to make a curious, heartless world buy your paper for a day or two. I am told there is a bond between newspaper men, like a warm-hearted brotherhood. Wentworth belonged to that brotherhood; he does yet—remember that."

Singleton stretched out his hand with an impulsive gesture. "Thank you, Mr. Oswald. You're a good deal of a man. I never knew you before. We all need a jog on the elbow once in a while. A newspaper man grows a buzzard when a story is in the air. He forgets how the other fellow feels. I'll pass the word around. I can promise you that not a man among us will do anything but take Merry's word for it. His confession is a big story in itself."

"Thank you," said Oswald with a cordiality which few men had seen in the dignified Englishman.

He stood talking with a group who gathered about him at the close of the play, eager as Singleton had been to discuss Merry's dramatic confession, when an usher interrupted them.

"Mr. Oswald, you're wanted back of the scenes," said the boy.

PLEASING STUDENTS' RECEPTION AT BRIDGE ST. CHURCH

Epworth League and Sunday School do Homage in a Splendid Manner -Fine Programme in Which Belleville's Best Talent Take Part, A Promenade Makes Pleasant Closing Scene

A most enjoyable evening was given to the student body of the city last night by the young people of the Bridge Street Methodist Church. The function was in the form of a reception and the entertainment consisted of an excellent programme presided over by Principal A. C. Wilkin of Queen Victoria School, in which the best talent of the city took part, as follows:—

Address of Welcome—Rev. H. S. Osborne, Pastor
Duet—Mrs. A. P. Allen and Prof. D. A. Cameron.
Reading—Miss May Wallace.
Solo—Mr. Wrightmeyer
Recitation in Sign—The students of the O. S. D.
Solo—Mrs. G. Price.
Reading—Miss Tuite
Solo—Miss Stork
Hymn in Sign—The Students of the O. S. D.
Solo—Prof. D. A. Cameron.

This programme was followed by a series of beautiful promenades, the music being supplied by the Regimental Orchestra. Everything being in keeping with the spirit of the times the soldier boys appeared in uniform and along with the beautiful decorations arranged by Mr. Wotten, a very pleasing color effect was produced. During the promenades, the young people were free to step at any of the surrounding class rooms which were transformed into luxurious dining rooms and there be served with a very satisfying lunch.

All present seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves and conceded that this was one of the most delightful evenings ever spent at Bridge Street Church. The affair was under the auspices of the Epworth League and the Sunday School to whom a very gracious vote of thanks was tendered by the students.

Guard The Children From Autumn Cold

The fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm while the next is wet and cold, and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent cold or if cold does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly cure it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

IN A PARIS STREET

(From Beck's Weekly, Montreal)

The brilliant weather makes Paris very beloved once more. Above all her enchantments I am fascinated each night by the magical light which hangs over the city after sunset. And now even the newcomers seem less like strangers. They spend a little money and the penniless seem not so desperately poor. The bombs fell again yesterday, wounding a man, a woman and a little girl of seven. There is something sneakish in this form of warfare, but then a good deal of sneakery seems to distinguish modern fighting. The ideal seems to strike your enemy from a safe hole. But one must not look too closely into things, it wouldn't be nice for anybody. Besides, in whatever fashion, the thing has got to be fought out now. I suppose all the world as well as we, is troubling about Antwerp. There comes an aeroplane. I wonder what it is? If cannon sounds it will be a German. No cannon sounds. A crowd of street musicians near by somewhere is singing the marseillaise at the top of its voice, as a pourboire to the gendarmes to allow it to collect a few coppers.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Yesterday afternoon, November 20, a very pleasant euchre party was given by Miss Annie Carney, Victoria Avenue.

Mrs. F. V. Buckley (Anna Nethervalle) will hold her post-nuptial reception on Wednesday afternoon, November 25th, from three to six, at 136 Victoria Avenue.

"IN STREAMING LONDON'S CENTRAL ROAR".

Earl Roberts will be buried, not in Westminster Abbey, but in St. Paul's, where Nelson and Wellington sleep.

Where shall we lay the man whom we deplore?
Here, in streaming London's central roar.
Let the sound of those he wrought for,
And the feet of those he fought for,
Echo round his bones for evermore."

These are perhaps the most thrilling lines in a great poet's tribute to the Duke of Wellington. To link the memory of Wellington with the seething life of Central London was the result of a flash of true genius, an inspiration such as rarely comes even to the greatest. The lines recur to the mind and heart as one thinks of the burial of Earl Roberts in the same meeting place of the quick and the dead.—Star.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Graduating Exercises At Local Hospital

next introduced and he gave an excellent address. In his opening remarks he said the Belleville hospital was a most healthful institution. It was not always the largest hospitals that turn out the best trained nurses. In speaking generally of nurses and the origin of the profession he said the modern nurse was not introduced to the world until some 60 years ago. In 1836 the training of nurses was begun. This work has grown. The modern nurse owes her origin to Florence Nightingale, who in early life turned her thoughts to nursing. The modern nurse is a child of war, having originated when the Criemean War was on. Florence Nightingale offered her services and gathered about her about fifty nurses, remaining at the front for upwards of two years. Her work did not end at the close of the war, as she was responsible for the establishment of an institution where nurses could be properly trained. The war was referred to by the speaker as a tremendous war. At Ottawa today 2,000 applicants have been made by nurses who are anxious to go to the front. Of course all could not go and he could not promise that any from this city would go. Diseases of a communicable nature were touched upon and explained. To the young ladies who were graduating he would say it was not a sinecure profession. They will need to have patience and perseverance. The nurses is the greatest aid a physician has. She is the strengthening of the physician's hand and she must have tact. In concluding Dr. McCullough congratulated Miss Greene and said that the Belleville hospital was fortunate in having a woman of her capabilities at its head.

Mrs. A. P. Allen was called upon and rendered in her usual capable and sweet voice two patriotic selections.

Dr. Gibson read the address to the nurses. It was an exhaustive and most carefully prepared address demonstrating that much time and thought had been expended in its preparation. The learned physician, before giving the address referred to the fact that an X-ray apparatus was necessary at the hospital and he hoped that the same would be provided. The cost would probably be about $2,500. In the address the doctor referred to the strenuous times we were living in. Never in the history of the whole world had there been such a titanic struggle as was now taking place. Out of the chaos good would no doubt come. Empires have come and gone, and no greater empire has there been than Great Britain, an empire that stands for honor and freedom. Is the British Empire in its decadency? The answer is no. We have the records of the deeds of valor performed by the British army which is the administrator of the world. Are we downhearted? No! Nothing daunts the British soldier. The titanic struggle continues until it has become a siege of endurance. Belgium, France and Russia were also doing their part well in this great struggle. All were fighting together. Some may ask what has this to do with the nurse? The nurses are playing a prominent part and doing a noble work. What part can the nurse do? If she cannot go to the front she can help those who are becoming convalescent in hospitals and other places. In speaking particularly to those graduating Dr. Gibson said, "Let it be your aim to broaden your intellect. Read books that will widen your knowledge. Do not loiter by the way. Your only safety lies in work, work, work. In these days of competition you must be self reliant and diligent. Be mistress of your profession. Your greatest law is progress; do not stand still, but advance. What makes success in life is work. You are starting out now to play your game in life. Play the game well and not lapse into a life of self satisfaction. Choose your part and act it well whether it be in the mansion of the rich or in the hovel of the poor. (Cheers).

Mrs. A. P. Allen and Prof. Cameron rendered a duet in a manner that was much appreciated by all present. It was entitled "Passage Bird's Farewell."

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., spoke briefly but in a complimentary manner of the hospital and those associated with it. It was doing a grand work. He also congratulated Dr. McCollough and Dr. Gibson upon the able addresses they had given. He congratulated the young ladies who were graduating as nurses. Theirs was a most noble and self-sacrificing profession. In referring to the war Mr. Johnson said our soldiers are fighting for us, and the nurses are by their sides. Hundreds of our young ladies are engaged in the caring for the wounded, and many others are anxious to go to the front.

The graduating nurses then repeated after Miss Green a solemn declaration of their office.

Prof. Cameron then sang with much effect a soldier's song, entitled "Mascheron." He was never heard to better advantage than in this selection.

Dr. McCollough was then called and presented the diplomas to the following graduates:

Miss Maud Caldwell.
Miss Pearl McBride.
Miss Vera Johnson.
Miss Edna Pickering.
Miss Hattie Stacey.
Miss Lena Phillips.

Mrs. G. E. Deroche, President of the Woman's Christian Association, pinned upon each nurse a red cross pin, after which other nurses filed into the room and presented to each graduate a handsome bouquet.

The proceedings were closed by the National Anthem, after which light refreshments were served.

Marmora Hunt Club had a splendid outing this year, and had a very successful hunt. The members of the club have returned home, bringing with them their full count. Nearly all were of a large size, and as a whole it was probably the finest lot of deer ever brought into the village.

The members of the club this year were Wm Archer, A. Shannon, Robt. Naylor, C. A. McWilliams, Roy Snell, E. M. Gladney, John Laird, J. Lifflaw, Thos Callaghan and Arthur Sweet.

WHY NOT HELP CANADA BY HAVING CANADIAN EMPLOYEES

To the Editor of The Intelligencer

I see by the paper it is always best to buy Canadian made goods and keep our money circulating around home. I would reply to this. It is perfectly right, if they are made by "Canadian Workmanship," but how many Canadian firms and business places in Canada and in the city of Belleville, where I was born and proud of it, but sorry to say they turn our Canadian men out of employment, taking on other countrymen, whom they think are cheaper, but not in the long run. I think we have a lot of good Canadians in Belleville and all over. But our poor Canadians have to go from place to place seeking for employment. Why is it? It is because our Canadian manufacturers and business men do not employ our good Canadian men, women and children, to do the work. I am sure it is very discouraging for our Canadians.

Social Event at Y.M.C.A. Successful

A month ago, Mr. Cyril McBride and his Social Committee of the Y.M.C.A. planned for the first Members' Social event of the season to come off on Nov 20th. It came off well last night. The splendid co-operation tendered by the Out-Look Club in connection with the Baptist Church guaranteed success.

To the President of the Out Look Club, Miss Gastrill, and the Convenor of their Social Committee, Mrs. Wm. Harvey a great deal of credit is due. The unique feature of the event was the masquerading effect of the Promenaders. The bright coloring of the costumes worn by the various characters added brightness to the occasion. Some of the characters represented were, John Bull, King George, General French, Lieut.-Col Harvey of the Highlanders, Red Cross nurses, Indian Princesses, Rajahs of India, Funny Clowns, Ladies of the Court, Gypsies, Pickwick Papers, College Graduates, Red Riding Hood, Little Bo Peep, The Little Minister and others.

After a Gymnastic exhibition given by Director Faulkner and Mr. Gifford, the promenaders assembled in the lecture room, where the following delightful program was rendered:

Piano Selection	Mrs. Deeton
Solo	Miss Larkin
Cello Solo	Mr. Bennett
Solo	Mrs McLaurin
Solo	Miss Bawden
Reading	Mr. Chute
Violin Solo	Prof Connell
Reading	Mrs. Hess
Solo	Miss Riggs
Reading	Mrs. McLaurin
Address	Rev. Mr. Smith

Ushers then handed out numbers to each one in the audience. The numbers were arranged in duplicates. Each guest upon discovering the friend with a corresponding number was handed a dainty box of refreshments. After refreshments, a couple of more promenades closed the successful function.

The next social event, the Senior Members of the Y.M.C.A. purpose entertaining the members of the Business Ladies Gym class.

INFORMATION RE BOYS' WORK CONFERENCE

There will be about 350 visiting delegates from all parts of Eastern Ontario.

There should be a local delegation from the various Sunday schools of 75 boys.

St. Andrews Presbyterian Church will be the conference church.

The reception to the delegates and address of welcome by Mayor Wills, will be on Friday night in the Bridge St. Methodist Church.

The big banquet will be held in the Sunday School rooms of Bridge St. Church, Saturday night at 6.00 o'clock. There will be accommodation for about 450.

The Sunday afternoon meeting for the delegates and any other fellow over 15 years of age will be held in the Tabernacle Methodist Church. 3.30 is the hour and John L. Alexander of Chicago will be the speaker.

Superintendents of the various Sunday School's should see that all boys classes of 15 years of age and over attend the Sunday afternoon meeting. They should so arrange, that these boys could get there by 3.30.

WAR TAX

Was estimates necessitate heavy and increased taxation, hence Lloyd George, the English Chancellor of the Exchequer, is proposing, a report says, an increased taxation of six cents per pound upon tea; and one cent upon every half-pint of beer consumed in Great Britain. From these additional taxes Lloyd George expects to add to the revenue of the kingdom a sum in the neighborhood of $77,000,000.

His estimate, that is, for the coming fiscal year ending March, 1915-16, is calculated to yield $225,000,000 on income account, $85,000,000 on beer, and $16,000,000 on tea.

The double duty on income is not to be fully applied this year, but the wealthy classes will have to meet the burden next year, not, it is fancied, with smiling countenances, but the money has to be secured, and they being the most interested, must, to use an apt expression, "foot the bill."

The past is but an indication of what the future will require. Under present conditions the income and property taxes yield nearly $300,000,000 to the British Exchequer, and more is wanted. The last budget presented by Lloyd George contained provisions for heavily increasing income taxes. There was a deficit of some $44,000,000 to be met, and the Chancellor proposed to meet it by adding $27,500,000 to income tax, $12,500,000 to super-tax, and $4,000,000 to the death duties.

A contemporary points out that

"The weight of the impost on earned incomes, as at present arranged, may be judged by the following schedule of rates, including tax and supertax, and allowing for exemptions up to $3,500 a year:

Income	Rate on Dollar
$ 800	.003
900	.0071
1,000	.017
1,500	.0217
2,000	.0258
2,500	.0258
3,000	.032
3,505 to 5,000	.036
5,005 to 7,500	.042
7,505 to 10,000	.048
10,005 to 12,505	.056
12,505 to 14,995	.064

The schedule runs up to $500,000, on which there is a tax of over 12 cents on the dollar, or one-eighth of the entire income. The tax on $500,000 would be, roughly, $65,000.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The raising of another $225,000,000 from income will make the total derived from that source by the British Exchequer about $500,000,000, or a full 5 per cent. of the estimated total income of the nation.

The British public is realizing its responsibilities cheerfully, as expressed by the press of the country. A few extracts will show what public opinion is.

The Times says:—

"This large increase in direct taxation undoubtedly will be a heavy burden, although it will be shouldered with the patriotism on which the Government knows it can count."

The Daily Express says:—

"Great Britain is fighting for her existence and while her soldiers and sailors are ready to meet death and awful suffering in the nation's cause, the men and women who are left at home must pay the fighting bill with equal courage and determination."

The Daily News says:—

"The courage with which Mr. Lloyd George faced the problem will be approved by the country and incidentally will make an excellent impression abroad on financiers. The occasion is unprecedented, for never before has the country been called upon for an expenditure on a scale at all approaching that now being incurred."

The Daily Mail says:—

"The loan appeals to every one from both a patriotic and financial viewpoint. It is a magnificent investment."

The Morning Post Says:—

"The people of this country will pay without a murmur whatever they must pay to carry on the war to the only conclusion they can contemplate."

The Daily Telegraph argues that the burden laid on the patient income taxpayers is out of all proportion to that imposed elsewhere.

CANADA.

What is Canada's position? The last short session of Parliament voted $50,000,000 for war purposes, and additional taxation was proposed. Will that be the end of it? Not at all. The next budget speech of the Canadian Minister of Finance will, if we mistake not, ask for an additional $50,000,000. Canada has recognized her responsibility and is acting in accord therewith. An additional $50,000,000 will necessitate additional taxation. How is the expenditure to be met, is the problem the Finance Minister will have to solve, and no surprise need be expressed if it be found in a specific tax upon tea, upon notes, bills of exchange, cheques, express parcels, telegrams, etc., etc., all of which are legitimate articles upon which a war tax could with propriety be levied, without interfering with or affecting injuriously any existing or prospective industry.

The Finance Minister has, we doubt not, the courage to grapple successfully with this important subject.

A NEW CRIME

If Germany persists in enforcing her latest edict that unless the Belgians "return to work" she will allow no distribution of food sent in from neutral countries, she will add another to her long list of crimes against the people of that suffering nation.

Germany is fully aware that all the world knows how utterly impossible it is for the starving Belgians to do as she has ordered. Industry in Belgium has been wrecked, and can only be reorganized when peace comes. The German hordes swarmed down on the Belgian people just as their harvests were ready to garner, seized their horses, and even refused to allow the farmers to operate their windmills lest they should convey information to the enemy. The Belgian towns and cities were destroyed and all the industries demoralized.

The Brooklyn Eagle declares that never in the history of human warfare has there been anything more revolting than this attempt to force starvation on a helpless population.

"The exercise of such power," the Eagle adds, "in such a way, however, is not without perils to the tyrant himself. In this case, it is a waste of words to say that Germany will lose the remnant of foreign sympathy that has survived her past exhibitions of faithlessness and brutality. The Kaiser is evidently uninfluenced by wholesome public opinion, but he is in the line of forgetting that German opinion is not negligible. The Germans are a people as warm-hearted, as susceptible to the cry of outraged humanity as any on earth. They have accepted war. On the ground of military necessity they have condoned much that the Emperor has done. Does he think they will condone this? If he has any such notion in his head he is grossly unjust to the masses of his own people. And his error will have consequences to himself that will be most unpleasant."

If Germany is determined to blindly bring upon herself the enmity of the neutral nations and make herself abhorred, it is doubtless in her power to close the Belgian ports to the mercy ships of the world. But such action will increase by many millions the sum she will be forced to pay Belgium when the Allies dictate the terms of peace at Berlin.

COPELAND'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

Is a medicine—not a serum. Moreover, it is a medicine with a record. It has won cases of consumption given up as hopeless by doctors and specialists. Ask for the record of David Warnock's case, one of the most striking illustrations of its power. So desperate was Mr. Warnock's condition that the specialist called in by his doctor said that he was past all hope of recovery and could not live more than 8 or 10 days. To-day, Mr. Warnock is alive and well; still living in Toronto. At the lowest ebb of his illness, he weighed only 87 lbs., and within four months of that time he had regained his normal weight of 153 lbs. The facts of that case are not confined to ourselves, but can be corroborated by a dozen or more independent witnesses.

In the same manner as this medicine has won severe cases of consumption, it has proved most effective in stubborn cases of chronic bronchitis; which had resisted for over 30 years all that medical men and other medicine could do for them.

A letter from a well-known resident of the east side of Toronto will serve to show how beneficial this medicine is for bronchitis. It reads as follows:

Mr. W. R. Copeland:

Dear Sir,—For some time past I have been thinking that it is my duty to write and tell you what a boon your medicine has been to me. I have suffered with what medical men call Chronic Bronchitis for over 30 years, and have had pneumonia twice, being treated by some of our best physicians, and have never got anything to do me the same good as your Consumption Cure.

I would like to recommend your medicine to every one suffering with throat, bronchial or lung troubles. I am sure it has been a blessing to me, and will be to any who try it. You can do as you see fit with this letter.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) E. FLESHER.
25 Howland Road, Toronto.

"Copeland's Cure for Consumption" has been on the market now for three years. During which time hundreds of letters have been received from all classes of people telling us how benefited they have been by its use.

If you are a consumptive, or know of a consumptive or anyone suffering from weak lungs or throat, copies of letters, bearing upon their ailment that others have suffered and conquered by taking this medicine, will gladly be sent on request.

A REVIEW OF THE DRUG MARKET

The war in Europe has struck the chemical markets a knock-out blow from which, says the Canadian Druggist, they may not be able to recover for several years. The general advance averaging about 100 per cent. on practically all drugs, pharmaceuticals and chemicals, and in some instances an advance of about 5,000 per cent. has occurred.

One reason for the general advance is found in the fact that the majority of drugs and chemicals and medicinal preparations come largely from Europe and other far off countries, and with the cessation of practically all shipments, these products are no longer available on this side.

While shipping facilities to-day are somewhat improved, as the embargo on exportation from England has been removed on many items, yet, there is difficulty in getting goods, and as far as we are aware there have been no shipments of English orders from chemical houses brought into Canada since the war broke out. Even if it is possible to ship goods, the situation cannot be remedied for some time, for planters and growers of drugs have allowed their plants to rot and decay due to shortage of labor. The large concerns in London, who distribute more than seventy-five per cent. of the world's supply, are unable to supply the demand.

It has taken the war to show us on this side of the water how we are dependent on the markets abroad, if not for the finished products, at least for the raw material.

We can only say that never in the history of the drug markets have retailers of drugs been up against a situation like the present, and it seems that they must raise retail prices of nearly all lines of drugs and chemicals.

On top of the advance in chemicals, the Government imposed a further duty on alcohol, which helped to increase the cost of the goods.

All potash salts maintain their high figure owing to the fact that nearly all the crude Potash used for manufacturing came from Germany. We understand there is something being started at Kingston, Ontario, to produce Potash, but just what success they may have remains to be seen.

The market is still in such a chaotic state that it would be impossible to give any definite prices that would be at all reliable, but this we will do as soon as practicable. In the meantime we would advise our friends as a rule to buy from hand to mouth, as that is the only safe procedure when prices are as they are to-day.

THE GENERAL NOT PLEASED AND HITS BACK

Major-General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, warmly defended his course of action in regard to the raising and equipping of the first contingent and their despatch abroad, and also his procedure to date with respect to the second contingent, and incidentally referred to some "knockers." The Minister formally opened the new rooms of the Ottawa Conservative Association.

"When the first call for 19,500 men was made," said General Hughes, "some papers said Canada could not get them together, and that 'Sam Hughes talks too much.' But his talk met with the approval of the Dominion of Canada, as is shown by the fact that 33,500 men responded to the call, and not one 'hot air' artist made a dollar. It is easy to sit in an office and condemn men ready to go to the front at any time. Show me a "knocker" and I'll show you a coward. Sam Hughes never held back himself where he was ready to send other men."

Right you are, General. It is easy to find fault, particularly by those who do nothing but growl.

THE CORRECT POLICY.

The Australian correspondent of the Morning Post hints at a probable joint scheme of naval defence in the Pacific between Australia and New Zealand and mentions that reports of proposed action on the part of the Canadian Government for united action along with Australia and New Zealand have caused the liveliest satisfaction and revived interest in the possibility of an early realization of a Pacific fleet of the three Dominions. In a telegram to the Governor of New Zealand Mr. Fisher, the Prime Minister, expressed the hope that the time was not far distant when the sister Dominions washed by the Pacific Ocean will closely share with Australia the glories of the Pacific force.

This, beyond doubt, is the correct policy for naval defence. England can take care of the North Sea, and is near enough to Canada to float her last and strongest war vessels in our waters in a few days. Let us act upon the suggestion of Premier Fisher, and jointly protect the Pacific.

It is quite possible for a man to simply spread himself without really having any broadening influence.

Occasionally there is a man who was born lucky—that is, with a goodly supply of plain common sense.

"Made in Canada"

We are heartily in sympathy with the "Made in Canada" movement. We know how dependent is Canada's prosperity on the consumption of home products.

But—we know just as well that we cannot expect Canadians to buy our product simply because it is "Made in Canada" if it does not offer equal value, in quality and price, with those imported.

We know that we cannot expect you to stick to Cowan's Perfection Cocoa if there is better cocoa obtainable.

It is because of this realization that we strive to keep it as good as all our years of experience can make it.

How well we succeed is easily proven by just one taste of

BOURASSA

Is it not about time that this blatant utterer of semi-treason was discouraged and discountenanced by every loyal man in the country? Toronto lately prevented him from addressing the people. A telegram from Ottawa, where there is a large French population, is following Toronto's example. A telegram from that city of the 20th says:

"The executive of the Peoples Forum at another meeting this afternoon decided to withdraw the invitation of Mr. Henri Bourassa to speak here on Sunday evening. The proprietor of the theatre was demanding a guarantee that the building would not be damaged."

War Oddities

London, Nov. 20—The Women's Suffrage Writers League has protested against the military rule which prohibits the sale of drink to women before 11.30 a.m.

Paris, Nov. 20.—A baby born in a Lorain church which was under German fire was struck by a piece of shrapnel, two hours later, and killed, while in its mother's arms. The mother was unharmed.

Furnes, Nov. 20.—In the past few months excepting when King Albert was in secret military council or at the front Queen Elizabeth has never left her husband. She has made many trips with him to the trenches.

There are enough activities in connection with war to engage woman's boundless energy and industry without putting her on the firing line. The women of all the warring countries are showing the world examples of quiet heroism comparable to that of the men at the front, but civilization draws the line on their undergoing the actual dangers and hardships of the battlefield.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

The greatest insult ever heaped upon an inexpensive but very popular make of automobiles is recorded in Judge: The proprietor of one of the machines was driving along a country road, he was startled by a gunshot from a wood close at hand. "Don't shoot again," he yelled. "I'll surrender!" A man with a gun came forward and began to humbly apologize. "I beg your pardon," he said. "When I heard your honker and quickly looked your way, I thought it was a duck."

Krupps, the German gun-makers, announce that they are to increase their capital stock from seventy million marks to two hundred and fifty millions. Probably it is a case in which authority is to be asked for the increase. The Krupp shareholders, it is likely, will wait a little while before putting up the additional money. There is a very strong probability that the Krupp gun-making factories will, in the early future, find a great falling off in their orders.—Journal of Commerce.

SHOT THROUGH LEFT ARM

Gordon Smith, son of George A. Smith, of Parham, was shot through the left arm on Wednesday. He, with a number of friends, had planned to go through the country on a partridge shooting expedition on Wednesday, and the lad was cleaning the gun on the front steps. Reaching down for a rag at his feet he dropped the shotgun on the concrete walk. The jar exploded the charged and the powder and contents of the shell entered the left fore-arm, just above the wrist. The bone was broken and the skin torn away, making a jagged bleeding wound He was rushed to Dr. Barker's surgery a short distance away, and the wound was dressed. It is thought that the arm will be saved.

Annie Peterson Is Wrecked In Storm on Lake Superior.

Eight Bodies Ashore Near Grand Marais, Mich., Show That Death List So Far In Gale Totals Six Men and Two Women—Steamer Mary Sicken Is Lost, But Crew Are Saved.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 21. — Despatches from Senay, Mich., last night report the discovery there of the wooden barge Annie M. Petersen broken up on the Lake Superior shore, eight miles from the life-saving station at Grand Marais, Mich.

Eight bodies have come ashore, those of six men and two women. They will be sent to Grand Marais for identification. The Petersen was supposed to have a crew of only seven, and the finding of an additional body gives basis for the fear that the steamer C. F. Curtis and barge Selden E. Marvin of the same tow, may also have been lost. No trace of the two vessels has been found as far east as Whitefish Point.

The Petersen is believed to have been wrecked Thursday night. The three vessels, owned by the L. Edward Hines Lumber Co., Chicago, cleared from Baraga, Mich., at five o'clock Wednesday morning, with lumber, bound for Tonawanda, N. Y. They set out in the face of storm signals and in a heavy northwest gale.

The Annie M. Petersen, Capt. John M. Walker, was a barge of 631 gross tons, 190 feet long, and 33 feet beam. She was built in Green Bay, Wis., in 1874. The barge Selden E. Marvin, Capt. Fred. E. Anderson is a vessel of 618 gross tons, 174 feet long, 33 feet beam, and was built in Toledo in 1881. The steamer C. F. Curtis, Capt. J. P. Jennings, Detroit, Mich, is a vessel of 691 gross tons, 196 feet long and 32 feet beam. She was built in Marine City, Mich., in 1882.

A telegram, delayed in transmission, received at Harbor Beach yesterday from the keeper of the Hammond Life-saving Station, 16 miles above Rogers City, Mich., on the Lake Huron shore, stated that the wooden steamer Mary Sicken of Marine City was wrecked on Nine Mile Point, below Cheboygan, Wednesday.

Two Others Ashore.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 21.—The steamers Barth and Lackawanna are ashore off Bois Blanc. The wrecking tug Favorite has gone to their assistance.

MOROCCANS AVENGED.

French Troops Destroy Germans Who Desecrated Graves.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—According to Le Temps, it was the German desecration of French graves that was really responsible for the recent considerable success at Tracey-le-Val. A correspondent in the firing line writes to the paper: Our troops had taken the village, but the enemy returned and began digging trenches in the cemetery, which so infuriated the Moroccan contingent—many of whose dead were this exposed — that the commander decided to assault the cemetery. The Moroccans charged with their knives and exterminated 1,200 Germans occupying the trenches. Immediately thereafter 125 others entrenched nearby surrendered, their non-commissioned officers declaring they were the remnant of a whole battalion. All were hungry, sick and wearing rags."

Four German Papers Banned.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—The Canadian Government has by order-in-council decided to prohibit the entry into Canada of four German newspapers published in New York, The Staats Zeitung, Truth About Germany, Vital Issue, and Vaterland.

More anti-British publications which are persistently publishing untrue statements reflecting upon Great Britain and her allies will be added to the list of those already prohibited. It is now a criminal offence to peddle the newspaper mentioned or to have them in one's possession.

Panama To Be Neutral.

PANAMA, Nov. 21.—Stringent orders have been issued to preserve neutrality throughout the Panama Canal zone. Hereafter no information will be given to anyone relative to the ships using the waterway nor their terminal ports.

Flying Into Canada Forbidden.

ALBANY, N.Y., Nov. 21.—Following a complaint made by the Canadian Government to the State Department in Washington against American aviators flying across the border from New York State, Governor Glynn yesterday sent out a warning calling attention that the Dominion Government has fixed a penalty of $5,000 or five years' imprisonment for such flights. Clearance papers must be obtained by airman before flying into Canada.

SIEGE NEARS END RUSSIANS HOLD TRENCHES

Russians at Przemysl Hold Trenches Around Forts.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Petrograd says:—

"It is announced here that the siege of Przemysl appears to be rapidly approaching its end. The trenches surrounding the fortifications are in the possession of the Russian troops. Many of the trenches are filled with lime, confirming statements of prisoners that cholera is raging in the garrison of Przemysl."

Britons Rounded Up In Vienna.

VENICE, Nov. 21.—(Via Paris.)—The police of Vienna are adopting much more severe measures against British people remaining in that city. During the past few days many Britishers have been arrested and interned, and the rest, irrespective of age or sex, are now forbiddn to leave thir home between 8 o'clock in the evening and 6 o'clock in the morning, or to visit cafes or other public places.

The Times' special correspondent at Venice says:—

Count Apponyi, writing in The Vienna Zeit, says: "The situation certainly is very grave. We find ourselves, we and our faithful allies, before a strong enemy and coalition created by hate, envy and cupidity, but let us not allow ourselves to fall into black pessimism. It is our duty to prepare our people and to encourage them towards every possible effort and sacrifice."

A chair of Russian language and institutions will be established this winter at the University of Chicago by the gift of Charles R. Crane of that city, it was announced yesterday.

The fishing schooners Natalie Nelson, Matthew Grier, Rosa Dorothea and Rebecca were torn from their anchorage during a gale at Princetown, Mass., and driven ashore on the west side of the harbor.

The department of foods and markets, designed to lower the cost of living by establishing auction markets in many parts of the state, was created yesterday by Governor Glynn of New York State.

Major R. D. E. H. Burton, Middlesex Regiment, has been appointed to command the 14th Battalion, the Nova Scotia contingent, and Lt.-Col. Grant Morden has been appointed second in command of the advance remount depot.

Chatham, Mass., was swept by a gale yesterday, and although the lifesavers of the Chatham station were prepared to abandon the station when shingles as high as the windows were torn loose by the wind, the structure withstood the storm.

The death occurred at his home in Brockville yesterday of James Bissell, retired farmer, aged 80. He was one of the pioneer dairymen of eastern Ontario and established in the Township of Augusta one of the first cheese factories of the Brockville district.

FOUGHT WITH FISTS.

Irish Regiment Taken by Surprise Beats Germans Rough and Tumble.

LONDON, Nov. 21. — Among the stories of isolated engagements sent by the correspondents at the front is one from the correspondent of The Daily Chronicle, in Northern France, who tells of a British charge wherein many men in an impetuous Irish regiment forgot their bayonets and resorted to fists alone.

This is said to have occurred at a point between Ypres and La Bassee. The British infantry jumped out of their trenches and attacked the advancing Germans with the bayonet. An Irish regiment on the British left flank was taken by surprise and became engaged with the Germans in a rough and tumble fight with butt and bayonet. One of the Irish captains, who was wounded, in telling of the melee, said:

"The Germans surprised us, so we went for them with our fists. They climbed up with their rifles and my men went wild. Then it was a regular pandemonium and we punched them left and right. In the end, they surrendered; for they had no chance against us, when it came to a brawl of this sort."

Elliott's Horse Find Refuge.

LONDON, Nov. 21. — The eighty men who formed what was to be known as Elliott's Horse, who came to England from Western Canada, have at last found an asylum in the Canadian contingent at Salisbury Plain. The men were sent down there yesterday. It is understood arrangements have been made whereby they will b drafted into different units of the division. This, of course, disposes of them as a unit or their own, but none of them will experience much regret upon that point, their chief desire being to get to the front.

Other Changes On C. P. R.

MONTREAL, Nov. 21.—With the retirement of Vice-President McNicholl and the promotion of Mr. Bury as first vice-president of the Canadian Pacific, quite a number of other changes will follow later on. One name mentioned for the administration staff is J. J. Warren of Toronto, who has been connected with the construction of the Kettle Valley Railway in British Columbia, and who it is said will later on have important duties assigned to him with headquarters in Toronto in connection with the Canadian Pacific.

Mrs. David Henderson Killed.

GUELPH, Nov. 21. — Death came tragically to Mrs. David Henderson, wife of David Henderson, M.P., of Acton, yesterday. She was shaking a small rug or mat from the balcony of her home when she lost her balance and fell to the ground below, and died in a few minutes.

Mrs. Henderson was in her [illegible] year and highly esteemed. [illegible] her husband have lived in [illegible] many years.

BATTLE AT STANDSTILL

Flanders Comparatively Quiet and Fighting Moves South.

Three Days' Sharp Conflict Has Taken Place In the Argonne and French Have Lost Positions on Left of Meuse—British Victorious In Artillery Duel South of Ypres—Germans Attack Nieuport.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—In the western war area the Germans have moved their main point of attack from West Flanders to the Argonne forest. Sharp fighting has been in progress in this region for the last three days.

The French troops have lost the positions from which they drove the Germans in the town of Chauvincourt, in the Meuse region, several days ago, it was officially announced yesterday. Following the blowing up of the French stations by German mines, the Kaiser's forces reoccupied the destroyed sections, the French retreating to their trenches.

The British army was victorious in a sharp artillery duel south of Ypres, the vigor of the British cross-bombardment compelling the Germans to cease firing.

In West Flanders the weather conditions are bleak and wintry, operations apparently being almost at a standstill. The frequent artillery duels and boat forays recall the historic siege of Leyden.

The German official statement issued yesterday says that a French attack southwest of Verdun was repulsed.

The French official statement says that the Germans have reoccupied the western part of the Village of Chauvincourt, thereby confirming the report from other quarters.

Announcement comes from Bruges, Belgium, of a German defeat in a determined attack at Nieuport to gain control of the canal locks to stop the flooding of German battle positions. The Kaiser's troops were sent forward in armored automobiles, but were driven back by the Franco-Belgian army which now holds a strongly-fortified line east of Nieuport.

Large forces of German engineers have been sent to the front to construct bridges at the points of strategic importance in the inundated territory. Their first efforts will be devoted to preparing a roadway west of Dixmude for the renewal of the German attack to force the passage of the Yser canal.

The Germans have completed a secondary line of fortifications in Belgium in case of a retreat and the troops employed in their construction have been sent to the firing line.

Further charges of atrocities committed by the Germans in Belgium, including the allegation that a total of at least 2,350 civilians were executed at Tamines, Dinant, and in Belgian, Luxemburg, were made by the Belgian commission in an additional report made public by the war bureau yesterday.

TO INCREASE FORCE.

Number of Recruits For War Service To Be Brought Up To 50,000.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21. — Orders will be issued at once to bring up the number of recruits for war service to 50,000. At a meeting of the Cabinet yesterday this was decided upon.

The decision was reached because it was realized that something had to be done to alleviate the conditions created by the lack of employment. These recruits will all be required in any case, and it was felt that they might as well get into training at once. As unemployment is worse in the west than in the east the proportion of recruits asked for from the west will be greater than from the Maritime Provinces.

The 80,000 recruits will be in addition to the 10,000 men who are now under arms doing guard duty, etc., but they will include the 16,000 men who have already been recruited throughout Canada, and from whom the second contingent will be taken. Included in the 50,000 will also be the four regiments of mounted men, 600 in each.

Thus in a very short time Canada will have under arms a total army of 94,000 men, composed as follows: 34,000 in England, 10,000 doing duty in Canada, 16,000 recruits under training and 34,000 new recruits.

CANADIAN CAVALRY FOR FRONT.

Dragoons, Strathcona Horse and Montreal Guides Leave Salisbury

MONTREAL, Nov. 21. — Advices from England yesterday announced that the Canadian Dragoons, the Strathcona Horse, and the Montreal Corps of Guides had left Salisbury Plain for the front.

The information was received in a cable from a member of the Royal Canadian Dragoons. The cable read: "Leaving for the continent to-morrow."

As the cable was private it apparently escaped the censor. It was received here two days ago.

The Royal Canadian Dragoons are a permanent mounted regiment and are commanded by Lieut.-Col. C. M. Nelles. The Strathcona Horse is composed mostly of westerners.

The Point of View.

No 20 Per Cent Discount Sale At SINCLAIR'S

During the past few days we have been frequently asked if we are going to have a 20 per cent Discount Sale, and our reply has been decidedly No. Our business has not been built up on prices that permit of a semi-annual 20 per cent discount sale, but rather by giving our ever increasing patrons Dry Goods and Ladies' and Children's Garments at prices that compete with the large stores of the big cities. A 20 per cent Discount Sale twice a year would put us out of business—our close prices and small profits could not stand it.

IRCREASE AGREED TO.

British Commons Votes To Add 1,000,000 To Army.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The House of Commons yesterday formally passed the vote for the supplementary army estimate, which provides for an additional army of 1,000,000 men.

This is the additional million men mentioned by Premier Asquith in the House of Commons last Monday. It is quite apart from the territorials and is additional to the 1,100,000 men now said to be under arms.

Referring to the supplementary estimate, Harold J. Tennant, Under Secretary of State for War, said the official view was that this further million men ought to be sufficient so far as the Government was able to see at present to crown British arms with success. He declined to give the actual numbers of men enlisted, but he remarked that the figures recently given by the Prime Minister, which were roughly in the neighborhood of 1,100,000, were below rather than above the actual total.

The present idea of the War Office, Mr. Tennant continued, was to duplicate the territorial force, making one battalion for home defence and the other for foreign service.

With regard to the suggestions that Lord Kitchener's army of recruits should be treated differently to the professional soldiers, Mr. Tennant remarked:

"The chief characteristic of Lord Kitchener is not sentiment, and not even persuasive eloquence. These advocates of different treatment would make him change his decision in a matter on which he feels strongly."

PRISONERS KILLED.

Unsuccessful Outbreak In Concentration Camp In Britain Reported.

PARIS, Nov. 21. — Authentic news was received here from official sources last night that many German prisoners of war were killed and many others were injured Thursday in an outbreak in a concentration camp in England. While your correspondent is unable to obtain details of the outbreak or to get a telegram on the subject to or from England, he is assured that the facts stated above are authentic.

There are eight concentration camps in the British Isles for the German prisoners of war.

These camps are located at Aldershot, Newbury, Dorchester, Queensberry, Lancaster, Dyfrim Hall (near Chester), Edinburgh and Templemore, Ireland.

The Aldershot camp is at Frith Hill. That at Newbury is established on the famous race course. At Dorchester the men are quartered in barracks. Two abandoned factory buildings have been transformed into quarters for the prisoners at Queensberry. Similar accommodations have been secured at Lancaster. At Templemore the military barracks have been converted into prison rooms, and at Edinburgh the camp is established in the open, while Dyfrim Hall, a large country mansion, is used to house the officers.

KHEDIVE IN REVOLT.

German Wireless Despatch Says He Is To Fight For Turks.

PARIS, Nov. 21. — (By German wireless.)—The news that the Khedive has revolted against British control and plans to return to Egypt with the Turkish army, is confirmed to-day.

The Temps correspondent at Rhodes says: "It is common knowledge that following Britain's refusal to allow him to return to Egypt the Khedive became enamored of the prospect of re-entering Cairo with a victorious Ottoman army which pro-German Young Turks hold forth to him.

He has organized caravans consisting of 200 horses, tents, and provisions for the campaign. The Turkish army is concentrated between Damascus and Mahau, and is estimated at 200,000, but I believe only 70,000 are of effective fighting value. The Germans, therefore, induced the Khedive to march with them with the object of stirring the Arab population to join the army."

Tribute To British Soldiers.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—A remarkable tribute to the bravery of the British soldiers fighting in France is paid by Field Marshal Sir John French in a special order, part of which was published here yesterday. The order, which is addressed to the second British army corps, is dated field headquarters, Nov. 3. In part it says:—

"Your commander-in-chief has watched with the deepest admiration and solicitude the splendid stand made by the soldiers of His Majesty the King, in their splendid efforts to maintain the forward position which they have won by gallantry and steadfastness. Its courage and endurance is beyond all praise. It is an honor to belong to such an army."

British Casualties.

LONDON, Nov. 21. — Casualty lists issued last night show eight officers killed, 41 wounded and six missing. In the Indian force two British officers and one native officer were killed and seven British and ten native officers wounded. Three British and two native officers are recorded as missing.

Presents Go Free.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21. — A despatch from the Colonial Secretary to the Government here states that all presents to individual soldiers or to bodies of men belonging to the Canadian expeditionary force will be admitted into Great Britain free of duty.

Two Snyders Set Free.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 21.—The three Snyders, father and two sons, who are accused of high treason to the British Empire because they helped to smuggle Austrians out of Canada across the Niagara river, received preliminary trial before Magistrate A. Fraser yesterday.

The crown attorney announced that he held no evidence against the two sons of Joseph Snyder.

The magistrate dismissed them, amid the hearty cheers from the spectators.

Joe Snyder was committed for trial.

Aeroplane Seen Over Dungeness.

LONDON, Nov. 21. — A despatch to the Central Press from Dover says that an aircraft was seen over Dungeness last evening. The official press bureau, while permitting this despatch to be published, said it would not vouch for the accuracy of the statement of the correspondent.

There was no indication as to the nationality of the airship, but it is thought here that it probably was an English one.

RUSSIA BEARS BRUNT

She Is Waging Three Great Battles on Eastern Front.

The Conflicts In the Middle and South Will Have Decisive Results on the Outcome of the War — Germans on Warta and Vistula Are Now on the Defensive and Advance Is a Hazardous One.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Two big battles, either or both of which may have decisive results, are being fought in Poland, and a third conflict of almost as great importance is progressing in East Prussia.

Of the three battles, that which is now at its height between the Vistula and Warta rivers, and in which the Russians last night claimed success, is exciting the greatest interest. The Germans, it is believed, have brought up by their line of strategic railway in Posen and Silesia at least half a million men in an effort to break the Russian line at this point. Weather conditions, the frozen ground and the situation of the battlefield, favor a really decisive battle to a degree which has not existed on any other fields of the present war.

The other battle in Poland is taking place on the Cracow-Czenstochowa front, and both the Russians and the Germans claim that it is proceeding satisfactorily for them. In East Prussia the Russians' advance is moving slowly through the country surrounding the Mazurian Lakes, which is difficult of passage. In Galicia the Russians are going steadily westward and at the same time are seizing the passes of the Carpathians.

The London Daily News has the following from its correspondent at Petrograd:—

The Germans have been forced to act on the defensive in the battle between the Vistula and Warta rivers. Their last effort to piece the Russian line north of Kutno resulted in one of their cavalry divisons getting into a crossfire from the Russian infantry entrenched with a strong support of machine-guns. The result was that over 3,000 dead and wounded were left on the field by the Germans, and the vanguard of their advance fell back on the main body, which is now spreading itself among the defensive positions around the woods.

The Russian pressure continues without any necessity of transferring troops from the army that is working through Soldau or from operations against the line from Kalisch to Czenstochowa.

Granville Fortescue, Petrograd correspondent for the The London Telegraph, says:—

The new German offensive stretches from the Vistula river to the Warta. This plan has been adopted by the enemy, and his corps occupy a front from Plock to Lengezyoa, with his right flank pivoting southwest from this latter position.

In this new attack the first army of the Germans made a rapid march down both sides of the Vistula, abandoning the line of railway and relying on the country roads as its line of communication. Under the weather conditions that prevail this is an extremely dangerous proceeding, and indicates what desperate risks the enemy will run in an effort to redeem the early failure in Poland.

If it had not been for the fact that Russia had such an unlimited supply of troops this last movement of the Germans might have caused an alteration of the Russian plans. So rapid had been the advance of Gen. Ruzsky's army toward the German frontier that the country to the north was, for the moment, unconsidered, while Gen. Ivanoff, confident that his right and rear were well guarded, continued his dash on Cracow.

But a new force has been thrown into the breach. It has been engaged for two days now, and what started as an advance guard action has developed into a sanguinary struggle.

To the Germans it is vital to bring the issue to a close. Every twenty-four hours means an added burden on the slender artery of supplies. The line of communication is being tested to the utmost by the continued transportation of reinforcements from the German frontier to the new zone of operations.

A despatch from Warsaw to The Russky Slavo says the German generals Von Vredow and Von Bromel committed suicide at Czenstochowa, Russian Poland, after a German defeat.

Turks Assisted By Persians?

LONDON, Nov. 21. — Little news regarding the fighting in trans-Caucasia has reached the outside world. The Turkish War Offices announces that the fighting is progressing favorably. The Turkish troops, it is said, have been reinforced by Persian tribesmen.

Leather Goods Needed.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21. — The British War Office is likely to place huge orders in Canada for leather goods equipment. A delegation of sixty of the leading tanners of Canada was called in consultation by Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, yesterday, and asked, in the event of such orders being received, if they would be able to supply the leather. Sir George was assured that the capacity of the Canadian factories is fully equal to any demand that may be made on them. Although Sir George did not specify any particular order, it is understood that the existing requirements of the British War Office already placed in Canada are to be materially increased.

Von Buelow To Go To Italy.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—A despatch from Rome to the Fournier Agency states that Prince von Buelow has been appointed German Ambassador to Italy.

Recent despatches from Rome have indicated that Herr von Flotow, the German Ambassador there, was about to retire.

Prince Bernhard von Buelow, formerly Chancellor of the German Empire, who usually resides in Rome, and who, through his Italian marriage, has great influence in Italian society, was mentioned as likely to take the post in view of its importance at this crisis.

KINGSTON LADY SUSTAINED INJURY

Miss K. Howell, Victoria street, Kingston, slipped on the icy walk and fell, breaking her right arm at the wrist.

FIREMAN MARRIED

Mr. John Albert Lyons, one of Belleville's popular locomotive firemen, was quietly married to Miss Goldie Wannamaker, at the Baptist parsonage on Wednesday evening, Nov. 8. The happy couple will reside in this city.

BURGLARY NEAR TWEED

A man who gave his name as Chas. V. Jones, and who said he hailed from Kingston, was caught by Mr. John Wheeler, who lives near Tweed, in the act of burglarizing his house. The prisoner pleaded guilty to stealing a watch, and ten cents. He was brought to jail at Belleville for trial.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL

Yesterday afternoon the pupils and staff of Alexandra School, met in the Assembly Room of their school and spent a pleasant and profitable half hour, in singing patriotic songs, led by Mrs. A. P. Allen and Mr. Stephen Burrows. The first number, "The Maple Leaf" was sung as only loyal young Canadians can sing it. The followed, "Rule Britannia," and "The Soldiers of the King," which all present were sorry the Kaiser could not hear. The The heartiness of "Tipperary" would lead one to believe the singers were all Irish. Before concluding with the National Anthem, Mr. Mott, on behalf of the school, tendered Mrs. Allen and Mr. Burrows a hearty vote of thanks for their kindness in so ably assisting them.

NERVOUS WOMEN

CAN ONLY FIND RELIEF BY TONING THE NERVES WITH NEW RICH BLOOD.

The woman who "flies to pieces" over the least noise or excitement soon fades and loses her good looks. Dark rings appear under her eyes, the lines about her mouth and forehead deepen and lengthen the eyes become sunken, the face drawn and the complexion sallow.

The trouble is nervousness and if the strain is not relieved and the nerves properly nourished, nervous collapse and years of sickness may easily follow. Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will save you from this dreadful affliction. These Pills make the new, rich blood that nourishes and tones and nerves and banishes every trace of nervousness. Mrs. Margaret Donley, Amherst, N.S., says: "I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved me from the grave. I was taken down with nervous prostration, and for months was unable to walk. I slowly recovered until I was able to go about, but there the improvement ended. I was getting weaker and weaker until I could just get from the bed to a couch. The least noise would set me trembling all over, and often when went to the table I would leave hungry and yet unable to eat. Sometimes I was taken with smothering spells and felt as if I was going to die. At other times I would be so nervous that I could not hold anything in my hands. I was doctoring all the time, but without benefit, and finally I made up my mind I would try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They were the first medicine that gave me any relief, and I was soon able to take a short walk. I continued using the Pills, gradually gaining new health and strength until I finally felt as well as ever I did in my life. At the time Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me I was living in Sackville and my illness and cure was known to everyone in that place, and my friends, like myself, believe the Pills saved my life."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Military News Of This District

A Better Fire Protection for the Battalion

At the meeting of the Fire and Light Committee yesterday afternoon the Chief objected to the moving picture booth as erected in Ontario Hall, now being used as the military Y.M.C.A. He pointed out that its location was not only dangerous but contrary to the Provincial act. The matter was left in the hands of the police, who are the inspectors under the act and the Fire Chief. The committee visited the booth after adjournment and the question was raised as to how it affected the insurance on city buildings. This matter will be looked into at once.

Capt. H. Swaine of the 14th P. W. O. R., has resigned his rank in that regiment to go on overseas service as a non-commissioned officer of the 21st Battalion. Capt. Swaine was one of Lieut.-Col. Hughes' color sergeants in the 14th Regt. fifteen or sixteen years ago. Capt. Swaine is one of the best rifle shots in the Dominion.

John Mason, Brockville, who is a reservist with the South African field force, has received orders from London to report for duty. Mr. Mason will leave for Kingston shortly.

The men of the 21st Battalion are being given short route marches to harden them and put them in good condition. The volunteers are taking to the work with a readiness that promises well for the efficiency of the regiment.

Arrangements have just been completed for a military night, on December 10th, at Ancient St. John's Lodge, A.F. & A.M., of this city. The members of the order, in the overseas contingent, will be entertained. Lieut.-Col. Ponton, of Belleville, has accepted an invitation to make an address at the entertainment.

Prescott has shipped a case of Christmas gifts for the soldiers on Salisbury Plains. The case contained 55 pairs of socks, 54 mufflers, 12 pairs wristlets, 3 balaclava caps, 1 cholera belt, and 12 flannel shirts. Each package was tied with Xmas ribbon and tag bearing the name of maker, and greetings from the Soldiers Aid of Prescott, Ont.

Chose a Name To Fit The Case

With a Family of Eleven He Would Soon Run Short of Names For Them

Shakespeare (or was it Bacon) said "What's in a name. The correct answer is said to be "more or less."

One is reminded of the story told by a certain Judge in this county. It seems that he was travelling in a strange part of the country and stopped at an old negro's cabin to inquire the direction to a certain village. It so happened that there were eight or ten colored children playing in the yard, all resembling one another and bearing unmistakable likeness to the old man. When the desired information was sought the colored patriarch turned to one of the piccaninnies and said: "Here, you Judas Iscariot, come and see what this gemmen done want."

He was asked why he had given such a name to his son.

"Case it's a Bible name," replied the old man.

"But," suggested the judge, "you could have founds lots of names in the Bible that would be better and more appropriate for your son."

"Deed, I couldn't, boss," responded the darkey. "I already had eleven children when he comes, so I goes lookin' frew de Bible to fin' him a name, an' I come to where it says 'it 'ud been better for Judas Iscariot if he neber been born."

The old colored father at least had the advantage of most of us in the fact that he read his Bible, although he did get the purport somewhat twisted.

In the new illustrated Bible now being presented by The Intelligencer on the educational certificate plan, the various passages are made plain by accompanying illustrations that portray the actual meaning of the text. Such a Bible has never before been issued. It gives to the reader an entirely new and correct conception which is at once interesting and instructive. The Bible thus becomes an educational work of rare value to young and old alike. It is just the book for the family—father, mother, brother and sister—everybody that would have a desire to enlighten himself on everyday topics of conversation.

The Intelligencer is now presenting these Bibles for six certificates with the amount of expense items to defray the cost of distribution, as explained elsewhere.

Clip the certificate from another page of this issue.

COMPLETES 35th SEASON ON THE STR. ALEXANDIA

When the steamer Alexandria is tied to the wharf at Picton to lay up for the season her captain, Mr. Joseph Renfrit, will have completed thirty-five years on that vessel. When he was a young man he was taken aboard by his father, the late Capt. John Renfrit and the father conveyed to the son his extensive knowledge of the St. Lawrence River.

In his time the late captain ranked as first among pilots who guided the destinies of the vessels through the angry waters of the St. Lawrence River. He learned his vocation by some Indians who were in the old days very adept in running the rapids. The secrets of the St. Lawrence River rapids were imparted to the present captain of the Alexandria by his father and for thirty-five years he has been taking vessels through the turbulent waters with but a few minor accidents.

Capt. Renfrit is beloved by his crew and he has with him two members who have sailed on the boat for over thirty consecutive seasons. He is well-known in this city, although his home is in Montreal, and many extend their congratulations to him and hope to see him in charge of the Alexandria next spring—Kingston Standard.

An Easy Way To Stop Head Noises

GOOD ADVICE FOR THOSE WHO FEAR DEAFNESS

Men and women who are growing hard of hearing and who experience stuffy feeling of pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by buzzing rumbling sounds in their head like water falling or steam escaping should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble. Head-noises are almost invariably the forerunners of complete or partial deafness and most people suffer from them constantly. Sometimes these head noises become so distracting and nerve racking, with their never ceasing "hum" they drive the sufferer almost frantic and complete nervous breakdown and even violent insanity have been known to result.

Thanks to a remarkable scientific discovery made recently in England it is now possible to almost instantly lessen the severity of these headnoises and in a very short time to completely and permanently overcome them. With the disappearing of the head noises, the hearing also greatly improves and very frequently can be restored to normal. This English treatment is known as Parmint and can be easily and safely self administered at home. Leading druggists in Belleville and vicinity now have it in stock. Get from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength) and mix it at home with ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and hearing improves. Parmint is used double strength in this way not only to reduce, by tonic action, the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tube and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum but to correct any excess of secretion in the middle ear and the result it gives are both remarkably quick and effective.

Important.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St. Montreal, P.Q., who make a speciality of it.

WATER IN MILK; FINES OF $50

In Peterboro Police Court yesterday, Marcus Post, Edward Flemming and Jas. Ferguson, were each fined $40 for supplying cheese factories with deteriorated milk.

R. W. Ward, government inspector, gave evidence for the prosecution.

Marcus Post was charged with supplying deteriorated milk to Killarney cheese factory in Dummer.

R. W. Ward, government inspector, sworn, stated that his tests showed that cream was removed and water added. He told of going to Mr. Post's house, and his wife admitting that she had dipped down too deep, and had taken milk out of the can. Mr. Post said he was innocent of any wrong doing and also that he knew nothing whatever about the matter.

Edward Flemming was charged with supply Ormonde cheese factory in Asphodel with poor milk. He told of his daughter dumping milk into a pail which contained eighteen pounds of water. He claimed it was a mistake and was done without his knowledge.

Jas. Ferguson supplied milk to the Killarney factory.

He said that his milk had been ruined by some hard friends he had.

WANT TO GO AS CHAPLAINS

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The church militant in Canada is preparing to go to the front judging by applications to the militia department for positions as chaplains.

"We have received about two thousand of them," declared a high officer of the general staff.

"If they keep on coming we will have to consider forming a regiment of militant ministers." The number of would-be chaplains is, of course, out of all proportion to requirements but it is a noteworthy indication of poular feeling among the clergy.

At a Hallowe'en mask party in Lorain, Ohio, the principals of a mock wedding, Miss Harriet Reynolds and A. C. Swartz, surprised their friends by announcing that the marriage was real.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Free Examination

On the assumption that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, Sir James Grant, of Ottawa, presented a resolution to the College of Physicians and Surgeons to the effect that every individual should be submitted to a physical examination at least once a year, to the end that any diseases or bodily ills could be detected before they advanced to a dangerous degree.

This is the only Canadian Company giving its policyholders the privilege of a Free Annual Medical examination. This is one of the many special features of this company to protect the best interests of the policyholders.

FOUR GURKHAS WORK HAVOC WITH ENEMY

Two Silent Mitrailleuses and 15 Bodies Testify to Indians' Prowess

In the Pas de Calais, Nov. 20.—(Special)—The narrative of the heroic desperate fighting in which the British troops have been engaged around Ypres has tended to obscure the fact that the line of the Imperial army extends from the south Belgian border to the neighborhood of La Bassee, and that here, too, fighting has been very fierce. It is here that the Indian divisions have been engaged for several days. They have had to face a terrific assault, and their ranks were daily thinned by the murderous fire from heavy artillery and machine guns, against which they had little opportunity of showing their prowess in the kind of warfare in which they are most useful, the charge and stealthy night attack; occasionally, however, they have done wonders in this way.

A company of Gurkhas had been terribly worried one day by fire from a certain German trench 200 yards from their own, at each end of which a mitrailleuse was posted. At nightfall they determined to have done with it. Secretly and silently four men left the trench and crept away into the darkness. An hour passed, two hours and three, and nothing happened. Then just before dawn came the alarm. There was a sudden cry of terror from the German lines then, mingled with shouts and shots. After a minute's struggle in the dark against an invisible foe, who slashed and stabbed without being seen, the Germans, seized with panic, bolted, and a rear rifle fire blazed out along the whole front, but four happy Gurkhas slunk back to their comrades unscratched. When dawn broke the German trench lay untenanted, save by two silent mitrailleuses, and the gashed and bleeding bodies of fifteen of its defenders.

DRUGS PRODUCED FORMERLY IN GERMANY

To be Made in Canada

TORONTO. Nov. 21.—Special—Steps were taken at the semi-annual meeting of the Ontario College of Pharmecy Council, which closed yesterday, to secure the manufacture in Canada of drugs that have been chiefly or wholly produced in Germany, and which are now naturally not accessible from that source. A conference will be held between the Research Committee of the College of Pharmacy and the Toronto Academy of Medicine. It was thought at the meeting yesterday that at least some of the missing drugs can be made here, and among those for which there seemed most hope were such synthetics as aspirin, veronol and salvarsan. It was pointed out in the discussion, however, that one drawback in the manufacture of drugs in this country is the high price of alcohol, due to the heavy taxation it bears. Alcohol was said yesterday to cost 80 to 85 cents per gallon here, compared with 20 to 25 cents in Germany.

Another decision of importance will affect the movement of druggists from this Province to the West. An agreement was completed and placed on record whereby complete reciprocity of diplomas is entered into with the Province of Alberta. The Ontario Council has been working toward this end with all the Provinces, but hitherto had failed to secure more than a tentative agreement with Saskatchewan.

OFFICIALS THINK DEMLER AN IMPORTANT CAPTURE

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 20.—Special—In Demler, a German reservist who was arrested by the immigration authorities, the latter believe they have made an important capture. Demler has been travelling through Canada and several European countries, and it is believed he is in the employ of the German Government. When captured this morning he claimed to be a Swede, giving his name as Gustine Olsen. He said he was on his way home, and produced a steamship ticket to Stockholm, Sweden. He replied in German to a question asked him in the Swedish tongue. He was turned over to the military authorities at the Avenue armory, where he will be held prisoner till the war ends.

FELL THIRTY FEET; UNINJURED.

KINGSTON, Nov. 30.—James Boyd, an electrician, who resides at 400 Brock street, had a miraculous escape from serious injury at the Locomotive Works, on Thursday afternoon late, when, in wiring a part of a new building, he slipped and fell thirty feet to the ground among some debris. He is around again today as fell as ever.

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!

Peps is the discovery!

Peps are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air sacs in the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Peps are entirely distinct from the old fashioned liquid cough cures, which are merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Peps treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.

If you have not yet tried Peps, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.

NOTICE

OF SITTING OF COURT OF REVISION

For Consideration of the Measurements and Special Assessment of the Front and Bridge Street Pavement and the Sanitary Sewer on the Upper Part of Front Street in the City of Belleville.

The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville, have constructed as a local improvement, an Asphaltic Concrete Pavement on Front Street from Dundas Street to the Upper Bridge, and on Bridge Street from the lower Bridge to Pinnacle Street. Also a Sanitary Sewer from Lot 5e on the East side of Front Street to the corner of Mill, Foundry and Pinnacle streets.

The total cost of the Pavement is $63,416.42, of which $28,775.25 is to be paid by the Corporation, the special rate per foot frontage for Pavement is 0.4509.

The special assessment to be paid in 20 annual instalments.

The estimated lifetime of the Pavement is 20 years.

The cost of the Sanitary Sewer is $4,348.33, of which $1034.40 is to be paid by the Corporation.

The special rate per foot frontage for the Sewer is 0.213.

The special assessment to be paid in 30 annual instalments.

The estimated lifetime of the work is 30 years.

A Court of Revision will be held on the 1st day of December, 1914, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, at the Council Chambers, for the purpose of hearing complaints against the proposed special assessment or the accuracy of frontage measurements, and any other complaint which persons interested may desire to make, and which is by law cognisable by the Court.

AT THE FRONT

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractor permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractic is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect. (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

We can prove Chriopractic is right and applicable to your case. Think it over. Consultation free.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Free Examination

On the assumption that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, Sir James Grant, of Ottawa, presented a resolution to the College of Physicians and Surgeons to the effect that every individual should be submitted to a physical examination at least once a year, to the end that any diseases or bodily ills could be detected before they advanced to a dangerous degree.

This is the only Canadian Company giving its policyholders the privilege of a Free Annual Medical examination. This is one of the many special features of this company to protect the best interests of the policyholders.

FOUR GURKHAS WORK HAVOC WITH ENEMY

Two Silent Mitrailleuses and 15 Bodies Testify to Indians' Prowess

In the Pas de Calais, Nov. 20.—(Special)—The narrative of the heroic desperate fighting in which the British troops have been engaged around Ypres has tended to obscure the fact that the line of the Imperial army extends from the south Belgian border to the neighborhood of La Bassee, and that here, too, fighting has been very fierce. It is here that the Indian divisions have been engaged for several days. They have had to face a terrific assault, and their ranks were daily thinned by the murderous fire from heavy artillery and machine guns, against which they had little opportunity of showing their prowess in the kind of warfare in which they are most useful, the charge and stealthy night attack; occasionally, however, they have done wonders in this way.

A company of Gurkhas had been terribly worried one day by fire from a certain German trench 200 yards from their own, at each end of which a mitrailleuse was posted. At nightfall they determined to have done with it. Secretly and silently four men left the trench and crept away into the darkness. An hour passed, two hours and three, and nothing happened. Then just before dawn came the alarm. There was a sudden cry of terror from the German lines then, mingled with shouts and shots. After a minute's struggle in the dark against an invisible foe, who slashed and stabbed without being seen, the Germans, seized with panic, bolted, and a rear rifle fire blazed out along the whole front, but four happy Gurkhas slunk back to their comrades unscratched. When dawn broke the German trench lay untenanted, save by two silent mitrailleuses, and the gashed and bleeding bodies of fifteen of its defenders.

DRUGS PRODUCED FORMERLY IN GERMANY

To be Made in Canada

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Special—Steps were taken at the semi-annual meeting of the Ontario College of Pharmecy Council, which closed yesterday, to secure the manufacture in Canada of drugs that have been chiefly or wholly produced in Germany, and which are now naturally not accessible from that source. A conference will be held between the Research Committee of the College of Pharmacy and the Toronto Academy of Medicine. It was thought at the meeting yesterday that at least some of the missing drugs can be made here, and among those for which there seemed most hope were such synthetics as aspirin, veronol and salvarsan. It was pointed out in the discussion, however, that one drawback in the manufacture of drugs in this country is the high price of alcohol, due to the heavy taxation it bears. Alcohol was said yesterday to cost 80 to 85 cents per gallon here, compared with 20 to 25 cents in Germany.

Another decision of importance will affect the movement of druggists from this Province to the West. An agreement was completed and placed on record whereby complete reciprocity of diplomas is entered into with the Province of Alberta. The Ontario Council has been working toward this end with all the Provinces, but hitherto had failed to secure more than a tentative agreement with Saskatchewan.

OFFICIALS THINK DEMLER AN IMPORTANT CAPTURE

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 20.—Special—In Demler, a German reservist who was arrested by the immigration authorities, the latter believe they have made an important capture. Demler has been travelling through Canada and several European countries, and it is believed he is in the employ of the German Government. When captured this morning he claimed to be a Swede, giving his name as Gustine Olsen. He said he was on his way home, and produced a steamship ticket to Stockholm, Sweden. He replied in German to a question asked him in the Swedish tongue. He was turned over to the military authorities at the Avenue armory, where he will be held prisoner till the war ends.

FELL THIRTY FEET; UNINJURED.

KINGSTON, Nov. 30.—James Boyd, an electrician, who resides at 400 Brock street, had a miraculous escape from serious injury at the Locomotive Works, on Thursday afternoon late, when, in wiring a part of a new building, he slipped and fell thirty feet to the ground among some debris. He is around again today as fell as ever.

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!

Peps is the discovery!

Peps are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air sacs in the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Peps are entirely distinct from the old fashioned liquid cough cures, which are merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Peps treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.

If you have not yet tried Peps, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.

AT THE FRONT

Nothwithstanding that the majority of cases that come to the Chiropractor are considered incurable or other methods of restoring health failed to do more than give a little temporary relief, the Chiropractor permanently cures a greater percentage of cases than any other science. How? By removing the cause.

Chiropractic is not a theory or belief, but a proven fact that pressure on the nerves where they emit from the spinal cord is the cause of disease. That being the only place where nerves pass between two hard or bony surfaces that are movable.

The human brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves transmit the life current from the brain to every part of the body.

Obstruct the electric current between the dynamo and where electricity is expressed and there will be a lack of expression. Obstruct the life current between the brain and where life is expressed and there will be a lack of expression.

Where there is a lack of expression (dis-ease) there must be an obstruction, otherwise expression would be perfect. (health).

If you are suffering from any mental or physical disease you may be sure that it is a lack of life current going to those parts.

We can prove Chiropractic is right and applicable to your case. Think it over. Consultation free.

Silver Recovered From Sunken Liner

Leads to Complicated Action in the Quebec Admiralty Court

QUEBEC, Nov. 20.—A case arising from the wreck of the ill-fated Empress of Ireland near Rimouski is being heard in the Admiralty Court here in regard to some 251 bars of silver secured from the sunken vessel. In an effort to collect one hundred thousand dollars for the salvage, the Canadian Salvage Association made a seizure of the silver, which weighs about two tons, and which is now in the vaults of a local bank.

The contending parties claim that this sum is far too high, as an expert has placed the value of the silver at one hundred and forty thousand dollars.

The salvage company claim that a hundred thousand dollars have been well earned by their hazardous work in recovering the silver from the wreck.

The parties who make claims to the silver are the Sea Insurance Co., the Aetna Insurance Co., the Western Insurance Co., the Canadian Express Co. and Lloyd's.

Mr. Justice Routhier is presiding over the court, the salvage company is represented by Mr. C. A. Pentland, K. C., and the owners of the silver by Mr. George Gibson, K.C.

"WILD MAN" WAS ONLY ILL

Dread of Rodriguez Turned to Pity When he Told his Story

PORT JEFFERSON, L.I. Nov. 20.—Women and girls of this place, who had been frightened frequently in the last few months by the appearance in deserted stretches of road near the town of a "wild-man," learned with relief today that Constable Harry Grover had caught the man. Their fears changed to sympathy when they learned the "wild man's" story, and his capture probably will result in his getting assistance.

He said his name was Juan Rodrigues, and that he had come from Monterey, Mexico, ten years ago. He was sent to hospital New York some time ago, and eight months back was discharged as cured. It was Spring then and he walked out into the country looking for work.

His strength had been sapped by his long illness, he said, and at last he found himself to weak to work. Then he took to the woods, subsisting on what he could beg at first, and then, as his clothes became mere tatters and his appearance began to frighten strangers, on what he could find in the woods.

He said he had never accosted a woman or a girl, though he realized many had seen him and run, and he said he had frequently spent the night in trees while he listened to farmers beating the woods around him for trace of him after their wives or daughters had seen the "wild man."

He was fed and decent clothes were given to him, and tomorrow he will have a hearing before Justice of the Peace Jacob Dreyer.

OLD COINS WERE FOUND UNDER MILL

Though Pieces Were Dated Older Than 1775, They Were All Bright

ALLENDALE, Mo., Nov. 14—While excavating for a frunace under their sorghum mill, about six miles northeast of here, N. M. Maudlin and his son unearthed a number of ancient gold and silver coins.

The coins were laying loose in the ground and very near the surface. The building under which they were found has been standing many years, and how the coins came to be there is a mystery.

All the pieces are bright, and, with the exception of one—an old-fashioned United States dollar, which is worn smooth—the dates and wording are plainly legible.

The oldest date is 1775, and it is on a Spanish half dollar. The opposite side bears the words, "Carolus III."

A French coin of five francs bears the words, "Napoleon Empereur," and the date is 1813.

The other coins are two United States quarters dated 1853, two United States dimes, dated 1840 and 1853, and one United States dollar, dated 1849.

WIDOW'S APPEAL DELETED

Clemenceau Attacks Censor With Bitter Sarcasm

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Two days ago Georges Clemenceau wrote an editorial in l'Homme Enchainé, in which he called the attention of the authorities to a soldier's widow who was not receiving adequate assistance since her husband's death. At the point where he inserted the woman's letter with the words: "I have received the following moving letter," the censor obliberated her appeal. Now M. Clemenceau attacks the treatment accorded him with the bitterest sarcasm. "The woman," he says, "asks France: 'What will you do for me who has given my husband's life? What do you reply, socialist seigneurs, who contemplate, you from guilded armchairs, the results of your congress of international brotherhood; oh, you smiling augurs of radicalism and moderation. You reply with Blucher's famous expression: 'Halt's Maul.' (Shut your mouth.) Your impose upon the widows of the men who died for France. It is too much. I conjure you in the public interest to stop. Who are you to bid all France be silent? I pray you, reflect, reflect!"

BEAUTIES OF ONTARIO

Belleville

Among the beauties of Canada's grand old Province of Ontario, is Belleville, a bustling, busy city of 12,-600 population situated on the Bay of Quinte, Lake Ontario and the mouth of the Moira River, 220 miles from Montreal and 113 miles from Toronto. Belleville is broadly known as one of the most beautiful little cities of Canada, both in point of location and in civic attractiveness. The city's history began in 1800 when John Taylor settled near the mouth of the Moira River, then known as "Shingleton's Creek," named after a settler who had preceded Taylor. Following closely in the footsteps of his predecessors, Capt. John W. Meyers renamed the locality "Meyers' Creek," and for a dozen years the settlement thrived under the name.

In 1816 Governor Gore, according to the statements of Dr. Scadding, jocosely suggested the abbreviation of his wife's name Arabella, as a good name for the village. Capt. Meyers is credited with having constructed a dam and erected a mill as well as, in 1794, "building the first brick house Canada had ever seen."—(Historical Atlas). Belleville's first church was built by Methodists in 1810 and followed in 1820 by a second erected by Anglicans.

Belleville's first newspaper was published in 1832. It, like others before it, had only a brief existence. One of these publications, the "Plain Speaker," tried to support the Mackenzie party. The editor, Hart, was jailed for participating in an attempted raid on the bank at Cobourg. One morning a little later, the paper appeared with the British Arms printed upside down. The editor was seized by a mob and dragged through the mud and slush of the streets for deliberately insulting the Government. The Sheriff of Hastings County, Moodie by name, became with his wife, joint editor in another unsuccessful literary venture known as the "Victoria Magazine."

Since the throes of its earlier existence Belleville has steadily groan to be a prosperous, substantial city noted for good business; added to this is a bright reputation easily won and justly, too, for being a gem of civic beauty.

TEN YEARS PAST CENTURY

William McCullough's Death at Age of One Hundred and Ten.

DARLINGTON, Nov. 19.—William McCulloch, who died recently at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Robert Nesbitt, with whom has last years were spent, had reached the great age of one hundred and ten years. Circumstances connected with his life verify this statement. He was born in Ireland, but early in life came to Canada and settled in the township of Hope. In 1850 he married Mrs. Jane Smart. His wife died in 1887.

TALE OF INSULTING THE UNITED STATES FLAG

ermans in Antwerp Tore up The Stars and Stripes, Belgians Say

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A Belgian who has arrived here from Antwerp gives the following description of conditions in Antwerp:

"I do not think the German garrison of Antwerp consists of more than 2,000 or 3,000 men. The Germans have no hands to spare for the reconstruction of the forts damaged by the bombardment. Big guns have been mounted among the ruins also to control the harbor. On the whole, comparatively few Belgians have returned, while very many are still trying to leave via Holland. In the last few days the Germans have steadily refused passports.

"A pitiful sight was presented when the train in which I traveled reached the frontier. A number of women and children were turned out of the train and permission to pass into Holland was refused to them. They were all sobbing and crying, for beyond the froniter was freedom, behind it tyranny.

"To the Germans Antwerp is a white elephant. They have to feed it and they can make no use of it. On Sunday a steamer flying the Stars and Stripes arrived with food in the harbor.

"The Germans have tried very many times to build a pontoon bridge over the Scheldt, but each time the tide rises high it carries the pontoons away, and they have to begin all over again.

"In the taverns you have to be very careful; a careless word let fall in the presence of Germans are being defeated in the west, is sufficient for you to be arrested, court-martialed, and condemned to many months, even years, of imprisonment.

"I believe some day there will be trouble for the Germans with the Americans. I heard that German soldiers tore down the American flag from an office of the Red Star Line, where some American goods were stored. They tore it in half and destroyed it. The American Consul came and demanded the flag. They could not find it. The American Consul demanded that they buy a new one. When it was brought he hoisted it and tore down the German flag, treating it the same way his own flag had been treated."

SLAIN MAN IN BARREL DUMPED OFF A WAGON

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The body of a young man with a bullet wound over his heart was found, shoved head downward into a barrel, in Vernon Avenue, opposite Rainey Park, a lonesome part of Long Island City.

The victim was in his early twenties, about five feet, nine inches in height, and weighting 135 pounds. He was smooth shaven and of dark complexion His clothing was dark and of good quality and he wore a blue and white striped shirt, black tie, shoes, and socks.

There was no money or jewelry in the pockets. The barrel was of the sort used by meat packers, and the police were inclined to believe that the man had been killed in Manhattan, perhaps in Harlem's Little Italy, and carried to the lonely spot in the hope it would not be discovered until hours afterward.

Living in Shack With Earth Floor

But Woman Owner Left it for Warmer Quarters With Regret

PATRIOTIC FUND CASE

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—No story of an importunate landlord (although these continue to be reported every day at the headquarters of the Montreal branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund could equal, as a document of distress, the record of a householder's struggle which was relieved yesterday by the committee. Perhaps the title of householder is an exalted one in this particular case but at least the woman is a homeowner, and such as it is, she hated to leave the poor excuse for a home for the more comfortable quarters which have been secured for her.

To be exact, the dwelling is what any one not its owner would describe as a shack. Until recently, it was not even roofed in, and today, the floor of the two small rooms into which it is divided, is the bare earth. But it is paid for. It is something which is the very own of the woman who left it yesterday, something for which sacrifices had been made before the husband heard the call of the Empire, and went to war. With no facilities for heating, it has been a veritable icebox during the past few days, and as the woman who has lived in it is in delicate health, it was imperative that other arrangements should be made for her without delay. But she hated to leave it, even when the lady visitors announced that they had found another home which she could occupy free of rent for the winter. She was afraid, she said, that if she left it she might lose the property, it would be juggled away from her in some way or other. At last, she was convinced that her fears were groundless, and that she might leave her castle secure in the knowledge that it would be hers to return to whenever she desired. She is one of two women whose cases are exactly similar.

INCURABLE GRIEF

All the work was mapped out for the new charwoman, but about the appointed time she arrived in tears, says London Tit-a-Bits.

"My poor 'usband was shot in the battle," she said, "and 'e's passed away."

The employer was all sympathy, gave the widow the half-crown she ought to have earned, and did the necessary work herself.

The next day she met the neighbor who recommended the woman, and said:

"You've heard, I suppose, about Mrs —'s husband being killed?"

"Yes", said her friend. "But she ought to have got over it by now. It was in the Boer War."

It's difficult to pose as a successful fisherman unless you possess a vivid imagination.

Vodka's Death In Russia Is New Miracle

Drunkeness Vanished in Night and $1,000,000,000 a Year Was Saved to People

DIFFERENT RACE IS BORN

The Metamorphosis Was Virtually Brought About by Efforts of One Man, Once a House Painter Now a Millionaire

PETROGRAD, Nov. 19.—There is prohibition in Russia today, prohibition which means that not a drop of vodka, whiskey, brandy, gin or any other strong liquor is obtainable from one end to the other of a territory populated by 150,000,000 people and covering one-sixth of the habitable globe.

The story of how strong drink has been utterly banished from the Russian Empire was related to the Associated Press by Michael Demitrovitch Tchelisheff, the man directly responsible for putting an end to Russia's great vice, the vodka habit.

It should be said in the beginning that the word "prohibition" in Russia must be taken literally. Its use does not imply a partially successful attempt to curtail the consumption of liquor resulting in drinking in secret places, the abuse of medical licenses, nad general evasion and subterfuge. It does mean that a vast population who consumed $1,000,000,000 worth of vodka a year, whose ordinary condition has been described by Russians themselves as ranging from a slight degree of stimulation upward has been lifted almost in one day from a drunken inertia to sobriety. The nation has been compelled, virtually overnight, to abandon its enormous daily consumption of vodka, a liquor that is almost pure alcohol, and become abstemious to the extent of letting no liquor pass its lips.

On that day when the mobilization of the Russian army began, special policemen visited every public place where vodka is sold, locked up the supply of the liquor, and placed on the shop the Imperial seal. Since the manufacture and sale of vodka is a Government monopoly in Russia, it is not a difficult thing to enforce prohibition From the day this step was taken, drunkenness vanished in Russia. The results are seen at once in the peasantry already they are beginning to look like a different race. The marks of suffering, the pinched looks of illness and improper nourishment have gone from their faces. There has been also a remarkable change in the appearance of their clothes. Their clothes are cleaner, and both the men and women appear more neatly and better dressed. The destitute character of the homes of the poor has been replaced with something like order and thrift. In Petrograd and Moscow the effects of these improved conditions is fairly startling. On holidays in these two cities inebriates always filled the police stations, and often they lay about on the sidewalks, and even in the streets. Things are so different today that unattended women may now pass at night through portions of these cities where it was formerly dangerous even for men.

One man Wrought Miracle.

This miracle has been virtually accomplished by one man. He is Michael D. Tchelisheff, a peasant by birth, originally a house painter by profession then mayor of the City of Samaria, and now a millionaire. Physically, he is a giant, standing over 6 feet, 4 inch-

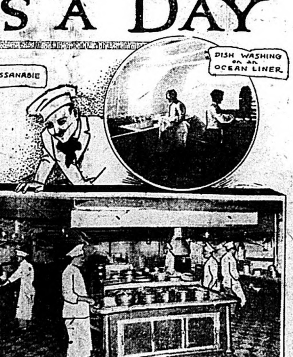
6 MEALS A DAY

S·S·MISSANABIE



DISH WASHING ON AN OCEAN LINER

Nothing is more important on an ocean going steamer than the kitchen. On a full ship there may be two sittings for each regular meal, this meaning six meals to be served within twelve hours. In addition to breakfast, luncheon and dinner there are extras, which require much attention on the part of the Culinary Department. Before breakfast tea and sandwiches are offered to the travellers in their state rooms. Before luncheon, or about eleven in the morning, one may be served with a cup of hot broth or something equally tempting. Afternoon tea is as much of an institution on board steamer as is the dinner. In the evening sandwiches are offered in the smoking rooms.

Labor saving and time saving appliances of every kind are therefore installed, and the chief cook must have many assistants to rush the meals through in time. Dishes are worked on automatic machines a hundred or so at a time turned by a wheel; eggs pop out automatically when they have reached the medium boiled stage, the coffee pot whistles when it is just ready. The appetite on board ship grows every day and by the end of the voyage the cooks are glad of their well earned rest.

OLD COINS WERE FOUND UNDER MILL

Though Pieces Were Dated Older Than 1775, They Were All Bright

ALLENDALE, Mo., Nov. 14—While excavating for a frunace under their sorghum mill, about six miles northeast of here, N. M. Maudlin and his son unearthed a number of ancient gold and silver coins.

The coins were laying loose in the ground and very near the surface. The building under which they were found has been standing many years, and how the coins came to be there is a mystery.

All the pieces are bright, and, with the exception of one—an old-fashioned United States dollar, which is worn smooth—the dates and wording are plainly legible.

The oldest date is 1775, and it is on a Spanish half dollar. The opposite side bears the words, "Carolus III."

A French coin of five francs bears the words, "Napoleon Empereur," and the date is 1813.

The other coins are two United States quarters dated 1853, two United States dimes, dated 1840 and 1852, and one United States dollar, dated 1849.

WIDOW'S APPEAL DELETED

Clemenceau Attacks Censor With Bitter Sarcasm

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Two days ago Georges Clemenceau wrote an editorial in l'Homme Enchainé, in which he called the attention of the authorities to a soldier's widow who was not receiving adequate assistance since her husband's death. At the point where he inserted the woman's letter with the words: "I have received the following moving letter," the censor obliberated her appeal. Now M. Clemenceau attacks the treatment accorded him with the bitterest sarcasm. "The woman," he says, "asks France: 'What will you do for me who has given my husband's life?' What do you reply, socialist seigneurs, who contemplate, you from guilded armchairs, the results of your congress of international brotherhood; oh, you smiling augurs of radicalism and moderation. You reply with Blucher's famous expression: 'Halt's Maul.' (Shut your mouth.) Your impose upon the widows of the men who died for France. It is too much. I conjure you in the public interest to stop. Who are you to bid all France be silent? I pray you, reflect, reflect!"

BEAUTIES OF ONTARIO

Belleville

Among the beauties of Canada's grand old Province of Ontario, is Belleville, a bustling, busy city of 12,600 population situated on the Bay of Quinte, Lake Ontario and the mouth of the Moira River, 220 miles from Montreal and 113 miles from Toronto. Belleville is broadly known as one of the most beautiful little cities of Canada, both in point of location and in civic attractiveness. The city's history began in 1800 when John Taylor settled near the mouth of the Moira River, then known as "Shingleton's Creek," named after a settler who had preceded Taylor. Following closely in the footsteps of his predecessors, Capt. John W. Meyers renamed the locality "Meyers' Creek," and for a dozen years the settlement thrived under the name.

In 1816 Governor Gore, according to the statements of Dr. Scadding, jocosely suggested the abbreviation of his wife's name Arabella, as a good name for the village. Capt. Meyers is credited with having constructed a dam and erected a mill as well as, in 1794, "building the first brick house Canada had ever seen."—(Historical Atlas). Belleville's first church was built by Methodists in 1810 and followed in 1820 by a second erected by Anglicans.

Belleville's first newspaper was published in 1832. It, like others before it, had only a brief existence. One of these publications, the "Plain Speaker," tried to support the Mackenzie party. The editor, Hart, was jailed for participating in an attempted raid on the bank at Cobourg. One morning a little later, the paper appeared with the British Arms printed upside down. The editor was seized by a mob and dragged through the mud and slush of the streets for deliberately insulting the Government. The Sheriff of Hastings County, Moodie by name, became with his wife, joint editor in another unsuccessful literary venture known as the "Victoria Magazine."

Since the throes of its earlier existence Belleville has steadily groan to be a prosperous, substantial city noted for good business; added to this is a bright reputation easily won and justly, too, for being a gem of civic beauty.

TEN YEARS PAST CENTURY

William McCullough's Death at Age of One Hundred and Ten.

DARLINGTON, Nov. 19.—William McCulloch, who died recently at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Robert Nesbitt, with whom has last years were spent, had reached the great age of one hundred and ten years. Circumstances connected with his life verify this statement. He was born in Ireland, but early in life came to Canada and settled in the township of Hope. In 1850 he married Mrs. Jane Smart. His wife died in 1887.

TALE OF INSULTING THE UNITED STATES FLAG

ermans in Antwerp Tore up The Stars and Stripes, Belgians Say

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A Belgian who has arrived here from Antwerp gives the following description of conditions in Antwerp:

"I do not think the German garrison of Antwerp consists of more than 2,000 or 3,000 men. The Germans have no hands to spare for the reconstruction of the forts damaged by the bombardment. Big guns have been mounted among the ruins also to control the harbor. On the whole, comparatively few Belgians have returned, while very many are still trying to leave via Holland. In the last few days the Germans have steadily refused passports.

"A pitiful sight was presented when the train in which I traveled reached the frontier. A number of women and children were truned out of the train and permission to pass into Holland was refused to them. They were all sobbing and crying, for beyond the froniter was freedom, behind it tyranny.

"To the Germans Antwerp is a white elephant. They have to feed it and they can make no use of it. On Sunday a steamer flying the Stars and Stripes arrived with food in the harbor.

"The Germans have tried very many times to build a pontoon bridge over the Scheldt, but each time the tide rises high it carries the pontoons away, and they have to begin all over again.

"In the taverns you have to be very careful; a careless word let fall in the presence of Germans are being defeated in the west, is sufficient for you to be arrested, court-martialed, and condemned to many months, even years, of imprisonment.

"I believe some day there will be trouble for the Germans with the Americans. I heard that German soldiers tore down the American flag from an office of the Red Star Line, where some American goods were stored. They tore it in half and destroyed it. The American Consul came and demanded the flag. They could not find it. The American Consul demanded that they buy a new one. When it was brought he hoisted it and tore down the German flag, treating it the same way his own flag had been treated."

SLAIN MAN IN BARREL DUMPED OFF A WAGON

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The body of a young man with a bullet wound over his heart was found, shoved head downward into a barrel, in Vernon Avenue, opposite Rainey Park, a lonesome part of Long Island City.

The victim was in his early twenties, about five feet, nine inches in height, and weighting 135 pounds. He was smooth shaven and of dark complexion His clothing was dark and of good quality and he wore a blue and white striped shirt, black tie, shoes, and socks.

There was no monoy or jewelry in the pockets. The barrel was of the sort used by meat packers, and the police were inclined to believe that the man had been killed in Manhattan, perhaps in Harlem's Little Italy, and carried to the lonely spot in the hope it would not be discovered until hours afterward.

Living in Shack With Earth Floor

But Woman Owner Left it for Warmer Quarters With Regret

PATRIOTIC FUND CASE

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—No story of an importunate landlord (although these continue to be reported every day at the headquarters of the Montreal branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund could equal, as a document of distress, the record of a householder's struggle which was relieved yesterday by the committee. Perhaps the title of householder is an exalted one in this particular case but at least the woman is a homeowner, and such as it is, she hated to leave the poor excuse for a home for the more comfortable quarters which have been secured for her.

To be exact, the dwelling is what any one not its owner would describe as a shack. Until recently, it was not even roofed in, and to-day, the floor of the two small rooms into which it is divided, is the bare earth. But it is paid for, it is something which is the very own of the woman who left it yesterday, something for which sacrifices had been made before the husband heard the call of the Empire, and went to war. With no facilities for heating, it has been a veritable icebox during the past few days, and as the woman who has lived in it is in delicate health, it was imperative that other arrangements should be made for her without delay. But she hated to leave it, even when the lady visitors announced that they had found another home which she could occupy free of rent for the winter. She was afraid, she said, that if she left it she might lose the property—it would be juggled away from her in some way or other. At last, she was convinced that her fears were groundless, and that she might leave her castle secure in the knowledge that it would be hers to return to wherever she desired. She is one of two women whose cases are exactly similar.

INCURABLE GRIEF

All the work was mapped out for the new charwoman, but about the appointed time she arrived in tears, says London Tit-a-Bits.

"My poor 'usband was shot in the battle," she said, "and 'e's passed away."

The employer was all sympathy, gave the widow the half-crown she ought to have earned, and did the necessary work herself.

The next day she met the neighbor who recommended the woman, and said:

"You've heard, I suppose, about Mrs —'s husband being killed?"

"Yes", said her friend. "But she ought to have got over it by now. It was in the Boer War."

It's difficult to pose as a successful fisherman unless you possess a vivid imagination.

Vodka's Death In Russia Is New Miracle

Drunkeness Vanished in Night and $1,000,000,000 a Year Was Saved to People

DIFFERENT RACE IS BORN

The Metamorphosis Was Virtually Brought About by Efforts of One Man, Once a House Painter Now a Millionaire

PETROGRAD, Nov. 19.—There is prohibition in Russia today, prohibition which means that not a drop of vodka, whiskey, brandy, gin or any other strong liquor is obtainable from one end to the other of a territory populated by 150,000,000 people and covering one-sixth of the habitable globe.

The story of how strong drink has been utterly banished from the Russian Empire was related to the Associated Press by Michael Demitrovitch Tchelisheff, the man directly responsible for putting an end to Russia's great vice, the vodka habit.

It should be said in the beginning that the word "prohibition" in Russia must be taken literally. Its use does not imply a partially successful attempt to custail the consumption of liquor resulting in drinking in secret places, the abuse of medical licenses, nad general evasion and subterfuge. It does mean that a vast population who consumed $1,000,000,000 worth of vodka a year, whose ordinary condition has been described by Russians themselves as ranging from a slight degree of stimulation upward has been lifted almost in one day from a drunken inertia to sobriety. The nation has been compelled, virtually overnight, to abandon its enormous daily consumption of vodka, a liquor that is almost pure alcohol, and become abstemious to the extent of letting no liquor pass its lips.

On that day when the mobilization of the Russian army began, special policemen visited every public place where vodka is sold, locked up the supply of the liquor, and placed on the shop the Imperial seal. Since the manufacture and sale of vodka is a Government monopoly in Russia, it is not a difficult thing to enforce prohibition From the day this step was taken, drunkenness vanished in Russia. The results are seen at once in the peasantry already they are beginning to look like a different race. The marks of suffering, the pinched looks of illness and improper nourishment have gone from their faces. There has been also a remarkable change in the appearance of their clothes. Their clothes are cleaner, and both the men and women appear more neatly and better dressed. The destitute character of the homes of the poor has been replaced with something like order and thrift. In Petrograd and Moscow the effects of these improved conditions is fairly startling. On holidays in these two cities inebriates always filled the police stations, and often they lay about on the sidewalks, and even in the streets. Things are so different today that unattended women may now pass at night through portions of these cities where it was formerly dangerous even for men.

One man Wrought Miracle.

This miracle has been virtually accomplished by one man. He is Michael D. Tchelisheff, a peasant by birth, orpiginally a house painter by profession then mayor of the City of Samaria, and now a millionaire. Physically, he is a giant, standing over 6 feet, 4 inch-

Dishes are worked on automatic machines a hundred or so at a time turned by a wheel; eggs pop out automatically when they have reached the medium boiled stage, the coffee pot whistles when it is just ready. The appetite on board ship grows every day and by the end of the voyage the cooks are glad of their well earned rest.

Vodka's Death In Russia Is New Miracle

es, and of powerful build. Although he is 55 years old, he looks much younger. His movements display the energy of youth, his eyes are animated and his black hair is not tinged with grey.

In Petrograd Mr. Tchelisheff is generally found in a luxuriant suite or rooms in one of the best hotels. He goes about clad in a blue blouse with a tasselled girdle, and baggy black breeches tucked into heavy boots He offers his visitors tea from a samovar and fruit from the Crimea. Speaking of what he had accomplished for the cause of sobriety in Russian Mr. Tchelisheff said:

"I was reared in a small Russian village. There were no schools or hospitals, or any of the improvements we are accustomed to in civilized communities. I picked up an education from old newspapers and stray books. One day I chanced upon a book in the hands of a moujik which treated of the harmlessness of alcohol. It stated, among other things, that vodka was poison. I was so impressed with this, knowing that everybody drank vodka that I asked the first physician I met if the statement were true. He said yes. Men drank it, he explained, because momentarily it gave them a sensation of pleasant dizziness. From that time I decided to take every opportunity to discover more about the use of vodka.

"At the end of the eighties, there came famine in Russia, followed by agrarian troubles. I saw a crowd of peasants demand from a local landlord all the grain and foodstuffs in his granary. This puzzled me; I could not understand how honest men were indulging, in what seemed to be highway robbery. But I noted at the time that every man who was taking part in this incident was a drinking man, while their fellow villagers who were abstemious had sufficient provisions in their own homes. Thus it was that I observed the industrial effects of vodka drinking.

Decides to Fight Vodka.

"At Samara, I decided to do more than passively disapprove of vodka. At this time I was an alderman, and most of the tenants living in my houses were working men. One night a drunken father in one of my houses killed his wife. This incident made such a terrible impression on me that I decided to fight vodka with all my strength.

"On the supposition that the Government was selling vodka for the revenue received from its consumption in Samara. I then introduced a bill in the city council providing that the city give this sum of money to the Imperial treasury, requesting at the same time that the sale of vodka be prohibited. This bill was passed, and the money was appropriated. It was offered to the Government, but the Government promptly refused it.

"It then dawned upon me that Russian bureaucracy did not want the people to become sober for the reason that it was easier to rule autocratically a drunken mob than a sober people.

"This was seven years ago. Later I was elected Mayor of Samara, capital of the Volga district, a district with over a quarter of a million inhabitants. Subsequently to holding this office I was elected to the Duma on an anti-vodki platform. In the Duma I proposed a bill permitting the inhabitants of any town to close the local vodka shops, and providing also that every bottle of vodka should bear a label with the word "poison." At my request the wording of this label in which the evils of vodka were set forth, was done by the late Count Leo Tolstoi. This bill passed the Duma and went to the Imperial Council, where it was amended, and finally tabled.

Had Audience with Czar.

"I then begged an audience of Emperor Nicholas. He received me with great kindness in his castle in the Crimea, not far from the scene of the Turkish bombardment. He listened to me patiently. He was impressed with my recital that most of the revolutionary and social excesses were committed by drunkards, and that the Sveaberg, Kronstadt and Sebastopol navy revolts and the Petrograd and other mutinous military movements were all caused by inebriates. Having heard me out, His Majesty promised at once to speak to his minister of finance concerning the prohibition of vodka.

"Disappointed at not having been able to get through a Government bill regulation this evil, I had abandoned my seat in the Duma. It was evident that the bureaucracy had been able to obstruct the measure. Minister of Finance Kokovsoff regarded it as a dangerous innivation depriving the Government of 1,000,000,000 roubles ($500,000,000) yearly, without any method of replacing this revenue.

"While I lobbied in Petrograd the Emperor visited the country around Moscow and saw the havoc of vodka. He then dismissed Kokovsoff, and appointed the present minister of finance M Bark.

"Mobilization precipitated the anti-vodka measure. The Grand Duke, remembering the disorganization due to drunkenness, during the mobilization of 1904, ordered the prohibition of all alcoholic drinks except in clubs and first-class restaurants. This order enforced for one month, showed the Russian authorities the value of abstinence. In spite of the general depression caused by the war; the paralysis of business, the closing of factories and the interruption of railroad traffic the people felt no privation. Saving banks showed an increase in deposits over the proceeding month and over the corresponding month of the preceding year. At the same time there was a boom in the sale of meats, groceries, clothing, dry goods and hourse furnishings. The 30,000,000 rubles a day that had been paid for vodka were now being spent for the necessities of life. The average working week increased from three and four days to six, the numerous holidays of the drinker having been eliminated. The working day also became longer, and the efficiency of the worker was perhaps doubled. Women and children, who seldom were without marks, showing the physical violence of the husband and father, suddenly found themselves in an undreamed-of paradise. There were no blows, no insults, and no rough treatment. There was bread on the table, milk for the babies, and a fire in the kitchen.

"I decided to seize this occasion for a press campaign, so far as this is a possible thing in Russia. I organized delegations to present petitions to the proper authorities for the prolonging of this new sobriety to the end of the war. This step found favor with His Imperial Majesty, and an order was issued to that effect. Another similar campaign to remove the licenses from privileged clubs and restaurants was successful, and strong liquor is no longer obtainable in Russia.

"The second month of abstinence made the manifold advantages so clear to everybody, that when we called upon His Majesty to thank him for his recent orders, he promised that the vodka business of the Government would be given up for ever.

This promise was promulgated in a telegram to the Grand Duke Constantine.

"There remains only now to find elsewhere the revenue which up to the present time has been contributed by vodka. There has been introduced in the Duma a bill offering a solution of this question. The aim of this bill is not the creation of new taxes or an increase in the present taxes, but an effort to render the Government domains and possessions more productive.

EX-WIRE TAPPER TO A CELL

About to Dine in Style at the Knickerbocker When Arrested

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Even since Charles Gondorff, one of the most notorious wire-tappers since the days of "Old Chris" Tracy, was sent to Sing Sing last September, the police have been looking for members of his gang. Detectives Daly, Cooper and Martin, stopping to watch two girls alight from a taxicab at the Hotel Knickerbocker last night, were startled to recognize in their dapper escort Louis Heineman the "Honey Grove Kid," who, they say, was a notorious wiretapper in his day and a member of the old Maybray gang which used to run fake horse races, foot races, prize fights, or any other form of sport chosen by the victim to get his money. This gang was finally run down in Council Bluffs, Iowa, several years ago.

"Can I speak to you privately a moment, Mr. Heineman?" asked Daly, tapping his man on the shoulder, and when he turned away from the women the detective continued: "I want you for that $55,000 swindle of Major W. J. Pendleton two years ago."

"I'm Heineman, all right," the man replied, "but I don't recall having been mixed up in that particular case. One of the Gondorff affairs wasn't it?"

"Well, you'll have to come along, anyway" declared Daly, and Heineman bowing jauntily, stepped to the side of the young women, exclaiming apologetically: "I am sorry I must ask you to excuse me for a few moments. Go right ahead with dinner however and if I am delayed I will meet you in our box at the threatre. There is some urgent business I must transact with these gentlemen."

Then the "Honey Grove Kid" went uncomplaining to a cell in Police Headquarters. According to the detectives he was one of the band which met Major Pendleton, a wealthy Washingtonian, with a home also at Palm Beach, and persuaded him to leave his Florida Winter resort long enough to make a fortune here. The detectives say Pendleton dropped $55,000 before the exposure of another branch of the Gondorff gang by Charles MacDonald, a wealthy builder of Camden, N. J., who posed as their victim simply to trap them, made him suspicious. Heineman has been in Europe since.

"THE FAMILY CANDY"

Around the Clock with Everyhousewife

Everyhousewife is in charge of the typical Canadian home. She is responsible for the comfort, the pleasure, the economy of the house. She runs things. Her duties are legion but none is more important than "meals." Three times a day—every day—meals must be prepared. This is her most important duty.

The family comes clamoring to breakfast. Breakfast must be a success. It must be ready on time. Things must be appetizing and attractive, so that the family gets a good start for the day. Back of a successful breakfast there must be a successful stove.

Then after a short period for sewing, sweeping and dusting, comes lunch. The stove has been idle since breakfast, but now a hot oven is wanted QUICK for biscuits. Back of a successful lunch there must be a responsive stove—a stove that jumps from a smouldering "non-consumer" to a bright and ready blaze.

The afternoon has its duties, and perhaps about four or five o'clock calls to be paid. This keeps Everyhousewife out until late sometimes. Dinner is an important meal, with roasts, steaks, soup, fish and puddings to cook. Here is responsibility for a stove! Only a stove of character can meet these responsibilities. The Gurney-Oxford is that sort of a stove.

After each meal the "Gurney-Oxford Economizer" enables Everyhousewife, by the simple turn of one handle, to dampen the fire down so that it burns practically no fuel. An opposite turn of the same handle revives the fire. This is the biggest single feature of economy and comfort any stove ever had, or can have. The grates in the Gurney-Oxford are built to burn not only coal, but air—and air is as important to a fire as to a man.

The heat from the fire completely envelops the ovens by a system of flues. The ovens are uniformly, thoroughly heated. A range that sends heat up the chimney is wasteful and extravagant and unsatisfactory to cook with. We want Everyhousewife not only to read about the Gurney-Oxford, but to see it.

Allow us to demonstrate the features that make it a stove of character, a stove that enables you to make every meal a success with the minimum of expense and time and trouble.

VERY MODISH

A street costume of green broadcloth was very simply made. That is to say, sans trimming. The long basque, kilted tunic and underskirt cut short, all combine to make a very attractive gown.

IF TORMENTED WITH CORNS

Save yourself pain, worry and distress by using the never-failing Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor. It is reliable and acts quickly.

CULINARY HINTS.

One cupful of cornmeal makes six ounces.

To keep cheese from molding or from drying, wrap it in a cloth damped with vinegar and keep in a covered dish.

A teaspoonful of grated horseradish will keep a can of milk fresh for a day or two even in the hottest weather.

If lettuce when wilted is put into a pan of cold water and set in a cool place it will become fresh and crisp.

When boiling a ham leave it in the water in which it has been boiled until it is quite cold. This will make it juicy and tender.

When cooking cabbage, turnips or onions boil at the same time vinegar with a few spices. This will destroy all vegetable odor.

When food burns in a kettle set the kettle in cold water and you will not notice any burnt taste. The stain left is easily removed with ashes and sand.

Hard boiled eggs should be plunged into cold water as soon as they are removed from the saucepan. This prevents a dark ring from appearing round the yolk.

If you wish to prevent green vegetables from boiling over drop a piece of dripping the size of a walnut into the center of them, just as they commence to boil.

VEGETABLE. DOLLS.

They Make Jolly Favors For Halloween Dinners or Parties.

Vegetable dolls are very funny and not hard to make. They may be used as favors for choosing partners at a dance or supper. Make two of a kind for this reason.

Choose small apples, turnips, potatoes, carrots, beets, parsnips and radishes. Dress them with bright bits of ribbon and colored or white paper napkins. Apples with clove eyes make bright looking, rosy-cheeked lassies peeping out from sunbonnets or broad-brimmed hats trimmed with chicken feathers.

Carrots and parsnips make fine dunces and clowns if tall fools' caps and stiff collars are supplied. Beets and radishes may be made very amusing, as a bow of ribbon may be tied to the long, hairy root, making it look like a pigtail.

Various expressions may be obtained by inking and using cloves for eyes. It is not necessary to make bodies, and if a long cape effect of paper is left the dolls will sit up well.

HOW TO USE HERBS.

Mint for meat sauces.

Angelica for flavoring cakes.

Lavender for oil and distilled water.

Sage for sausage and meat dressings.

Sweet fennel leaves in fish sauces.

Dill, the seeds to flavor pickles.

Borage leaves boiled as dandelion or spinach.

Thyme in gravies and dressings of stuffed meats.

Chives leaves for flavoring soups and salads.

Tarragon leaves for giving flavor to vinegar and pickles.

Coriander, fennel and caraway seeds for flavoring fruit sirups and cakes.

Borage, balm and catnip are useful where one has bees.

Among those having medicinal value are arnica, hops, catnip, pennyroyal, belladonna, sage, rue, horehound, marshmallow, wormwood, hyssop and peppermint.

When there is a ghost of a chance never give up until you give up the ghost.

Was Old Man Murdered?

WHITBY, Nov. 19. — No further light has been thrown on the circumstances attending the death of Geo. Hollinger, the Cherrywood farmer whose body was found tied with a heavy stone in a well on his farm on Friday afternoon.

Although deceased was of an eccentric disposition, the neighbors scout the idea of suicide, and assert their conviction that Hollinger was foully done to death for mercenary motives.

A Remarkable Tribute to

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

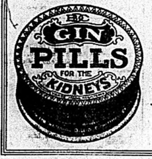
In February last, Mrs. J. P. J. Wedge of East Street, Summerside, P.E.I., wrote to a friend in Toronto and among other things said, "Gin Pills are the greatest of all Kidney remedies and a medicine which is at present doing me a world of good. They are worth their weight in gold to any sufferer". We asked permission, through a mutual friend, to publish the above extract and received the following testimonial to the great efficacity of Gin Pills.

Summerside, April 24th, 1914.

"Your letter of the 21st, to hand this evening, asking my permission to hand my letter to the National Drug & Chemical Co. You have my full permission to do so, and to them I give the liberty to publish and use my name if they wish, because Gin Pills have done for my husband and myself what no other remedy could do.

I have advised two other parties to use them; one being my Mother, who has been a great sufferer for upwards of 20 years and one box of Gin Pills cured her so as to enable her to sleep on her left side, something she could not do for many years. The doctors told her they could not cure her but could relieve her by an operation for a Floating Kidney, but on account of her age they did not think it was advisable for her to undergo. Upon my advice, she tried Gin Pills which cured her and for which she is ever ready to speak in terms of praise."

MRS. J. P. J. WEDGE.



Remember, you can TRY Gin Pills BEFORE you buy them.

If the urine shows brick dust deposits or mucus—or is hot and scalding—if you have to urinate too frequently—if there is a burning in the bladder or pain in back—get Gin Pills at once and cure yourself. Gin Pills are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 and every box carries with it our spot cash guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Sold in U. S. under the name "GINO" Pills.

The Wizard who put Music into millions of homes

AS you sit in your own home and listen to the stirring strains of a military band—or the liquid, luscious notes of a far famed singer—do you realize the thanks that you, and all other music lovers, owe to Thomas A. Edison? As you know, Mr. Edison invented sound-recording and sound-reproducing instruments. It was due to his genius that millions of homes are able to enjoy everything in music.

It was due to Mr. Edison's efforts that you—no matter where you live—may have the great artists, the famous bands, the cleverest entertainers, the brightest public speakers, right in your home.

For more than thirty six years, Mr. Edison has developed and improved the Edison Phonograph and Edison Records.

The Edison Phonograph today — with its diamond reproducing point (requiring no needles) —has a softness, a richness, a velvety smoothness, a wealth of delicate overtones, that cannot be obtained with any instrument using metal needles which must be changed with every record.

You really must hear the Edison to appreciate it to the full. Won't you come in and let us play all your favorite pieces for you? 134

FRANCE HAS SEVERAL FAMOUS CATHEDRALS

The One Destroyed at Rheims Excelled in the Matter of Age by Notre Dame in Paris

Well might the world stand aghast at Germany's crowning infamy, the destruction of Rheims Cathedral, for our Teuton foes reduced to ruins a sacred edifice which all other nations venerated. Rheims Cathedral was the Westminster Abbey of France, but although not quite so rich in historical and Royal interest, the cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris is more ancient than that of Rheims, the main building having been begun in the twelfth century. It is said that if the pillars of Notre Dame could speak they might tell the whole history of France, although the only coronation celebrated there was that of Henry VI. of England in 1431.

Perhaps the finest feature of the Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris is the Sainte Chapelle, built by St. Louis in 1245-8, for the reception of the various relics which he brought from the Holy Land. This chapel is, perhaps, the greatest existing masterpiece of Gothic art, and was restored by Napoleon III. at a cost of $250,000.

Amiens Cathedral is another of France's thirteenth-century churches, to which the world pays annual visits. This was the church which sent Ruskin into raptures, and which he and other people have described as "the finest existing mediæval structure:" its incomparable facade, galleries filled with the statues of kings, its superb windows and tapestries, and above all its beautiful choir-stalls and chapels, make the Amiens Cathedral incomparable in many respects.

Of special historical interest to British people is the cathedral of Rouen, for it was there that the heart of Richard Cœur de Lion was buried prior to its being removed to the extensive Museum of Antiquities. Another interesting fact regarding the Rouen Cathedral is that the notable south tower was built at the end of the fifteenth century with what was termed "indulgence" money, received by the church for permission to eat butter during Lent. The splendors of the south transept, its rose windows and wonderful sculpture, have excited the admiration of all lovers of the beautiful.

Neither should one forget the glorious cathedral of Chartres, built chiefly between 1194 and 1260. It is noted for its solidity as well as beauty, one of its spires—there are two—being generally regarded as the most beautiful on the continent. Like most other famous French cathedrals, it boasts some magnificent rose windows. Over 160 of the latter retain their thirteenth-century glass, forming a display of jewelled color unequalled elsewhere.

A series of magnificent sculptures of the life of Christ and the Virgin provide a fascinating sight, while the great triple porches of the transepts, covered with sculpture, are matchless.

FOUGHT GERMANS THRICE

Aged Italian Chevalier Looks Back on Life-time of War

There are not many people who can boast that they have fought in three wars against the Germans, but that is the proud boast of the Chevalier Luigi Ricci, the famous Garibaldian; and at the headquarters of his Foreign Legion in London he talked to a representative of "Answers" of his long life.

The chevalier has, for the last forty-four years, lived entirely in England, and is the leader of the Italian colony in London. He is now contemplating the publication of his memoirs, while his son, aged twenty-three, is fighting the Germans as a senior wireless operator.

Besides being an intrepid warrior this gallant old gentleman is also a great scholar, and founded the Dante Society for the study of that poet; he is also a member of the governing body of the City Polytechnic and a Professor at the University of London. Since by his extreme age he is unable to take up arms, he started the formation of the King's Foreign Legion.

"I suppose my life has been unusually full," said the veteran. "At the time of the Italian War for Independence I was at the Royal Military College, which I left in order to raise and equip a corps of Guides. That was in 1866, and I then numbered among my friends Garibaldi, Mazzini, and our great national poet, Carducci, who was my tutor.

"In 1870, during the Franco-German War, I was at Paris. I went through the siege and served as captain in the 238th Battaillon de Guerre. I was wounded at the battle of Le Bourget, and my name was mentioned in despatches.

"After the siege I came to London, where I have been ever since. It is the city that I love, in the land that I love next to Italy. It is because I love it, and because I have learned to hate Prussianism in every form, that I resolved to form my Foreign Legion.

"So great was the response from all the foreign colonies in London that we had to close our acceptances, having raised the full complement of 3,000 men and 200 officers. We have Russians, Poles, Armenians, Italians, Servians, Americans, Colonials, and Britishers in this company. In one week, from the day on which I approached the War Office, I was able to offer them these 3,000, and another British Legion, formed in France, of, at the very least, 500 men."

Fifty-six Miles on Four Biscuits

A transport column taking rations for the East Lancashires was cut out by the Germans, and the East Lancashires had to do marches of 36 and 20 miles on successive days on two biscuits per man.

"But," as one of the regiment said, "we revenged ourselves by taking a German supply column next day."

Many a man gets into trouble by trying to settle other people's troubles.

Superstitious people are disappointed if it doesn't happen.

NURSES IN BATTLE

Most people know the story of the late Miss Florence Nightingale's acceptance of probably the most responsible mission ever undertaken by a member of the gentler sex during modern times, when she set out with a small body of co-workers to bring about order and comfort in the chaos of the fever-stricken military hospitals of the Crimea.

"The Lady of the Lamp's" work has never been equalled by any other woman, but several women have distinguished themselves in war, although not on so large a scale.

When war broke out between Italy and Turkey, the Duchess of Aosta, who is a personal friend of Queen Alexandra, underwent a course of training at the Naples Hospital of Jesus and Mary, where there is a special school for nurses. In a short time she was passed as proficient, and was made head nurse of the Italian Red Cross hospital ship Memphis.

One cannot over-estimate the value of the work done by Florence Nightingale and her successors.

NEUTRAL OBSERVER MAKES BOLD PROTEST

Resigns His Commission in United States Army in Order to Speak Freely of German Barbarism

Major Louis Livingston Seaman is not only a military man, and a medical man, but a traveller and journalist of international repute. His work in the Balkans, and elsewhere in connection with the Red Cross movement has made his name familiar all over the world. He went to the front as special correspondent of the "Independent," New York, one of the liveliest weekly journals in that great city. In view of the statements written by him concerning German atrocities in Belgium, the publication of which the pro-Germans in the United States considered as a virtual breach of neutrality, Major Seaman was requested by the authorities to explain his action, as it is contrary to regulations for an officer of a neutral country to express himself definitely as a partisan in favor of either combatant.

On the day of the Zeppelin massacre at Antwerp, Major Seaman sent the following letter to President Wilson:

"My Dear Mr. President:—

"Preferring liberty of speech to military or other service where it is denied, especially when silence would be a crime against humanity, I herewith tender my resignation as a member of the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army."

The following correspondence, within the limits imposed by the censorship, hints at the pitiful sufferings of which Major Seaman has been a witness, and which impelled him to take this action:

"I am writing from the Hotel de la Paix in Ghent. I believe no city on earth has contributed more to the development of civilization than Ghent. Here it was the purpose of representatives of Great Britain and the United States to celebrate in the old Convent des Charteux the one hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Peace between England and America. A short time ago in the Royal Casino and Palais de Fete the international exhibition of flowers was held and in the Palais de Danse, the French Opera Company made gay music.

"But what a change, the Palais de Fete is now a Palais de Misere, transformed in a night. Fourteen thousand desolate peasant women and little children, refugees from the country near Louvain, Malines and Termonde, whose husbands or fathers or brothers had been butchered or driven to parts unknown, their homes pillaged and burnt, their crops destroyed, their only possessions the clothing on their backs, have been, or are now, being sheltered here.

"I have participated as an officer or observer, in eight campaigns, in almost every country in the world. But in none have I ever witnessed such exhibitions of atrocious barbarism as this war is furnishing."

DOGS IN PEACE AND WAR

Widely Used in Europe as Draught Animals—Splendid Workers

Tourists who have visited gallant little Belgium—or Holland or Germany, for that matter—during the piping times of peace have remarked on the dogs used for drawing little carts. Sometimes visitors' sympathies have gone out to them, but as a general rule they are well treated, and do not mind their work.

They draw milk carts, parcel delivery vans, and such light vehicles, and in war they drag machine guns. Curious as this may seem to us, it is not so very long ago that dogs were used for draught purposes in England.

Miss Gertrude Jekyll has told us some of the uses to which dogs were put in Surrey. Small carriers' carts were drawn by dogs, and she remembers one that used to ply regularly between Guildford and Bramley.

Fish was also carried in similar carts—a team of four finding three or four hundredweight and a driver not too much. These dog-teams travelled very quickly, and they gained on the coaches, as the latter had to stop to change horses, whereas the former made it unnecessary.

Into the Kaiser's motives for trying to grind further into the dust the little nation whom he has so deeply wronged, we need not stop to inquire. to its readers who will ever be grateful for the opportunity offered by this grand educational distribution.

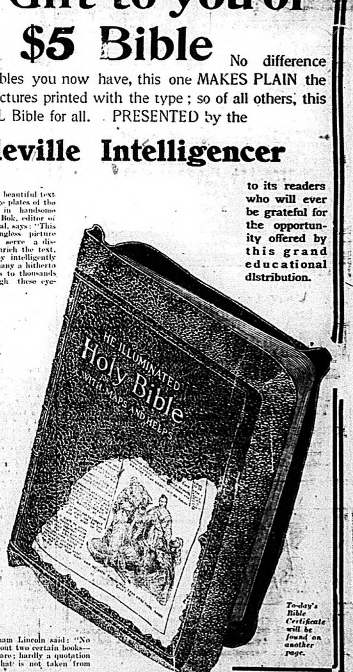
In addition to the 600 beautiful text illustrations are full page plates of the famous Tissot pictures in handsome colors. As Edward W. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, says: "This Bible is not a meaningless picture book. The illusrations serve a distinct purpose. They enrich the text, but they do more—they intelligently EXPLAIN it, so that many a hitherto obscure passage assumes to thousands a new meaning through these eye-teaching pictures."



You will enjoy this Bible, whether you belong to church or not, for its "eye-teaching" pictures make it of rare educational value to all.

This is what Abraham Lincoln said: "No library is complete without two certain books—the Bible and Shakespeare; hardly a quotation is used in literature that is not taken from one of these books."

A Salem Witch

She Was a Bonnie Lass From Scotland.

By SARAH BAXTER

One night a coach was driven upon a dock in the Firth of Forth in Scotland. A man alighted and called upon a girl to follow him.

"What are you going to do with me?" she asked.

"Come!" was his only reply.

The girl reluctantly got out of the coach. The man forcibly drew her arm through his and took her on board a ship lying beside the dock. She had been taught by rough usage that it would be useless to resist, and she accompanied the man passively across the deck and down the companionway to the cabin. There he left her and, going on deck, approached the captain, who was giving orders for preparations to sail.

"Here is £20," he said, counting out the money, "for her passage. Take her to the Massachusetts colony and leave her there."

"Is she to be turned over to any one?"

"Leave her there."

With this the speaker produced a bag, opened it sufficiently to show that it was filled with gold pieces and handed it to the captain. The latter took it, thrust it in his pocket, and he who had given it left the ship and was driven away.

Early the next morning the crew cast off from the dock and sailed out into the ocean.

"Who is the wench?" was asked on the arrival of the ship at Salem.

"A Scotch lassie," replied a woman, "who was on the ship with us—she who feared not the storm when it came, but stood out on the foredeck and talked to it."

"And to whom does she belong?"

"To no one. Some one sent her away to get rid of her."

"The lassie must go back in the ship. It is not meant that one so young should be among us without a guardian," said the people.

But the lassie did not go back in the ship because the captain would not take her. One of the women when the immigrants had been settled in their new homes gave Kitty MacAllister—such was her name—a temporary lodging until the chief citizens should decide what to do with her, for the older persons felt it necessary to get rid of her. She was an odd creature. On the voyage she had acquired the name of Stormy Petrel, so happy was she when the wind put whitecaps on the water and shrieked in the rigging. Before the voyage was ended several of the women who had grown sons whispered among themselves that she might be a witch.

KATHERINE AND COVERLEIGH COMPARED NOTES.

If this meant that she had bewitched the young men it was the truth, for they were as anxious that she should remain with them as the older ones were that she should go elsewhere. But when the young fellows began to quarrel over her it was decided that something must be done. Then the mother of one of those who had been bewitched went to the magistrate and made the following affidavit:

"During the voyage to America Katherine MacAllister when a storm raged went out on to the forecastle and, hanging on to the jib halyards, told the storm to wreck the ship. As soon as the said Katherine MacAllister had spoken the words a great blast threw the vessel on her beam ends, and she was only righted by the prayers of pious persons in the cabin.

"And this deponent further states that since the landing she (the deponent) went one moonlight night to the shore and saw the said Katherine MacAllister sailing on the water in a sieve."

Upon this affidavit Katherine was arrested while chasing butterflies and lodged in jail, or, rather, since there was no jail in the settlement, she was placed in the keeping of Deacon Padelford, he being chosen for her jailer since he had no sons for her to bewitch. Then a court was convened to try her.

There were a judge, a jury, lawyers, witnesses—indeed, all the officials and others pertaining to a court just as courts are organized today. And before this court Katherine MacAllister was tried on the accusation in accordance with the specifications laid down in the affidavit mentioned and was convicted of being a witch. Before sentence was passed upon her the judge asked her if she had anything to say in her defense.

"My home, your worship, is in Bonnie Scotland, where all maids are merry and all young men are brave. My father was a laird, and my mother was the daughter of a chief. My father was killed in battle, and my mother died of a broken heart. The good God who brought such trials on them and me gave me a cheerful heart to bear it all, since I must live. After my father and mother were taken away from me my Uncle Roderick shut me up in a room in the castle and one night put me in a coach and brought me to a ship, where he left me. What he did all this unkindness for I dinna ken. But since the good God intended that I should live through all the troubles in Bonnie Scotland I dinna think he'll let you burn me for a witch."

This speech excited the sympathy of all, and had it not been that Katherine had been duly convicted the judge might have had mercy on her. But he did what he conceived to be his duty, sentencing her to be burned at the stake the next day.

Richard Coverleigh, one of the young men whom Katherine had bewitched, heard her speech and, since the Puritans were prone to consider that they were appointed to special purposes by Providence, believed in his heart that he was commissioned to save the lassie he loved in his heart. He was a younger son of a British earl and had been sent to America that he might not disgrace his family by poverty, all the estate being entailed to his older brother. But he was more fitted for deeds of knight errantry than the commonplace duties of the peaceful settlers of a new country, though he had done some service in fighting hostile Indians.

Katherine was confined in one of the two rooms of Deacon Padelford's cabin, which served for dining room and kitchen. The fireplace was one of the olden type, very broad, and the chimney very large. Behind the cabin was a grove, and one of the trees grew so near it that its branches overhung the abode. Near midnight, when Katherine was sleeping serenely, undisturbed by the terrible ordeal in store for her on the morrow, she was suddenly awakened by a hand being clapped over her mouth.

"Be still," whispered a man's voice in her ear. "I have come to save you."

She could not have cried out if she would. The hand was soon removed, and the voice continued:

"Arise and put on your clothes. You will find under the chimney a rope with a loop. Put the loop under your arms, and when I feel by the rope that you are on it I will pull you up into a tree that overhangs the cabin."

"Who are you?" whispered Katherine.

"Ric Coverleigh."

Katherine felt for his hand and pressed it; then he left her, climbed the rope hand over hand and waited, standing on the chimney top. When Katherine had dressed, making no noise in doing so, she put the loop over her shoulders, and Coverleigh, feeling that it was caught, pulled her up to him, and, she catching to a limb of the tree above, he helped her up on it. In a few minutes both had descended the tree and stood upon the ground.

Richard Coverleigh, being fond of the water, had built himself a small boat with a single sail, and any contribution he made to the wealth of the settlement was by fishing. He had in this way gathered some £40, which he would doubtless have spent had there been anything to spend it for. With this money in his doublet he took Katherine to his boat and with muffled oars pulled out to where he caught a breeze; then, raising his sail, he entered upon the broad ocean.

Fortunately the weather was pleasant and the wind favorable for a sail to Boston, not far distant. Ric did not know what he would do when he reached Boston. He relied on the Lord to guide him. He was about entering the harbor in the morning when a ship bound for England approached. He hailed her and asked to be taken aboard, offering the captain all the money he had to carry him and his shipmate with him. The offer was accepted. Ric ran alongside the ship, and the two climbed aboard. Then the boat was turned adrift, and at the hour Katherine was to have been burned at the stake she had begun her voyage homeward.

On the ocean Katherine and Coverleigh compared notes and found that their circumstances were similar. Katherine's uncle had dispossessed her of her estate, he being next of kin and consequently heir at her death. He had given out that she had died, buried a coffin weighted with stones and shipped her to America. Coverleigh on his arrival in England found that his father had died in his bed and his brother had been killed while hunting. He took possession of the title and estate, married Katherine, then went to Scotland with her and dispossessed her uncle.

Various stories were told in Salem of Katherine's disappearance. The one that was accepted by most citizens was that she had flown up the chimney, and a farmer's boy who was out with the dawn averred that he had seen her high up above the cabin in which she had been confined riding on a broomstick.

THE STOLID ENGLISH.

How the People of Four Nations Behaved In War Crisis.

Here is the interesting narrative of a tourist who had to journey through four countries after the Austrian declaration of war upon Servia. It shows the extraordinary contrast between the English and the continental attitude in the grave crisis which has developed into general war.

"On Monday, July 27, we tried to enter the Parliament building in Vienna, but they were closed to visitors owing to the war. All newspaper offices had large crowds outside reading the telegrams posted up and waiting for more. Extra leaflets with the latest news were issued in thousands every hour or so. By evening the situation had become much graver. Mobilization was to begin on the morrow and only one train, starting at 7.55 a.m., was guaranteed for Vienna.

"By 6.30 a.m. on the following morning, the first day of the mobilization, we were in a cab on the way to the station. We saw many soldiers on their way, too, accompanied by their families.

"Over touching parting between sad-eyed pale men, weeping women and dazed children, I will draw a veil. The departure of individuals on their way to the various headquarters presents a very different sight from a regiment with a band and cheering crowds. The agonized farewells brought home one of the appalling sides of war in a way that perhaps is rare.

"I talked with some tourists on the train. They would not believe that the situation was very grave and considered the station scenes sentimentally foolish. No wonder accounts of affairs vary! Heart-rending partings occurred at all the stoppages on the line. All bridges were guarded by soldiers.

"Berlin station was a pandemonium of shouting, struggling, gesticulating masses of people who thronged every part. No porters were to be had. Woe to those who were unable to carry heavy hand luggage, or who had registered luggage. Amongst other experiences, we were all turned out of the train at the Dutch frontier, and had to get into a Dutch train. Rumors of non-starting boats did not add to our peace of mind.

"Endless illustrations of folly and thoughtlessness occurred. One was that practically everyone except ourselves had omitted to bring provisions for the journey; another was of people who had left England only a week ago with things in the state they were, and then regretting waste of tickets, money, time, etc. We reached Rotterdam shortly after noon on Sunday. The town was swarming with Dutch soldiers, mostly drunk—a disgusting sight, and a great contrast to the Austrian, Hungarian and German men. The bank was crowded with the usual withdrawers of money. The money exchange bureau would give nothing but paper money, and the shops would sell nothing for paper. This threw travelers into endless difficulties. We overcame them by first eating our lunch at a restaurant, and then proffering paper in payment. It was that or nothing, so it was accepted, and we got our coin as change.

"About 1.30 p.m. on Sunday we reached Liverpool street station, London. Where were the excited crowds seizing newspapers and discussing war? We saw only Bank-Holiday-makers reading novelettes! The contrast was extraordinary. Truly, the English are a strange nation!"

Zeppelins Have Bomb Cage.

The method used by Zeppelin airships in dropping bombs has been described by an English refugee who has arrived in London from Belgium. The dirigible hovers over its objective at a sufficient altitude to keep it out of range of the enemy's guns. At the same time, to get a better aim, it lowers a steel cage attached to a steel wire rope 2,000 or 3,000 feet long.

This cage is divided into compartments, and it carries one man, whose duty it is to throw down the bombs. The cage is sufficiently strong to make rifle fire against it ineffective, and because of its small size and the fact that it is kept constantly in motion it is very difficult for heavy guns to hit it.

Human History.

There is no such thing as human history. Nothing can be more profoundly, sadly true. The annals of mankind have never been written, never can be written. We have a leaf or two torn from the great book of human fate as it flutters in the storm winds ever sweeping across the earth. We decipher them as we best can with purblind eyes and endeavor to learn their mystery as we float along to the abyss, but it is all confused babble, hieroglyphics of which the key is lost.—Motley.

This One Did It.

"Tell me, honestly," said the novel reader to the novel writer, "did you ever see a woman who stood and tapped the floor impatiently with her toe for several moments as you describe?"

"Yes," was the thoughtful reply, "I did once."

"Who was she?"

"She's a clog dancer." — London Tit-Bits.

Fun In the Family.

"See, darling," and Mrs. Justwed held up for her husband's gaze three mirrors arranged so as to give as many reflections, "I can get a triple view of myself."

"Hump!" gurgled her brute of a man, struggling with his collar. "You seem to be quite popular with yourself!"

Feeds Out Rubber.

To keep the eraser perfectly clean, it is now supplied in a small case with a portion of the rubber fed as desired from one end.

By a curious old law dating back to 1779, all the grapes left on the vines after the harvest at Beziers, France, go to the poor, but no attention is paid to this law.

Captured While Waiting to Stock German Cruiser

The Norwegian and American Steamer Crews Brought To New York

BERWICK TOOK PRIZES

Hamburg-American Liner Spreewald, of 10,000 Tons, Was Most Valuable Vessel Seized in West Indies

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The first news of the activities of the British cruiser Berwick in capturing merchant vessels in the Caribbean Sea was brought to New York today by the Quebec Steamship Guiana, which had on board the crews of the American steamer Lorenzo and the Norwegian steamer Thor, which was captured while waiting to coal the German cruiser Karlshuhe. Captain Griffiths and his crew of 33 men, belonging to the Lorenzo, had been warned not to talk but the Thur's men were not so reticent. Carl Hunn was the captain, with Peter Lavsen first mate, and Joachism Olsen second mate. The junior officer told of the Thor's experiences. He said that both vessels were left under guard in the harbor of St. Lucia, and with them the ten-thousand-ton Hamburg-American liner Spreewald, which was the most valuable prize captured in the West Indies.

"We left Newport News on August 4," said Olsen, "with 2,000 tons of coal and 200 tons of stores in the way of oil salt beef, flour, and other stores. The Thor cleared for Fray Bentos, near Buenos Aires, but after passing the Virginia Capes, we headed for the Crooked Island passage in the Bahamas, and we realized that our mission was to wait for one of the German cruisers.

"Shortly after our arrival there, we were joined by that Lorenbo and the Neckar, which was loaded with wines and delicacies of all kinds from Cuba. Finally the Spreewald steamed up and took charge of the small squadron.

"We cruised about the Bahamas for three weeks," Olsen went on, "and then sailed to the eastward and met at a rendezvous about 200 miles east of the Island of Trinidad. The Necker supplied us with extra provisions and we had to replenish the bunkers from the coal stowed in the forward hold. Finally the Neckar steamed back to Cuba for more stores, as none of the German warships had been sighted. On September 9, the Berwick came up from the south, fired a blank shot across our bows and sent a boat with an armored crew in charge of an officer, who examined the ship and her papers and put us under seizure. The prize crew was left on board and the Berwick crew saw the Thor well on her way to St. Lucia, and then went back to look for the spreewald and the Lorenzo. These vessels she brought into the harbor three days later, with the British ensign flying at their mast heads."

The officers of the Thor said that they were well treated by the British at St. Lucia, where they had to wait for the Guiana. Captain Hunn will go before the Norwegian Consul tomorrow and report the loss of his ship and will then return with his crew to Bergen.

Captain Griffiths of the Lorenzo will also report tomorrow to the Porto Rico Steamship Company, to which company the Lorenzo was chartered. Judging from the manner in which the preparations had been made for sending of supplies to the German warships in the West Indies, it was evident, shipping experts said, that matters were well in hand before the war started.

Eighteen of the passengers of the Bamport and Holt liner Vandyck, who were on board when she was captured by the Karlsruhe came on the Guiana from Barbados.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT ST. ANDREWS CHURCH

Able and Appropriate Discourses by Rev. A. McClurg M. A., of Toronto--Special Music by the Large Chorus Choir--The Spacious Auditorium Packed to the Doors

Anniversary services were held in St. Andrews, Presbyterian church yesterday, and large congregations were present. The preacher for the day was the Rev. A. McClurg, M.A., pastor of Cowan Avenue Presbyterian Church, Toronto, and his discourses were much appreciated. In the evening the Rev. gentleman, after the usual devotional exercises, delivered his sermon, taking as the basis of his remarks a portions of the 9th verse of the 9th chapter of St. Matthew, "Jesus saw a man."

There is a legion, telling of Jesus, passing along on a highway, accompanied by a large crowd, and seeing a dead dog lying on the roadside. Those with Him said it was only a dog, but Jesus saw the animal had beautifully white teeth. He [illegible] something in the dead dog wh[illegible]ed to His sympathy. Matth[illegible]ng at the seat of customs, a[illegible]ltitude, who were with Jesu[illegible] him, owing to his position, [illegible]ore than a dead dog. His p[illegible]considered dishonorable, a[illegible] of oppression. Jesus passe[illegible] and saw the man, and ha[illegible] for him. The Indians, wh[illegible] our western plains had grea[illegible] and instinct, knowing by im[illegible] even on the grassy plains, w[illegible] how many had passed by. Th[illegible] trained their vision to that end, [illegible] our vision so keen. A great many [illegible]ple have poor eyesight when it cam[illegible] the virtues and possibilities of [illegible] neighbors. We see their faults, a[illegible] their short comings, and can see nothing else. We have trouble in seeing in them virtues, but not so with Jesus. The woman at the well of Jacob was drawing water at the 6th hour, an unseemly hour, at the hot noon time. She met Jesus at the well, and He spoke to her and drank from her pitcher. He spoke to her of the water of eternal life. He saw the test in that woman, which others could not conceive. Jesus saw Matthew, and because He saw him, and spake to him, he arose and followed Jesus. What a more beautiful world this would be, if we would but help lift up men and women, who have fallen. Jesus lifted all up, that He came in contact with, and they followed Him. His message was, "My little Childen Love one another." If we had more of His spirit, we could reach forth and lift up more men and women, for whom He died. What a wonderful influence he had. Jesus saw men because he sought for them. He came to call sinners, not the righteous to repentance. Jesus loved us, so that He gave his life for mankind. Jesus saw a man, and straightway Matthew, Peter and John followed after Him. It makes all the difference in a man's life, the estimation we have of that individual. Give a man a cold shoulder and he will go down. Help that man, and encourage him and the result will be he will rise in life, and also in your estimation. Jesus showed men that He expected them for His service. He looked for men that He might help them. He sought for men in order that He could show them there was a Saviour, who could save them. He made an Apostle [illegible] Matthew, and that was His mis[illegible]on when He saw him. If we only [illegible] more of that loving spirit of our [illegible]ior, we could see [illegible]kind, and we [illegible]d help men and women, to rise to [illegible]her plane and have them redeem[illegible]f we only come to Him he will [illegible]e us in the image of God. May [illegible]d us all in His search.

[illegible]ring the service the choir rendered [illegible]ecial an appropriate music. The a[illegible], "Praise Ye the Lord," was exce[illegible]y rendered. Mrs. A. P. Allen san[illegible] Babylon," in her usual sweet and [illegible]ective manner and the male quart[illegible]ete, composed of Messrs. Dulmagen Stallworthy, Brown and Wrightmyer, sang, "While the Years are Rolling By."

Canadian Press Special Despatches

BRITISH AIR RAIDS ANGER THE KAISER

THE HAGUE, Nov. 23.—Reports from Berlin say that the British air-raid of Freidrichshafen has caused a terrible uneasiness mingled with anger throughout Germany.. The Kaiser's headquarters were particularly infurlated over this magnificent feat. There is good reason to believe that the damage done by the British bombs was far greater than the Wolff Press Bureau admits.

GAINING GROUND IN THE FOREST

LONDON Nov. 23.—An official statement issued today at Berlin claims that the Germans are gaining ground in the forest of Argonne step by step, wresting one trench after another, and point support after another from the French.

The coast artillery at Nieuport drove off a British squadron, which approached shore twice. The appearance of Russian re-inforcements has postponed the decision of the battle in Poland.

JAPANESE READY FOR EUROPEAN FIELD

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Arthur Diosy, founder of the Japan Society, says that the Japanese Army is in a complete sate of readiness and if the Allies think it necessary Japan can supply a large number of highly trained and admirably equipped army for service in Europe.. it would be easy to ship half million men to Europe by Russian railways and by transport.. . . . .

GERMANS MAINTAINING NAVAL STATION

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 23.—It is declared that the Germans have been maintaining a naval station outside of Valparaiso, where their vessels have been coaling and provisioning.. The Chilean Government are said to be determined to break this up, even at the cost of war with Germany.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE PRUSSIAN TOWN

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Petrograd reports the capture by the Russians of the town of Gumbinnon in the northern part of East Prussia, southeast of Koenigsberg.

BRITISH DESTROYER TAKES TWO GERMAN OFFICERS

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(Special)—The Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company sends the following: "A British destroyer has captured a Turkish sailing vessel, on which were two German officers in disguise. They were proceeding to Smyrna.

"An Anglo-French squadron fired on some Turkish torpedo boats in the Dardanelles, but the latter disappeared."

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES ASKED TO SUBSCRIBE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—H. F. Baker, keeper of the lighthouse at Clapperton Island, in Georgian Bay, upon receiving a circular asking all Government employees to subscribe a day's pay to the Patriotic Fund, replied that his salary was too small to make that worth while. He enclosed five dollars from his wife and family and directed that ten dollars be deducted from his quarterly salary.

DE WET HAS ESCAPED AGAIN SONS AND MEN ARE PRISONERS

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(Special.)—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Pretoria says:—

"It is officially announced that General De Wet's rapidly dwindling rebel commando became surrounded by loyal forces in the vicinity of Boshof, on the Vaal River. General De Wet succeeded in escaping with only 25 men. The remainder of his force surrendered."

An earlier despatch, dated Cape Town, said:—Two sons of General Christian De Wet the rebel leader have surrendered to the authorities in Cape Town.

Young Man Disappears

Earl Breze Left a Note for His Landlady--Saying He Was Going to do Away With Himself

Fred Breze, a boarder with Mrs. Clarke, 464 Albert street, Kingston, has disappeared and cannot be located. Breze is between twenty-two and twenty-three years of age, is about five feet four inches in height, and weighs about 150 pounds, his complexion is rather fair and his hair is brown and curly. Very early Thursday morning he packed his suit-case with his extra suit and at about 5.30 o'clock walked out of the house. In the morning he did not appear for breakfast as the usual hour, Mrs. Clarke called and finally entered the vacant room. On the bureau was a note to the effect that her late boarder was leaving "for ever" and she need never look for him again as he was going to do away with himself. He left his watch and a quantity of clothes in a trunk.

The disappearance has caused a great disappearance as the young man was well-known around the city.

High Tides Caused Floods at Quebec

Cellars in Lower Section of Town Inundated, And Much Damage Done

QUEBEC, Nov. 21.—To-day's extraordinary high tide caused much inconvenience and damage throughout the lower section of the city, many cellars being flooded.

The city lights were extinguished for a short period and on investigation it was discovered that the flooding of the boiler room of the Dorchester Electric Company necessitated the shutting down of one of the machines as a precautionary measure.

The tide rose 18 inches over the sheds on the breakwater, and the Second Contingent soldiers in the immigration buildings were marooned.

Along the waterfront there were several escapes from drowning, and many frunaces in lower town had to be extinguished for fear of explosion.

Down at Rimouski waves washed over the wharves, and several houses were surrounded by water, while trains on the I.C.R. were delayed owing to the mining of the embankment.

Kingston Miscreant Busy With Pen

A Mother Told in Anonymous Letter That Her Son is Shot as a Spy

KINGSTON, Nov. 22.—One of the most contemptible and malicious acts perpetrated in the city for a long time was brought to the notice of Col. Hemming this morning, when a woman called at his office and showed an anonymous letter which she had received stating that her son, who is a member of the first contingent, had been shot as a spy. The letter, which was posted in Kingston, said that the young man, a member of the R.C.H.A. has been shot—and here is the peculiar part—"by a German ans a spy on Salisbury Plain." It concluded "Don't worry, for it won't do you any good," and was signed "One Who Knows."

Col. Hemming assured the anxious mother that the statements were false and that the letter was obviously the work of some one who desired to cause her anxiety and trouble.

LIEUTENANT GEORGE WILLIAMSON IS DEAD

(Canadian Press Despatch)

MONTREAL, Nov. 23. — Lieut. George Williamson, reservist, a member of the Montreal legal firm of Smith, Markey, Skinner, Pugsley and Hyde, has died of wounds while serving with the West Riding Regiment in France.

SHOT AND KILLED BY YOUNG DAUGHTER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—Mrs. J. B. Roy was this morning shot and killed by her fifteen year old daughter. The girl was playing with a revolver she had borrowed from a boarder.

GERMAN BATTERIES ARE SILENCED BY FRENCH

Latter Capture Heights of Ornes, Near Verdun--Enemy Destroys Public Buildings in Ypres--Five Attacks Repulsed--Severe Weather, With Heavy Snow Fall

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(Special.)—French forces have captured the heights of Ornes, near Verdun and silenced two German batteries, according to official despatches to the French Embassy.

German Guns Thundering.

Paris Noc. 23.—The following official communication was issued last night.

"To-day there was a violent bombardment of Ypres, during which the market-place and the Town Hall were destroyed.

"In the region of Soissons and Vailly there was rather strong cannonading.

"There is nothing to report from the other parts of the front."

The following official communication was given out in Paris this afternoon:

"The day of the 21st was calm upon the whole front. In Belgium as in the region from Arras to the Oise, there were only intermittent cannonades. Our artillery evinced general more activity than that of the enemy. Our batteries succeeded in demolishing many lines of German trenches. The enemy worked elsewhere to construct new ones in the rear.

"The day was equally calm upon the Aisne, in the Champagne, as well as in the Argonne, upon the heights of the Meuse and in the Vosges."

Five Attacks Repulsed

The following official statement was issued Saturday night:

"The day has been very quiet. There has been nothing of interest to report, except that in the Woevre district, in the Eparges, five German attacks were executed in mass in the space of two hours and were stopped abruptly by the fire of our artillery."

Severe Weather Prevails.

Freezing weather has set in throughout the length of the battle zone in France and Belgium, the temperature yesterday varying between 25 and 28 degrees above zero, Fahrenheit.

Snow is falling, especially in northern France and also in Vosges mountains, and also at Marseilles.

SECURE ANOTHER SHIP FOR BELGIAN RELIEF

Doric Begins Loading At Once at Halifax With Food and Clothing

MONTREAL, Nov. 21.—The relief work for the victims of the war in Belgium has secured free the collier "Doric" which will begin loading at Halifax today and will sail for Rotterdam about November 25th with over 200 carloads of food and clothing.

The last shipment made by the Central executive committee from Montreal for this steamer consists of 20 carloads of miscellaneous goods which left yesterday morning over I. C. R.

With the goods shipped by S.S. Tremorvah," on October 29th, which goods have safely arrived at Rotterdam, the total shipments made by Canada will amount to more than 7,600 tons at this date.

Besides the following separate shipments have been made from Montreal:

On October 10th, by S.S. Ascania, 50 lrage cases.

On October 22nd, by S.S. Campanello, 51 large cases.

On October 23rd, by S.S. Englishman, 78 large cases.

On October 28th, by S.S. Irishman, 49 large cases.

On October 31st by S. S. Manchester Corporation, 104 large cases, 100 bales of rice.

On November 5th, by S.S. Hesperian, 2083 bags potatoes.

On November 6th, by S.S. Megan- 50 large cases.

On November 19th, by S.S. Grampian, 75 large cases.

Excepting the shipment by Hesperian, these remittances are mainly of clothing sorted and repacked in the Montreal storing rooms of the Central executive committee.

The Central executive committee makes again an urgent appeal for donations in money with which wheat will be bought. The Central executive committee is negotiating for the chartering of 4,000 to 5,000 tons of space in one or two steamers. The chartering and the sailing of the steamer or steamers wil be announced in due time. On account of the early frost no more donations of perishable goods are required.

GLYCERINE EXPLOSION AT POWDER MILLS

(Candian Press Despatch)

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 23.—A nitroglycerine explosion at the Etna Powder Mills, four miles from Garry, Ind., this morning, broke hundreds of windows and put the electric lighting plant out of commission in that city, besides wrecking several farm houses. Two hundred employees were warned of the probability of an explosion by a leak in the oil tank, and fled to safety.

The average married man considers his wife's relatives about as important as empty tomato cans.

KAISER'S ARMY IN U. S.

New Yorker Says He Has 300,000 Men There

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The American says: "Germany has six army corps, equivalent to 300,000 officers and men, in this country already, and if she wins the present war, it will be our turn next."

Such was the statement made by John R. Drexel of this city, when he returned from Europe to-day on the White Star Line steamer Adriatic. He has spent most of the last two months in Viche, France, and declared he had a splendid opportunity to see the German fighting fachine at work.

"It is a wonderful machine, and is being very cleverly handled by the most astute group of men in the world, the German General Staff," he continued: "It is up to this government to take immediate steps to increase the strength of her standing army and to double our fleet.

"My brother, Anthony T. Drexel, is fighting with a French regiment. He was in London two days before I left, having brought home Lady Sarah Wilson, whose husband had been killed at Aisne. Lady Sarah up to that time had been with the Red Cross. Her husband's death and the terrible weather on the continent were responsible for her prostration.

"You are going to hear of more atrocities before the war is over, and some of them will be more horrible than anyone ever imagined.

WEDS ADOPTED DAUGHTER

Girl of 17 Mistress of Mansion She Entered as Foster-Child.

Seventeen-year-old Dorothy Breding, the pretty foster daughter of Severin A. Breding, a wealthy resident of Flatbush, whose friends have been the school children of the neighborhood, is now the mistress of the fine old homestead at 1,712 Ditmas Avenue. The girl, scarcely more than a child, was married in Chicago last march to Breding, who is forty years her senior and whose first wife, Dorothy's adopted mother, divorced him only a year ago.

News of the marriage has been gossiped about Flatbush for some weeks, but only yesterday was it admitted. Breding is on the Pacific coast traveling as a representative of the American Lawyers Company of 320 Broadway, Manhattan, and young Mrs. Breding is keeping house against his homecoming.

MORE CANADIAN DOCTORS ARE GOING TO FRANCE

BUSTARD CAMP, Salisbury, Nov. 23.—(Special.)—Fifteen Canadian doctors are leaving on Monday for France. They are:—

Lieut.-Col. W. A. Scott, Lieut.-Col. R. D. Rudolf, Major P. Goldsmith, Captains C. E. Cole, P. R. Menzies, J. C. Calhoun, G. R. Philp and W. L. C. McBeth, of Toronto.

Captains W. Bethune and M. V. Leslie, both of Hamilton.

Capt. W. H. Tytler of Guelph.

Capt. McKay of Montreal.

Major R. L. Gardner, Captains W. P. Dillon and N. MacLeod of Ottawa.

All the doctors named belong to No. 2 General Hospital of the Canadian expeditionary force. The hospital is commanded by Lieut.-Col. J. W. Bridges.

The First Canadian Navy List Contains Interesting Items

Ships and Commanding Officers of The Royal Canadian Navy

NEW SUBMARINES

Are Under Command of Lieut. St. V. Keyes and Bertrem Jones

OTTAWA, Nov. 20—The first "Canadian navy list" was published today by the Naval Service Department, and contains some interesting information relative to the ships of the Royal Canadian Navy. The flag officers are: Vice-Admiral Charles E. Kingsmill, director of the Naval Service; and Rear Admiral Wm. O. Story, R.N., superintendent of the Esquimalt Deck Yards.

The ships belonging to the Canadian Navy are the Diana, shore establishment at Halifax; the Niobe, a cruiser of 11,000 tons; the Rainbow, a light cruiser of 7,000 tons; the Shearwater, a sloop of 980 tons, at Esquimalt; and the Shearwater II., shore establishment.

There are thirteen Canadian fleet auxiliaries. The two submarines bought just before the opening of the war for the Pacific Coast waters are named "C.C. 1" and "C.C. 2." The former is in command of Lieut. Adriair St. V. Keyes, who is also named as commander of the submarine flotilla; while the other is in command of Lieut. Bertram E. Jones.

WAR WILL END WHEN ALLIES WIN

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(Special.)—Attorney-General Sir John Simon said in a recruiting speech yesterday: "I will tell you a secret with the full authority of my colleagues in the Ministry. I will tell you when the war is going to end, not approximately, but exactly. The war is going to end on that day when we and our allies have accomplished the purpose on which we set out. This is not only to right the wrongs of the uphappy Belgians; for righted these wrongs shall be, not only to restore respect for sacred European obligations, as it shall be restored, but to crush that hateful spirit of Prussian militarism, which is a menace to Europe worse than war; by crushing which we shall confer lasting benefit not only on ourselves, not only upon the small nations of Europe, but on that great and powerful community, the German people themselves."

CANADIANS IN BRITAIN GAVE CONTINGENT FUND

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—According to a statement from a well-informed source here, there is a general misconception prevailing with regard to the fund raised in England to provide comforts for the Canadian expeditionary force. The suggestion is made that the raising of this fund places an additional burden upon the people of Great Britain, and that it is work that ought to be done in Canada. The explanation given here is that the fund has been raised by Canadians. The sum mentioned tallies with the amount collected in England by the Canadian War Contingent Association, an organization of Canadians. The acting High Commissioner, Hon. Geo. Perley, is connected with this association, which draws its resources from Canadians resident in the Old Country. It is thus a thoroughly Canadian movement.

Captured While Waiting to Stock German Cruiser

The Norwegian and American Steamer Crews Brought To New York

BERWICK TOOK PRIZES

Hamburg-American Liner Spreewald, of 10,000 Tons, Was Most Valuable Vessel Seized in West Indies

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The first news of the activities of the British cruiser Berwick in capturing merchant vessels in the Caribbean Sea was brought to New York today by the Quebec Steamship Guiana, which had on board the crews of the American steamer Lorenzo and the Norwegian steamer Thor, which was captured while waiting to coal the German cruiser Karlshuhe. Captain Griffiths and his crew of 33 men, belonging to the Lorenzo, had been warned not to talk but the Thur's men were not so reticent. Carl Hunn was the captain, with Peter Lavsen first mate, and Joachism Olsen second mate. The junior officer told of the Thor's experiences. He said that both vessels were left under guard in the harbor of St. Lucia, and with them the ten-thousand-ton Hamburg-American liner Spreewald, which was the most valuable prize captured in the West Indies.

"We left Newport News on August 4," said Olsen, "with 2,000 tons of coal and 200 tons of stores in the way of oil salt beef, flour, and other stores. The Thor cleared for Fray Bentos, near Buenos Aires, but after passing the Virginia Capes, we headed for the Crooked Island passage in the Bahamas, and we realized that our mission was to wait for one of the German cruisers.

"Shortly after our arrival there, we were joined by that Lorenbo and the Neckar, which was loaded with wines and delicacies of all kinds from Cuba. Finally the Spreewald steamed up and took charge of the small squadron.

"We cruised about the Bahamas for three weeks," Olsen went on, "and then sailed to the eastward and met at a rendezvous about 200 miles east of the Island of Trinidad. The Necker supplied us with extra provisions and we had to replenish the bunkers from the coal stowed in the forward hold. Finally the Neckar steamed back to Cuba for more stores, as none of the German warships had been sighted. On September 9, the Berwick came up from the south, fired a blank shot across our bows and sent a boat with an armored crew in charge of an officer, who examined the ship and her papers and put us under seizure. The prize crew was left on board and the Berwick crew saw the Thor well on her way to St. Lucia, and then went back to look for the spreewald and the Lorenzo. These vessels she brought into the harbor three days later, with the British ensign flying at their mast heads."

The officers of the Thor said that they were well treated by the British at St. Lucia, where they had to wait for the Guiana. Captain Hunn will go before the Norwegian Consul tomorrow and report the loss of his ship and will then return with his crew to Bergen.

Captain Griffiths of the Lorenzo will also report tomorrow to the Porto Rico Steamship Company, to which company the Lorenzo was chartered. Judging from the manner in which the preparations had been made for sending of supplies to the German warships in the West Indies, it was evident, shipping experts said, that matters were well in hand before the war started.

Eighteen of the passengers of the Bamport and Holt liner Vandyck, who were on board when she was captured by the Karlsruhe came on the Guiana from Barbados.

DE WET HAS ESCAPED AGAIN SONS AND MEN ARE PRISONERS

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(Special.)—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Pretoria says:—

"It is officially announced that General De Wet's rapidly dwindling rebel commando became surrounded by loyal forces in the vicinity of Boshof, on the Vaal River. General De Wet succeeded in escaping with only 25 men. The remainder of his force surrendered."

An earlier despatch, dated Cape Town, said:—Two sons of General Christian De Wet the rebel leader have surrendered to the authorities in Cape Town.

Several of General De Wet's chief officers, together with most of his supporters to the west of the railway line, surrendered at the same time.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT ST. ANDREWS CHURCH

Able and Appropriate Discourses by Rev. A. McClurg M. A., of Toronto--Special Music by the Large Chorus Choir--The Spacious Auditorium Packed to the Doors

Anniversary services were held in St. Andrews, Presbyterian church yesterday, and large congregations were present. The preacher for the day was the Rev. A. McClurg, M.A., pastor of Cowan Avenue Presbyterian Church, Toronto, and his discourses were much appreciated. In the evening the Rev. gentleman, after the usual devotional exercises, delivered his sermon, taking as the basis of his remarks a portions of the 9th verse of the 9th chapter of St. Matthew, "Jesus saw a man."

There is a legion, telling of Jesus, passing along on a highway, accompanied by a large crowd, and seeing a dead dog lying on the roadside. Those with Him said it was only a dog, but Jesus saw the animal had beautifully white teeth. He saw something in the dead dog which appealed to His sympathy. Matthew was sitting at the seat of customs, and the multitude, who were with Jesus looked upon him, owing to his position, as nothing more than a dead dog. His position was considered dishonorable, and an aged of oppression. Jesus passed that way and saw the man, and had compassion for him. The Indians, who were on our western plains had great eyesight, and instinct, knowing by impressions, even on the grassy plains, who and how many had passed by. They had trained their vision to that end, but is our vision so keen. A great many people have poor eyesight when it came to the virtues and possibilities of our neighbors. We see their faults, and their short comings, and can see nothing else. We have trouble in seeing in them virtues, but not so with Jesus. The woman at the well of Jacob was drawing water at the 6th hour, an unseemly hour, at the hot noon time. She met Jesus at the well, and He spoke to her and drank from her pitcher. He spoke to her of the water of eternal life. He saw the best in that woman, which others could not conceive. Jesus saw Matthew, and because He saw him, and spake to him, he arose and followed Jesus. What a more beautiful world this would be, if we would but help lift up men and women, who have fallen. Jesus lifted all up, that He came in contact with, and they followed Him. His message was, "My little Childen Love one another." If we had more of His spirit, we could reach forth and lift up more men and women, for whom He died. What a wonderful influence he had. Jesus saw men because he sought for them. He came to call sinners, not the righteous to repentance. Jesus loved us, so that He gave his life for mankind. Jesus saw a man, and straightway Matthew, Peter and John followed after Him. It makes all the difference in a man's life, the estimation we have of that individual. Give a man a cold shoulder and he will go down. Help that man, and encourage him and the result will be he will rise in life, and also in your estimation. Jesus showed men that He expected them for His service. He looked for men that He might help them. He sought for men in order that He could show them there was a Saviour, who could save them. He made an Apostle of Matthew, and that was His mission when He saw him. If we only had more of that loving spirit of our Savior, we could see behind, and we could help men and women, to rise to a higher plane and have them redeemed. If we only come to Him he will create us in the image of God. May He find us all in His search.

During the service the choir rendered special an appropriate music. The anthem, "Praise Ye the Lord," was excellently rendered. Mrs. A. P. Allen sang "Babylon," in her usual sweet and effective manner and the male quarteete, composed of Messrs. Dulmagen Stallworthy, Brown and Wrightmyer, sang, "While the Years are Rolling By."

FROM THE WAR ZONE

Canadian Press Special Despatches

BRITISH AIR RAIDS ANGER THE KAISER

THE HAGUE, Nov. 23.—Reports from Berlin say that the British air-raid of Friedrichshafen has caused a terrible uneasiness mingled with anger throughout Germany.. The Kaiser's headquarters were particularly infuriated over this magnificent feat. There is good reason to believe that the damage done by the British bombs was far greater than the Wolff Press Bureau admits.

GAINING GROUND IN THE FOREST

LONDON Nov. 23.—An official statement issued today at Berlin claims that the Germans are gaining ground in the forest of Argonne step by step, wresting one trench after another, and point support after another from the French.

The coast artillery at Nieuport drove off a British squadron, which approached shore twice. The appearance of Russian re-inforcements has postponed the decision of the battle in Poland.

JAPANESE READY FOR EUROPEAN FIELD

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Arthur Diosy, founder of the Japan Society, says that the Japanese Army is in a complete sate of readiness and if the Allies think it necessary Japan can supply a large number of highly trained and admirably equipped army for service in Europe.. It would be easy to ship half million men to Europe by Russian railways and by transport.. . . . .

GERMANS MAINTAINING NAVAL STATION

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 23.—It is declared that the Germans have been maintaining a naval station outside of Valparaiso, where their vessels have been coaling and provisioning.. The Chilean Government are said to be determined to break this up, even at the cost of war with Germany.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE PRUSSIAN TOWN

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Petrograd reports the capture by the Russians of the town of Gumbinnon in the northern part of East Prussia, southeast of Koenigsberg.

BRITISH DESTROYER TAKES TWO GERMAN OFFICERS

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(Special)—The Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company sends the following: "A British destroyer has captured a Turkish sailing vessel, on which were two German officers in disguise. They were proceeding to Smyrna.

"An Anglo-French squadron fired on some Turkish torpedo boats in the Dardanelles, but the latter disappeared."

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES ASKED TO SUBSCRIBE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—H. F. Baker, keeper of the lighthouse at Clapperton Island, in Georgian Bay, upon receiving a circular asking all Government employees to subscribe a day's pay to the Patriotic Fund, replied that his salary was too small to make that worth while. He enclosed five dollars from his wife and family and directed that ten dollars be deducted from his quarterly salary.

Young Man Disappears

Earl Brezee Left a Note for His Landlady--Saying He Was Going to do Away With Himself

Fred Brezee, a boarder with Mrs. Clarke, 464 Albert street, Kingston, has disappeared and cannot be located. Brezee is between twenty-two and twenty-three years of age, is about five feet four inches in height, and weighs about 150 pounds, his complexion is rather fair and his hair is brown and curly. Very early Thursday morning he packed his suit-case with his extra suit and at about 5.30 o'clock walked out of the house. In the morning he did not appear for breakfast as the usual hour, Mrs. Clarke called and finally entered the vacant room. On the bureau was a note to the effect that her late boarder was leaving "for ever" and she need never look for him again as he was going to do away with himself. He left his watch and a quantity of clothes in a trunk.

The disappearance has caused a great disappearance as the young man was well-known around the city.

High Tides Caused Floods at Quebec

Cellars in Lower Section of Town Inundated, And Much Damage Done

QUEBEC, Nov. 21.—To-day's extraordinary high tide caused much inconvenience and damage throughout the lower section of the city, many cellars being flooded.

The city lights were extinguished for a short period and on investigation it was discovered that the flooding of the boiler room of the Dorchester Electric Company necessitated the shutting down of one of the machines as a precautionary measure.

The tide rose 18 inches over the sheds on the breakwater, and the Second Contingent soldiers in the immigration buildings were marooned.

Along the waterfront there were several escapes from drowning, and many frunaces in lower town had to be extinguished for fear of explosion.

Down at Rimouski waves washed over the wharves, and several houses were surrounded by water, while trains on the I.C.R. were delayed owing to the mining of the embankment.

Kingston Miscreant Busy With Pen

A Mother Told in Anonymous Letter That Her Son is Shot as a Spy

KINGSTON, Nov. 22.—One of the most contemptible and malicious acts perpetrated in the city for a long time was brought to the notice of Col. Hemming this morning, when a woman called at his office and showed an anonymous letter which she had received stating that her son, who is a member of the first contingent, had been shot as a spy. The letter, which was posted in Kingston, said that the young man, a member of the R.C.H.A. has been shot—and here is the peculiar part—"by a German ans a spy on Salisbury Plain." It concluded "Don't worry, for it won't do you any good," and was signed "One Who Knows."

Col. Hemming assured the anxious mother that the statements were false and that the letter was obviously the work of some one who desired to cause her anxiety and trouble.

LIEUTENANT GEORGE WILLIAMSON IS DEAD

MONTREAL, Nov. 23. — Lieut. George Williamson, reservist, a member of the Montreal legal firm of Smith, Markey, Skinner, Pugsley and Hyde, has died of wounds while serving with the West Riding Regiment in France.

SHOT AND KILLED BY YOUNG DAUGHTER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—Mrs. J. B. Roy was this morning shot and killed by her fifteen year old daughter. The girl was playing with a revolver she had borrowed from a boarder.

GERMAN BATTERIES ARE SILENCED BY FRENCH

Latter Capture Heights of Ornes, Near Verdun--Enemy Destroys Public Buildings in Ypres--Five Attacks Repulsed--Severe Weather, With Heavy Snow Fall

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(Special.)—French forces have captured the heights of Ornes, near Verdun and silenced two German batteries, according to official despatches to the French Embassy.

German Guns Thundering.

Paris Noc. 23.—The following official communication was issued last night.

"To-day there was a violent bombardment of Ypres, during which the market-place and the Town Hall were destroyed.

"In the region of Soissons and Vailly there was rather strong cannonading.

"There is nothing to report from the other parts of the front."

The following official communication was given out in Paris this afternoon:

"The day of the 21st was calm upon the whole front. In Belgium as in the region from Arras to the Oise, there were only intermittent cannonades. Our artillery evinced general more activity than that of the enemy. Our batteries suceeded in demolishing many lines of German trenches. The enemy worked elsewhere to construct new ones in the rear.

"The day was equally calm upon the Aisne, in the Champagne, as well as in the Argonne, upon the heights of the Meuse and in the Vosges."

Five Attacks Repulsed

The following official statement was issued Saturday night:

"The day has been very quiet. There has been nothing of interest to report, except that in the Woevre district, in the Eparges, five German attacks were executed in mass in the space of two hours and were stopped abruptly by the fire of our artillery."

Severe Weather Prevails.

Freezing weather has set in throughout the length of the battle zone in France and Belgium, the temperature yesterday varying between 25 and 28 degrees above zero, Fahrenheit.

Snow is falling, especially in northern France and also in Vosges mountains, and also at Marseilles.

SECURE ANOTHER SHIP FOR BELGIAN RELIEF

Doric Begins Loading At Once at Halifax WithFood and Clothing

MONTREAL, Nov. 21.--The relief work for the victims of the war in Belgium has secured free the collier "Doric" which will begin loading at Halifax to-day and will sail for Rotterdam about November 25th with over 200 carloads of food and clothing.

The last shipment made by the Central executive committee from Montreal for this steamer consists of 20 carloads of miscellaneous goods which left yesterday morning over I. C. R.

With the goods shipped by S.S. Tremorvah," on October 29th, which goods have safely arrived at Rotterdam, the total shipments made by Canada will amount to more than 7,000 tons at this date.

Besides the following separato shipments have been made from Montreal:

On October 10th, by S.S. Ascania, 50 lrage cases.

On October 22nd, by S.S. Campanello, 51 large cases.

On October 23rd, by S.S. Englishman, 78 large cases.

On October 28th, by S.S. Irishman, 49 large cases.

On October 31st by S. S. Manchester Corporation, 104 large cases, 100 bales of rice.

On November 5th, by S.S. Hesperian, 2083 bags potatoes.

On November 6th, by S.S. Megan- 50 large cases.

On November 19th, by S.S. Grampian, 75 large cases.

Excepting the shipment by Hesperian, these remittances are mainly of clothing sorted and repacked in the Montreal storing rooms of the Central executive committee.

The Central executive committee makes again an urgent appeal for donations in money with which wheat will be bought. The Central executive committee is negotiating for the chartering of 4,000 to 5,000 tons of space in one or two steamers. The chartering and the sailing of the steamer or steamers wil be announced in due time. On account of the early frost no more donations of perishable goods are required.

GLYCERINE EXPLOSION AT POWDER MILLS

(Candian Press Despatch)

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 23.—A nitroglycerine explosion at the Etna Powder Mills, four miles from Garry, Ind., this morning, broke hundreds of windows and put the electric lighting plant out of commission in that city, besides wrecking several farm houses. Two hundred employees were warned of the probability of an explosion by a leak in the oil tank, and fled to safety.

KAISER'S ARMY IN U. S.

New Yorker Says He Has 300,000 Men There

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The American says: "Germany has six army corps, equivalent to 300,000 officers and men, in this country already, and if she wins the present war, it will be our turn next."

Such was the statement made by John R. Drexel of this city, when he returned from Europe to-day on the White Star Line steamer Adriatic. He has spent most of the last two months in Viche, France, and declared he had a splendid opportunity to see the German fighting fachine at work.

"It is a wonderful machine, and is being very cleverly handled by the most astute group of men in the world, the German General Staff," he continued: "It is up to this government to take immediate steps to increase the strength of her standing army and to double our fleet.

"My brother, Anthony T. Drexel, is fighting with a French regiment. He was in London two days before I left, having brought home Lady Sarah Wilson, whose husband had been killed at Aisne. Lady Sarah up to that time had been with the Red Cross. Her husband's death and the terrible weather on the continent were responsible for her prostration.

"You are going to hear of more atrocities before the war is over, and some of them will be more horrible than anyone ever imagined.

WEDS ADOPTED DAUGHTER

Girl of 17 Mistress of Mansion She Entered as Foster-Child.

Seventeen-year-old Dorothy Breding, the pretty foster daughter of Severin A. Breding, a wealthy resident of Flatbush, whose friends have been the school children of the neighborhood, is now the mistress of the fine old homestead at 1,712 Ditmas Avenue. The girl, scarcely more than a child, was married in Chicago last march to Breding, who is forty years her senior and whose first wife, Dorothy's adopted mother, divorced him only a year ago.

News of the marriage has been gossiped about Flatbush for some weeks, but only yesterday was it admitted. Breding is on the Pacific coast traveling as a representative of the American Lawyers Company of 320 Broadway, Manhattan, and young Mrs. Breding is keeping house against his homecoming.

The First Canadian Navy List Contains Interesting Items

Ships and Commanding Officers of The Royal Canadian Navy

NEW SUBMARINES

Are Under Command of Lieut. St. V. Keyes and Bertrem Jones

OTTAWA, Nov. 20—The first "Canadian navy list" was published today by the Naval Service Department, and contains some interesting information relative to the ships of the Royal Canadian Navy. The flag officers are: Vice-Admiral Charles E. Kingsmill, director of the Naval Service; and Rear Admiral Wm. O. Story, R.N., superintendent of the Esquimalt Deck Yards.

The ships belonging to the Canadian Navy are the Diana, shore establishment at Halifax; the Niobe, a cruiser of 11,000 tons; the Rainbow, a light cruiser of 7,000 tons; the Shearwater, a sloop of 980 tons, at Esquimalt; and the Shearwater II., shore establishment.

There are thirteen Canadian fleet auxiliaries. The two submarines bought just before the opening of the war for the Pacific Coast waters are named "C.C. 1" and "C.C. 2." The former is in command of Lieut. Adriair St. V. Keyes, who is also named as commander of the submarine flotilla; while the other is in command of Lieut. Bertram E. Jones.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT

The police on Saturday evening were called to the Empire Cafe, where three young men were alleged to have been acting in a disorderly manner. The parties left the place when the police were called.

AN EXCELLENT DISCOURSE

"Lord Roberts, the Christian Soldier", was the subject of Rev. W. G. Clarke's discourse at the Tabernacle church last evening. A large congregation listened attentively to many incidents in the career of this famous general, the sketch as a whole being appreciately received. A finely rendered solo by Miss Pearl Davis, and a quartette selection by Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Nicholoson, Messrs Moorman and Schryver were well received.

INTOXICANTS DISPOSED OF

Joseph Hackett on a charge of drunkenness and being upon the prohibited list, had to pay a fine of $10 and costs. John Lanahan, another old offender, was fined $10 and costs or three months in jail. Being unable to pay the fine he went to jail. Andrew Stack for the first offence was allowed to go.

DEATH OF A YEOMAN

On Saturday afternoon, after being ill for some months, Mr. Jacob Henry Sager, a yeoman who resided in the 2nd concession of Ameliasburg Township, passed away. Deceased was 65 years of age, and died at the house where he was born. Mr. Sager was a man widely known and highly respected. For years he had been a faithful member of the methodist church. He was a member of the A. O. U. W. Society, under whose auspices the funeral took place this afternoon. A widow and one son, Henry of Ameliasburg, survive, also a brother, George F. DIED AT TRENTON

Mrs. Robert Stoutt, a lady upwards of 50 years of age, died on Saturday at Trenton. Deceased was the wife of a former resident of this city, and a lady who was much respected by all who knew her.

RELEASED, GOES TO FRONT

George Frederick, sentenced at Picton last year for four years in Kingston penitentiary has been released on parole in order that he may go to the front. Frederick came to Picton last week and joined the 16th Regiment. He had previously attended camp with the 16th. His representations to the Minister of Militia were referred to the Minister of Justice and to Police Magistrate Williams. The circumstances and Frederick's previous good record were guiding features in determining his release. McColl, also sentenced at Picton, has made a similar application.

Promotion For Belleville Boy

A letter received by Mr. and Mrs. P. J. M. Anderson of this city, from their son, Captain M. Anderson, who is at Salisbury Plains, England, conveys the intelligence which shows he has been promoted. He has been given command of one of the four double companies of 250 men each, attached to other companies. Four Lieutenants will be under him. The position is one of that of major, and his responsibilites have been increased two fold. Capt. Anderson was with the 35th Saskatchewan Rifles, and is an officer who is much respected by those under his command. The many friends of Percy in this city will be pleased to learn of his promotion, to which he is justly entitled.

Boy's Work Conference Notes

The reception to the delegates and address of welcome by Mayor Wills will be held in St. Andrews Church on Friday night, and not in Bridge St. Church as reported in Saturday's issue.

The delegates from the different local Sunday Schools are asked to meet at the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday night, at 8 o'clock, in order to practice songs and yells for the Saturday night banquet.

It is very desirous that reports re billeting be made to Mr. A. Blackburn, to Strouds, or to the Y.M.C.A. immediately. The committee wish to know how the matter of billeting stands.

A MESSAGE FROM CAPTAIN O'FLYNN

A cable was received from Captain O'Flynn this morning from London, where he was on a visit for the week end.

The many friends and relations of the boys at the Front from Belleville will be pleased to know that the boys are all well and busy at Bustard Camp preparing for the Front. The Captain sends greetings to his many friends.

WON'T MIX

Bad Food and Good Health Won't Mix.

The human stomach stands much abuse but it won't return good health if you give it bad food.

If you feed right you should feel right for proper food and a good mind is the sure road to health.

"A year ago I became much alarmed about my health for I began to suffer after each meal no matter how little I ate'" says a Western woman.

"I lost my appetite and the very thought of food grew distasteful with the result that I was not nourished and got weak and thin.

"My home cares were very heavy, for beside a large family of my own I have also to look out for an aged mother. There was no one to shoulder my household burdens, and come what might I must bear them, and this thought nearly drove me frantic when I realized that my health was breaking down.

"I read an article in the paper about some one with trouble like mine being helped by Grape-Nuts food and acting on this suggestion I gave Grape-Nuts a trial. The first dish of this delicious food proved that I had struck the right thing.

"My uncomfortable feelings in stomach disappeared as if by magic and in an incredibly short space of time I was myself again. Since then I have gained 12 pounds in weight through a summer of hard work and realize I am a very different woman, all due to the splendid food, Grape-Nuts." Name given by Canadian Postum Co. Windsor, Ont.

Read the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

OUR BOY'S CONCERT IN THE CITY HALL

Elaborate Preparations for Attractive Programme by the Fifteenth Regimental Band and Prominent Local Vocalists - A Worthy Cause That Should be Patronized by Our Citizens in General

The Fifteenth Regimental Band, assisted by Belleville's most prominent vocal talent, will give an extremely interesting concert in the City Hall tomorrow evening (Tuesday, Nov. 24), which, in point of excellence, as will be seen by the appended programme, is sure to equal any previous event of the season. Yet not alone is the personnel a factor of interest. The purpose for which the concert is arranged is worthy a packed house. Money is needed by the ladies to complete the bales being made up — one to Dr. Bodgetts, for the Red Cross Hospital, consisting of six kits filled with articles ranging from pajamas to tooth brushes for the wounded soldiers. These ladies have been paying the wives and mothers for making the pajamas, thus doing a double work, for which they require more money. Also, to Miss Plummer, they desire to send money and supplies, for those, she says, who have no comforts whatever, besides adding a small Christmas box for each one, if possible. Miss Plummer says England has all she can do to look after her soldiers. Canada must look after her own; so fill the hall on Tuesday evening, November 24th, at eight o'clock.

POLICE SECURE LOOT AND FIVE PRISONERS

MONTREAL, Nov. 21.—Thousands of dollars worth of stolen goods were received yesterday from a house at 188 St. Lawrence boulevard, and at the same time five men charged with burlarly and one charged with receiving, were captured by the detectives.

For a long time past the city has been terrorized by a bold band of burglars, who have entered stores and residences in all parts of the city. What most puzzled the police was that these goods could not be traced to second-hand stores as is usual with stolen articles, so it was impossible to secure any clue as to the identity of thieves.

It is months now since the men of the office became aware of the fact that a gang of clever burglars were operating in the city. Persistant watching of the second hand stores failed to give any clue to the identity of the burglars. Of late it had been remarked by some neighbors that a large and curious assortment of goods was constantly coming to No. 188 St. Lawrence Boulevard. These goods arrived in vans by night and were silently moved into the house. The police heard of the matter, watched for a few days and at last raided the establishment with the results mentioned.

MAKES THE GERMANS MAD

(Kingston Whig)

A New York resident just arrived in the city says that the British consul in New York is taking on men for recruiting purposes. The steamer Baltic, the New Yorker said, had taken over 3,000 men over on her last trip. Recruiting signs are displayed all over the city. Anyone who cares to get into the fight in Europe goes to the consulate and is there given a ticket for passage on a steamship. Arriving on the other side a uniform and the necessary equipment is issued them after they are sworn in. The Germans residents of New York are very angry about the plan but they could do the same if they had means to take the men across which they have not.

Tweed Has An Enthusiastic Rally

New Hall Filled With Loyal Residents--Belleville visitors Participate

Reeve Rollins presided over an audience on Friday night at the splendidly equipped new hall in Tweed, of which any Chairman might be proud. Enthusiastic, responsive and generous people of Tweed and vicinity gathered to complete organization and to listen to patriotic music and loyal speeches for two hours and a half, which were crowded full of harmony, eloquence and enthusiasm. The songs of Mr. Tuttle and Mr. Arthur Chapman were most appropriate and were encored again and again. Speeches by Reverend Mr. Coon, Dr. Bowlby, Mr. Newton, Sandy Grant, M.P.P., and other local men supplemented the addresses of Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, President of the Board of Trade, Mr. John Elliott and Colonel W. N. Ponton, K.C., of Belleville, the earnest and convincing words of all speakers appearing to touch the right spot and vibrate the right chord. The note of all was the ditty:

> "Though all we love depart
> The old commandants stand,
> In courage keep your heart,
> In strength lift up your hand."

The ladies of the Women's Institute should be congratulated upon the success of the gathering. Bountiful refreshments were served to all participating by the hospitable ladies of Tweed. These meetings which have now been held in nearly every part of the County except Deseronto have done much to draw together the City of Belleville and the County of Hastings, and to establish the unity of the community.

AVIATORS MADE RAID.

One Daring Englishman Captured By the Germans.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Nov. 23.—(Via Berlin, The Hague and London.) — Elaborate precautions which the Germans have taken for safety were responsible for the failure of three British aviators who on Saturday swooped down upon this city with the object of destroying with bombs the Zeppelin balloon works. Anti-aeroplane cannon and machine guns adapted to high angle fire defeated the accomplishment of the daring exploit and succeeded in bringing down one of the hostile machines and putting the other to flight.

The British airmen were first seen above Constance at two o'clock and their presence immediately was announced to the authorities at Friedrichshafen, the anti-balloon cannon and the machine guns which had been placed in readiness immediately opened fire. The Britishers circled above the balloon hall for some time and dropped six bombs, two of which came so near to the building as to cause apprehension among those watching the novel combat. Two other bombs struck houses in the city, damaging them severely and killing a man and wounding a woman.

One of the fliers then made a fearless attempt to cross the hall at a height of only a quarter of a mile. Bullets from the guns mounted on the tops of buildings, however, pierced the aeroplane's gasoline tank, causing the fuel to escape and forcing the pilot to attempt a glide to earth. During the descent of the machine the airman, a lieutenant of of the British Royal Naval Air Service named Briggs, threw two or three more bombs at the hangar, but they missed their mark.

The lieutenant, on reaching the ground, tried to defend himself with a revolver, but was captured by the employes of the Zeppelin wharf after receiving a slight wound in the head. The point where the aeroplane was landed was only 300 feet from the Zeppelin hall.

The other aviators disappeared across Lake Constance.

The wounded man is being treated at a local hospital.

At a Hallowe'en mask party in Lorain, Ohio, the principals of a mock wedding, Miss Harriet Reynolds and A. C. Swartz, surprised their friends by announcing that the marriage was real.

Condensed News Items For Busy Readers.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT

The police on Saturday evening were called to the Empire Cafe, where three young men were alleged to have been acting in a disorderly manner. The parties left the place when the police were called.

AN EXCELLENT DISCOURSE

"Lord Roberts, the Christian Soldier", was the subject of Rev. W. G. Clarke's discourse at the Tabernacle church last evening. A large congregation listened attentively to many incidents in the career of this famous general, the sketch as a whole being appreciately received. A finely rendered solo by Miss Pearl Davis, and a quartette selection by Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Nicholoson, Messrs Moorman and Schryver were well received.

INTOXICANTS DISPOSED OF

Joseph Hackett on a charge of drunkenness and being upon the prohibited list, had to pay a fine of $10 and costs. John Lanahan, another old offender, was fined $10 and costs or three months in jail. Being unable to pay the fine he went to jail. Andrew Stack for the first offence was allowed to go.

DEATH OF A YEOMAN

On Saturday afternoon, after being ill for some months, Mr. Jacob Henry Sager, a yeoman who resided in the 2nd concession of Ameliasburg Township, passed away. Deceased was 65 years of age, and died at the house where he was born. Mr. Sager was a man widely known and highly respected. For years he had been a faithful member of the methodist church. He was a member of the A. O. U. W. Society, under whose auspices the funeral took place this afternoon. A widow and one son, Henry of Ameliasburg, survive, also a brother, George F. Sager, and a sister Miss Alma, who lives in Ameliasburg, are living.

INJURED BY A RUNAWAY

Mr. James Rastrick, a resident of Tweed, was on Saturday evening here the victim of a runaway accident, which at the present time it is difficult to state what the result will be. The victim was driving a team of horses attached to a democrat, when they became unmanageable and ran away near the upper bridge Mr. Rastrick was thrown out and sustained painful injuries about the head and back. He was taken to the hospital, where he received medical attention. The injuries about the head are no of a serious nature, but it is feared Rastrick's back is seriously injured. The victim is a married man about 50 years of age.

CITY COUNCIL

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held this evening, at which some matters of importance will be discussed.

DIED AT TRENTON

Mrs. Robert Stoutt, a lady upwards of 50 years of age, died on Saturday at Trenton. Deceased was the wife of a former resident of this city, and a lady who was much respected by all who knew her.

RELEASED, GOES TO FRONT

George Frederick, sentenced at Picton last year for four years in Kingston penitentiary has been released on parole in order that he may go to the front. Frederick came to Picton last week and joined the 16th Regiment. He had previously attended camp with the 16th. His representations to the Minister of Militia were referred to the Minister of Justice and to Police Magistrate Williams. The circumstances and Frederick's previous good record were guiding features in determining his release. McColl, also sentenced at Picton, has made a similar application.

Promotion For Belleville Boy

A letter received by Mr. and Mrs. P. J. M. Anderson of this city, from their son, Captain M. Anderson, who is at Salisbury Plains, England, conveys the intelligence which shows he has been promoted. He has been given command of one of the four double companies of 250 men each, attached to other companies. Four Lieutenants will be under him. The position is one of that of major, and his responsibilites have been increased two fold. Capt. Anderson was with the 35th Saskatchewan Rifles, and is an officer who is much respected by those under his command. The many friends of Percy in this city will be pleased to learn of his promotion, to which he is justly entitled.

Boy's Work Conference Notes

The reception to the delegates and address of welcome by Mayor Wills will be held in St. Andrews Church on Friday night, and not in Bridge St. Church as reported in Saturday's issue.

The delegates from the different local Sunday Schools are asked to meet at the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday night, at 8 o'clock, in order to practice songs and yells for the Saturday night banquet.

It is very desirous that reports re billeting be made to Mr. A. Blackburn, to Strouds, or to the Y.M.C.A. immediately. The committee wish to know how the matter of billeting stands.

A MESSAGE FROM CAPTAIN O'FLYNN

A cable was received from Captain O'Flynn this morning from London, where he was on a visit for the week end.

The many friends and relations of the boys at the Front from Belleville will be pleased to know that the boys are all well and busy at Bustard Camp preparing for the Front. The Captain sends greetings to his many friends.

OUR BOY'S CONCERT IN THE CITY HALL

Elaborate Preparations for Attractive Programme by the Fifteenth Regimental Band and Prominent Local Vocalists - A Worthy Cause That Should be Patronized by Our Citizens in General

The Fifteenth Regimental Band, assisted by Belleville's most prominent vocal talent, will give an extremely interesting concert in the City Hall tomorrow evening (Tuesday, Nov. 24), which, in point of excellence, as will be seen by the appended programme, is sure to equal any previous event of the season. Yet not alone is the personnel a factor of interest. The purpose for which the concert is arranged is worthy a packed house. Money is needed by the ladies to complete the bales being made up — one to Dr. Hodgetts, for the Red Cross Hospital, consisting of six kits filled with articles ranging from pajamas to tooth brushes for the wounded soldiers. These ladies have been paying the wives and mothers for making the pajamas, thus doing a double work, for which they require more money. Also, to Miss Plummer, they desire to send money and supplies, for those, she says, who have no comforts whatever, besides adding a small Christmas box for each one, if possible. Miss Plummer says England has all she can do to look after her soldiers. Canada must look after her own; so fill the hall on Tuesday evening, November 24th, at eight o'clock.

Rev. A. M. Hubly of Emmanuel Church Delivers Eloquent Sermon on Life and Work of Late British General

By Rev. A. M. Hubly.

The Text—"The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord"—Ps. xxxvii: 23.

After interpreting the text as a great and exceeding precious promise Mr. Hubly said: "God is no respecter of persons. His overtures of mercy are not conditional upon place, nor occupation. They are free to the soldier on the field of battle in conflict with the physical foe of his earthly kingdom, as surely as they are to the warrior behind the sacred desk contending against the spiritual enemy of the Kingdom of God. As long as there are earthly kingdoms bounded by geographical lines and ruled by kings subject to unholy passions and love of power, there will be needed soldiers to fight for king and country, be the kingdom ever so righteous. This was proven from the teaching of both Jesus and John the Baptist. It seems difficult to think of the calling of a soldier apart from doing violence to men. Yet, there is a vast difference in killing men in righteous combat, and murdering by violent methods unlawful and unwarrantable." The preacher explained very succinctly how a good man can be a subject and soldier of both the heavenly and earthly kingdom and be loyal to each alike. This was proven by such men as Clive, Havelock, Vickers, Gordon and others, on Britain's honor roll, who as Christian soldiers won not only the praise of men, but the favor of the King of Kings—the hero of all heroes who laid down His life in defence of the principles of His kingdom, without which nothing is great, nothing is good. "These principles are the secret of England's greatness, and the secret of the greatness of every man whom England delights to honor."

Regarding the passing of Lord Roberts the preacher said: "We have a glorious [illegible]. He who divinely led safely his footsteps amidst the perils of war, along the banks of the Ganges and over the bullet-swept sands of India, and under a rain of shot and shell over kopje and veldt in the Land of the Southern Cross, no doubt led them in triumph through the everlasting doors into the City of Peace. We are becoming used to the noise of bursting explosives, the rattle of death-dealing machinery, the cry of the wounded and the sob of the dying. But above the roar of cannon, the clash of arms, and the shout of the warrior, another sound was heard! Was it a sigh? Was it a moan? No! It was a whisper, but it swept through the globe! It whispered satisfaction and peace—'I will not recover, but I die happy, being so near my beloved soldiers.' And so the aged Christian soldier put off his well-used sixty years of armor, and entered into rest—'For so He giveth His beloved sleep.' In the evening of a long day of life the soldier of the King heard "taps" and unscarred by sword, with no smell of powder, nor dust of battle upon his garments he composed himself to rest in peace until 'Reveille'! 'Bob,'s the name by which this great General was commonly called; a name easily spoken by infant lips, did not discount the dignity of the titles of honor which this hero of the Empire won; and bore with that lowly grace which breathes the odor of Him whose 'garments smell of myrrh, aloes and cassia,' who though King of Kings and Lord of Lords, stooped to the most humble service for the subjects of His Kingdom." The greatness of Lord Roberts was illustrated by incidents of his life as soldier and Christian, and by tributes to his worth by others. "He manifested a bravery that many valiant General would not dare to emulate. He was brave enough to bare his brown to the sunlight of heaven before his regiment on the field and pray to the God who was able to cover their heads in the day of battle for officers and men." Mr. Hubly quoted a part of the address made by Lord Roberts in Cape Town at the close of the Anglo-Boer War, in which he pleaded for the unity of Briton and Boer for the good and lasting peace of both races.

The sermon was concluded with the following panegyric: "We, though far from the place where our hero lies buried, bear testimony to his worth, and do honor to his memory, as one who believed in the Christian covenant which has the pillars of immutability to rest upon; he cast the anchor of his soul within the veil and safely out-rode the storms of life! As Field Marshal of the armies of England he found that the Christian religion was not a myth, but a real force which orders the footsteps of believers so that the Lord God Almighty is a strong refuge to which they always resort and find safety, and at last it will give them an entrance into the City of Peace!"

Napanee Reverses Decision Over Belleville--Down-Bay-Town Defeated High School on Saturday by Score of 12 to 9 --Belleville Failed to Take Advantage of Wind

At the Driving Park on Saturday afternoon the Napanee Collegiate Institute fourteen reversed the verdict of the Napanee game and defeated the Belleville High School by a score of 12 to 9. The game was productive of enough open play to keep the crowd of over 500 spectators thoroughly enthused, and in the dying moments of the last quarter, when the Belleville team only needed a touchdown to win, it was hard to keep the crowd in check. While individually the Belleville team were the heavier and had more trick plays, they lost the game because they did not kick when the wind was in their backs. The Napanee team has practised faithfully, and with three or four changes in the line up, including Oldham, the St. Andrews man, at centre half, put up a great game. The line up:

Belleville—Irwin, flying wing; Nurse, left half; H Rogers, right half; Morden, centre half; Wrightmyer, quarter; Horrie, scrimage; Redner, scrimmage; Strugess, scrimmage; Grant, outside; Green outside; Brown inside; Haines, inside; A. Rogers, middle; Gribble, middle.

Referee, E. F. Chapman, Belleville. Umpire, J. W. Soby, Napanee. Timekeepers, Mr. McLaurin and Mr. Knight. Linesmen, Ketcheson and Erle.

How The Points Were Scored

The game was far from being a walkover at any stage, though the visitors were leading at three-quarter time by 12 to 1. The Belleville team did not gain as much on their line plunges as in Napanee. There was no scoring in the first quarter. The Napanee team did not have to rely on the wing men so much as in the Napanee game, owing to the apearance of Oldham in the line-up, a man who directed the plays as well as carrying the ball brilliantly. Morden and Nurse shared with Oldham the individual honors of the day. Oldham, in additon to using his team's small but useful catalogue of plays when they would do the most good, passed faultlessly to his half-backs, and found time to pull off a 25 yard run for a touch as well as kicking for two ranges and gaining a touchdown on misjudgment of Rogers.

In the second quarter Morden kicked to Oldham, who was forced to range for the only point of the first half. In the third quarter Napanee kicked to great advantage. Rogers let one get away from him and a Napanee man dropped on it behind the line. Napanee kept on kicking and at the end of the third quarter the score was 12 to 1 in favor of Napanee. In the final period Belleville kicked considerably but not enough. Too much time was taken up in line plunges by Haines, and although he is not particularly fast is hard to bring down, and once under way is as hard to stop as Smirlie Lawson, the "Human Freight Train" of the Argos, and the efforts of Napanee to retard his progress was pitufl. Haines was bucked over in the final quarter for a touchdown, but after the kick-of the home team, tried to buck it the length of the field instead of kicking and using the wind. For some reason or other the Belleville team fumbled the ball. Time and again the men, instead of running it back or returning the kick, being downed in their tracks. Napanee took advantage of this and itnvariably gained much ground on the exchanging of points. Nurse tried two field goals, which narowly missed the bar. McKay, for Napanee, in the last quarter made a run for 35 yards, which kept the Belleville team from scoring. Except for a couple of offsides the officials had a fairly easy afternoon, rough work being conspicuous by its absence.

Irwin and Grant were as usual always in the thick of the battle, Irwin especially excelling himself by brilliant following up. The best tackle of the day was made by Root, when he brought Oldham down behind his line in the last quarter.

After the game the teams availed themselves of the kindness of the Y. M. C. A., which placed the shower baths and swimming pool at the teams' convenience.

A very nice banquet was given in the domestic science building, under the supervision of Miss Templeton, who had her class of girls to serve.

The two ladies' basketball teams were present, as well as Mr. Stillwell, captain of the Albert rugby team Mr. McLaurin acted as toastmaker. Complimenting the team upon their success, he called upon Mr. Allison, who appropriately proposed the toast to the King. Mr. Irwin proposed the toast to the Empire, one of the most concise and brilliant kind. Mr. Haines reponded in a fitting manner. Captain Stanley Nurse proposed the toast to the visiting teams in a very pleasing and sportsmanlike way. Captain Selby was absent and the Napane team did not respond. Captain Stillwell of Albert College replied in a complimentary way. Perhaps the saddest and hardest toast was handled by Mr. James very creditably, that of "To the boys at the Front." Ralph Morden proposed the toast to the ladies' basketball teams, and although he now and then gets the signals crossed in a rugby game he was in his element in giving this toast. Miss Norah Elliott, captain of the seniors, replied in her usual genial manner, complimenting the teams upon their successes, and also spoke very complimentary of Miss Guest, the coach of the basketball teams, who has been mainly instrumental in the success that the teams have attained. Miss Collings responded on behalf of the juniors.

Hugh Rogers proposed the toast to Miss Templeton and her class who so generously supplied the refreshments.

The company then adjourned to the assembly room, where Mrs. McLaurin and Messrs. Haines and Irwin rendered some vocal selections, and a very enjoyable dance was held.

Sacred Concert At Opera House

The Fifteenth Regimental Band gave their second sacred Sunday night concert last night in Griffin's Opera House. Judging from the large number present and the applause with which every number was received, these concerts have already become very popular and are keenly enjoyed from beginning to end.

The Fifteenth Regimental Band deserves the patronage of every citizen of Belleville. Bandmaster Hinchey and the members of this organization are to be congratulated upon the rapid strides they have taken in making this band one of the finest in Ontario.

Worthy of mention was the number by the band "Sunshine and Roses," with a cornet solo by Mr. Albert Wannacot.

The St. Andrew's Male Quartette, composed of Messrs. Wrightmeyer, Brown, Stallworthy and Dulmage were present with their selection, "When the Years are Rolling By." They responded to an encore, singing "Blue Galilee." Mr. Sanford Burrow's fine baritone voice was heard to great advantage in "Lead Kindly Light."

The following programme was, to say the least, greatly enjoyed by every one present and no doubt the attendance at the next sacred concert will be larger than ever.

FEARED THE FILM WOULD SHOW HIM

Set a camera to catch a thief—especially a moving picture camera.

Recently, in Memphis, Tenn., an envelope containing $450 was stolen from a young woman cashier of an auto company. She had gone to the bank to deposit the money, and while waiting for the teller to attend to her became interested in some movie people who had come to take a scene showing a bride and groom making their first deposit. When she turned back to the wicket to conclude her business with the bank the money was gone.

Detectives found no clue, but the motion picture incident, together with the plan that had been made to catch the chief were immediately published. An hour later two business men returned the money to the cashier, explaining that it had been taken by an employee of theirs by mistake and that the young man was afraid that the film might reveal him.

A girl's easier way to catch a man is by pretending to run away from

NICKEL

If the exportation of Nickel has not been declared a contraband of war, and its exportation forbidden, it ought to have been, and that, too, when it was first discovered in Canada. The attention of the Canadian Government and also that of the English Government was called at the time of its discovery to the important factor which Nickel played in the construction of war vessels, and the necessity of the whole output being secured by the naval department in England, as France at that time was the only country where it could be found in quality and quantity to be of any use. True, Nickel had been discovered in California, but not in quantity or quality to be of any commercial or national value. No action was taken to prevent foreign nations from securing this valuable mineral, hence, Germany, knowing its value in strengthening its ships, took advantage of the situation, secured an interest through Krupps in the refinery of New Jersey where out Nickel has been sent, refined and utilized by Krupps in the strengthening of German warships that that company has for years been building for the country with which we are now at war.

The Journal of Commerce, published in Montreal, has called attention to the importance of preventing this valuable ore from being secured by Germany, and points out that "our nickel goes, not directly to Germany, but to a refinery in New Jersey, in which the Krupps own stock. In other words, we are supplying the Krupps with nickel with which to strengthen the ships they use in fighting Great Britain and her allies. The Journal of Commerce proceeds:

"Since the question was brought prominently to public attention a few weeks ago, a step has been taken at Ottawa which may lead some people to imagine that no further harm can be done. An order-in-Council has been passed prohibiting the export of nickel from Canada to Germany or the enemy countries. But this order does not meet the case. No nickel has been sent from Canada to Germany. There are no nickel refineries in Germany. The Krupps have their interest in the refinery in New Jersey. The nickel in the "matte" shape goes from Canada to New Jersey, where the refining takes place, and from the American refinery to Germany, and to any other country wanting it. That has been the course of the business in the past; that is the course now, and the new order-in-Council, forbidding the export of nickel from Canada to Germany, does not touch the case at all. So far as the public can see, Germany is as free today as she ever was to take Canadian nickel and use it in her warfare against the British Empire. We send our soldiers to fight for the Empire, and we send our nickel to help the Germans make war upon us."

The Government should act, and that, too, promptly.

TOO PRACTICAL TO BE IGNORED

The women of Canada are not only endorsing but actively backing up the movement to buy Made-in-Canada goods. Why? Not because women are more patriotic than men — though sometimes they seem to be. It is because in the actual business of life, when it comes to buying for the family and the household, women are more practical than men. It is all right to be patriotic as long as at the same we are practical.

Buying goods made in this country by Canadian labor is a patriotic and common-sense business. Buying goods made in Canada without the handicap of a duty is a practical matter of better value for the same money. Women are the natural warders of the household treasury. Some men doubt this and take it for granted that women are naturally spenders. So they are. But the wisest women in this country are those who succeed in making a little money go a long way. Money spent for goods made in Canada looks like a wise policy to the average sensible woman, because she knows that the same amount of money spent for such goods gets better value or more goods, because the foreign-made article must tax the consumer the amount of the duty before he can begin to compete in value with the Canadian product. And the women of Canada are too wise to give away thirty per cent. of a bonus on the cost of the goods. The buy-made-in-Canada movement is too much of a money-saver to be ignored by the practical

SAFETY FIRST FOR LIBERALS

The Laurier newspapers continue to indulge in more or less covert criticism of the Government, after shouting loudly for a truce and hotly declaring that anyone who broke the said solemn truce would be a criminal. That is the old, old Liberal game. They begged for a party truce in order that they might be saved from the consequences of their own policy. Nothing in the nature of a formal truce was forthcoming, but the Government gave the Opposition a chance to do the decent thing. For a while the Opposition behaved well — in Parliament. They promised to support all Government legislation without criticism, and only broke the promise once or twice. Since then the Grit press has been busily engaged in "sneaking in" little nastinesses while calling out "truce" and claiming protection under it. Here is a sample from the Montreal Herald, of which Hon. George P. Graham is president:—

"We hope the public have duly appreciated the reassuring announcement from Ottawa this week, following upon the story of German activity in the Pacific. The fear had been expressed that the German corsairs might make a rail upon the Pacific Coast, but Ottawa tells us that there is no need to worry on this score, as two powerful Japanese cruisers are attached to the Esquimault station in addition to H.M.C.S. Rainbow and the two Canadian submarines hastily purchased by Canada at the outbreak of the war.

"Japan's loyal and whole-hearted support of Great Britain shows how honorably and faithfully she interprets the terms of her alliance, and shows, too, that she knows how to be grateful for the invaluable support Britain has rendered her in the most crucial periods of her national career. She is now placing Canada under a special obligation to her, and we are sure Canadians will not readily forget the protection she is affording. In the meantime Conservative politicians in Canada, who surely could never have anticipated that the time would come when Ottawa would inform the Canadian public that Canada has nothing to fear on the Pacific because the Japanese are guarding the coast will doubtless do some furious thinking in regard to Canada's naval policy."

This furious thinking may well be anticipated. There has been a lot of furious thinking already by Canadians ever since the Liberal determination to hold out against any share in Imperial naval defence became manifest. The writer of the Herald editorial conveniently forgets that when the Admiralty in 1909 suggested a strong force on the Pacific, to be provided by Canada, Australia and New Zealand, with the co-operation of the Mother Country, Canada, in the person of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, refused to have anything to do with such a scheme. The Admiralty suggested a fleet unit each from Canada and Australia. Australia accepted the proposal and Laurier refused.

Even when the little Laurier navy was proposed under the Naval Service Act of 1910, providing for less than the Admiralty experts suggested, something might have been done. But the Laurier Government did not even carry out their own policy, and they went out of office in the latter part of 1911 without having let the contract for a single ship. Furious thinking? Well, rather.

WHY WE SAID IT

The Peterborough Review wants to know why the Montreal Daily Mail described a recent editorial effusion of The Toronto Globe as "one solid column of froth." We will inform our contemporary.

Since the outbreak of the present war, The Toronto Globe has given vent to such an avalanche of sickly, sentimental slobbering, doddering imbecility and hysterical nonsense as never before flowed from a Canadian newspaper office.

If the reading public of Toronto suddenly went mad, an unprejudiced and conscientious jury would convict The Toronto Globe of conniving at that result on circumstantial evidence found in its editorial columns.

At a time of serious national crisis, when sober common sense was urgently needed, The Globe has lent its influence to the creation of a morbid feeling of bewilderment on the part of the reading public which is its victim.

As all who have followed the Globe in the past are aware, the newspaper was as far astray as it could be regarding the question of a European war. As the official organ in Canada of the Brotherhood of Man, it did its duty by denying the possibility of any futrue war in Europe and calling upon every English-speaking nation to disarm. The outbreak of war naturally caused The Globe to paw the air, so to speak.

Instead of recovering itself, it continued to paw the air, and is doing so now.
riotic duties of the time to brand The
We conceive it to be one o fthe pat-
Toronto Globe. We can think of no greater misfortune for the country than to have the absurd and mischievous doctrines emitted by that organ circulated about without being held up to the light of reason so that their shallowness may be noted and their value discounted accordingly.

We desire to do our part in forcing The Toronto Globe to declare itself a sell this country to the first warring nation that chooses to take advantage of the fruits of The Globe's imbecile policy, or to do our part in reducing the influence of The Globe to a measure commensurate with its value.

We make no apology for our attacks upon The Toronto Globe and its editor. We believe it to be the "mouth organ" in the journalistic orchestra of this country.

In preaching a doctrine of peace which it knows is absurd under existing conditions, The Toronto Globe has forfeited the respect and confidence of the Canadian people. We refuse to believe that any normal man sane enough to hold a pen could be guilty of seriously putting forward the ideas that have come from The Globe since the war began.

In the specific article to which The Peterborough Review refers, every nonsensical delusion of The Globe and all the weakness of its ridiculous attitudes are excellently portrayed. It is a whine and a whimper, as undignified as unnecessary, in which the writer endeavors to represent the agony of a man who wants to volunteer for the war and who doesn't.

The Peterborough Review need not worry about The Toronto Globe. The Toronto Globe is the party to do the worrying!—Montreal Daily Mail.

CURRENT COMMENT

There is a suspecian that most of the pleased expressions at a classical concert are forced.

We may get an idea of the wealth of the contending countries in Europe by the ease with which large loans are marketed.

The most descriptive metaphorical woman in the world lives in Chicago and she says her husband is as lazy as an Alderman.

It appears that a great many Canadians have found the Literary Digest too indigestible since the war began, and they can't stomach it.—Hamilton Herald.

The Boston Journal remarks that "the United States is a nation of money changers, governed by saloon keepers." The editor must be a pro-German or else has indigestion.

Nobody loves a fat man, but a French private who was promoted for bravery in battle frankly admits that he is too fat to lie down even in the face of the enemy's fire.

So anxious is the British government to have dyestuffs manufactured in England that it has agreed to take a part of the capital stock and guarantee for ten years the interest on the bonds of a company that will take up this work. It should not be difficult to organize a company under these conditions.

WAR NOTES

The London Morning Post's Rome correspondent says the Austrian-Lloyd steamer Metkovich has struck a mine off the Dalmatian coast and foundered.

Nearly 400 kinds of articles have been declared non-exportable by neutral European countries and are on their embargo lists, as made public by the State Department at Washington.

The German losses are the subject of an article by the Berlin correspondent of Handelsbad, dated November 17. He describes the frightful toll the war has taken on the German army, and says some commanders of regiments announce the deaths of thirty brother officers on the active and reserve lists. The correspondent visited the war school in Dorotheenstrasse, where the walls were plastered with the latest casualty lists containing tens of thousands of names. In Muelhausen alone, a town of about 100,000, widows more than before the war began.

The Temps correspondent at Copenhagen repeats from the Danish frontier a telegram saying that Krupps has increased its capital by 70,000,000 marks to a total of 250,000,000 marks in order to build new factories to execute the enormous military orders of the Government, and to equip the ninety-nine army corps, four millions of men, now known to be in the field.

An appeal has been issued from London on behalf of the Central Committee of the National Patriotic Organizations signed by Premier Asquith, the president; Lord Rosebery, Right Hon. A. J. Balfour and Waldorf Astor. It says among other things: "Come what may, there must be no weakening, no wavering, no patched-up truce that would expose our children to a revival of the German menace."

The Klinische Wochenschrift, a Vienna medical journal, says: "Cholera, imported direct from the seat of war, especially Galicia, has spread over more than one hundred localities in Austria-Hungary. In October nearly 200 cases occurred, independent of those cared for near the battlefields. From October 21 to October 28, a total of 650 fresh cases of Asiatic cholera, all bacteriologically investigated, were officially announced."

CHILD BORN WITH HARD COLD

Remarkable Statement of Girl's Mother. How She Suffered Until Six Years Old. How Finally Cured.

Pittsfield, Mass.—"My little girl now six years old was born with a hard cold and very delicate. Every winter she would suffer from croup and poor digestion. Dr. Currier recommended Vinol and within a week she had improved considerably, and her appetite increased so she wanted things to eat that had disgusted her before.

"On the first bottle she gained one and one-half pounds, and now at the age of six Vinol has made her a solid, healthy, good-natured child, and while sick she was so cross and fretful I grew discouraged and was worn out taking care of her."—Mrs. GEORGE WAGNER, Pittsfield, Mass.

Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, is a wonderful appetizer, and you can see delicate, ailing children improve day by day under its use. It enriches the blood, builds up the body, making pale, delicate children rugged and rosy.

We ask all parents of weak, sickly, delicate children in this vicinity to try Vinol, with the understanding that if it fails to benefit your little ones, we return your money.
